SIR CHARLES LYTTTELTON.

MY LORD,

London, July 2<sup>d</sup>, 1681.

* * * * *

This morning, y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>s</sup> surprized every body that is not a Privy Counsellor by coming by 8 a clock to town, and sat immediately in councill. The matter was, my Lord Shaftsbury was seized by a Sarjeant at Armes (M<sup>r</sup> Deerham) this morning in his bed and brought to y<sup>e</sup> Councill, and, after having bine examined, was committed to y<sup>e</sup> Tower upon a warrant of high treason, w<sup>ch</sup> was sworn agst him by four persons. The Judges were sent for to y<sup>e</sup> Councill, and they all declared w<sup>ht</sup> was sworn agst him to be high treason. The persons that have sworn are one Haynes,<sup>a</sup> who my Lord Shaftsbury had so much appeared to get a pardon for, one Rouse,<sup>b</sup> formerly a clerk, as I heare, to S<sup>r</sup> Thomas Player, and Turbervill, and another<sup>c</sup> I know not. They say, too, that Turberville has sworn that all he sayd of my L<sup>d</sup> Stafford was fals. They talk too that Dugdale is come in, too, to sweare on that side. It was sayd that there are warrants out for severall others. My L<sup>d</sup> of Essex was named; but I beleeve there is no such thing as to him, because I saw my Lord goe out of town this afternoone towards his own house, wth 5 or 6 of servants wth him on horsback; and I beleeve, by his equipage, he came to town but this morning. The King returned to Windsor after dinner.

Plunket<sup>a</sup> and Fitzharris<sup>b</sup> were both executed yesterday. Plunket is generally pittied and beleevd to dye very innocent of w<sup>ht</sup> he was condemned. Fitzharris left a paper behind him to be given to his wife, in w<sup>ch</sup>, I heard the K<sup>s</sup> say, he says that w<sup>ht</sup> he sayd in his examination before y<sup>e</sup> 2 sherri<sup>ffs</sup>, when he was first taken, was dictated to him by the sherri<sup>ffs</sup>, that is, as to y<sup>e</sup> Queen, y<sup>e</sup> Duke, my Lord Danby, and y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>s</sup> himself.

WILLIAM LONGUEVILLE.

MY LORD,

9 July [1681].

Yesterday the bill of enditement ag<sup>t</sup> Colledge<sup>c</sup> was preferred to y<sup>e</sup> grand jury at old Baily; and Dugdale, Smith,<sup>d</sup> Haynes, and Macknamara, as also S<sup>r</sup> W<sup>m</sup> Jennings, were witnesses of his declaring a plott ag<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> King at Oxford, and of his professing treasonable designes, &c.; w<sup>ch</sup> being heard in y<sup>e</sup> court, y<sup>e</sup> jury did afterwards catechise in private, but on what grounds satisfied I have not yett

SIR CHARLES LYTTTELTON.

MY LORD,

London, August 2<sup>d</sup>, 1681.

THE COUNTESS OF MANCHESTER.

Whitehall, Aug. 2 [1681].

Haveinge recieved soe lately from my neice y<sup>e</sup> account of her miscarriage I hoped the danger had bine quite over, w<sup>ch</sup> gave mee y<sup>e</sup> greater surprise when I found by your L<sup>dsp</sup> letter she had bine soe very dangerously ill. She is of soe thinn and delicate a constitution, that I shall be very impatient untill I heare y<sup>e</sup> hopes you give mee in the later part of yours of her recoverie againe confirm'd. I pray God she may live, and, in His time, bring a son into your familly, tho I shall hope she will gaine a perfitt health before she proove wth childe. Your L<sup>dsp</sup> care and kindness she hath soe often founde, that all must be fully sattisfied nothing could bee wantinge was to be had in order to helpe. Wee have lost lately soe many relations out of this family, I cannot but be frighted wth the least rumore of illness in one soe very neare unto mee, and for whom I have soe tender an affectione, w<sup>ch</sup> she justly merriitts from mee.

I came wth my L<sup>d</sup> last weeke to this place, and designe wthing two dayes to returne to Leez. His bisnes was to take Epsom watters, that he might not grow to fatt, and to buy some little mourninge, made mee take this oppertunitie. The towne is very unpleasent, and y<sup>e</sup> small pox very mortall, besides a most dangerous feaver of w<sup>ch</sup> many dye in few dayes.

The Prince of Orange came to Arlington house one Thursday night. The two sheriffs waitted upon him and invitted him to dynere to my L<sup>d</sup> Mayor on Satterday, wher was a very great enter-tanem<sup>t</sup> designed. One Friday night my L<sup>d</sup> Hallifax, L<sup>d</sup> Hide, M<sup>r</sup> Semour, was wth him [and] very much importuned him not to goe, but, not saying they came from y<sup>e</sup> King to him, he continued resolved to goe; at w<sup>ch</sup>, M<sup>r</sup> Semore goeing that night to Windsor, the next morning the King sent y<sup>e</sup> Prince a letter and comand to y<sup>e</sup> contraie, and that he should come to Windsor. Thus, att ten a cloke, the Prince sent his secretarie wth y<sup>e</sup> letter to my L<sup>d</sup> Mayor, and soe the feast and citty ladyes in all ther glory was disapointed. He went away to Windsor; but this is all y<sup>e</sup> discours. He goeth some time this weeke away. Here is nothinge more, and I shall conclude this trouble by begging your L<sup>d</sup><sup>sp</sup> to believe I am,

My L<sup>d</sup>, your faithfull servant,

A. M.

Lady Ogle, 'tis said, will certainly marrie M<sup>r</sup> Thinn, if it be not already done. The young La: Rochester<sup>a</sup> is dead suddenly of an apoplexie.

---

WILLIAM LONGUEVILLE.

MY LORD,

[30 Aug. 1681].

Your asse was one of y<sup>e</sup> best my wife thinkes that ever shee mett with, and I hope shee will give my Lady an account of y<sup>e</sup> favour in sparing of it by all possible acknowledgm<sup>ts</sup> and by taking care to shew her amendm<sup>ts</sup> very soone after y<sup>e</sup> using of this milke.

I have beene at Putney all this day almost, and so want y<sup>e</sup> news of y<sup>e</sup> noone (if any bee). 'Twas last night agreed D<sup>r</sup> Oates had left Whitehall, but whither of himselfe or turnd out some few made a doubt. Earle of Gerrard or Macclesfield was dismissed y<sup>e</sup> bed-chamber, but of y<sup>e</sup> Earle of Manch[ester] it is a quary as yett. Y<sup>e</sup> L<sup>d</sup> Mordaunt is restored to y<sup>e</sup> King's favour. L<sup>d</sup> Conway (a 6 weekes widdower) hath marryed againe, and 'tis one M<sup>rs</sup> Stowell and 15000<sup>li</sup>, if report say true.<sup>a</sup> The Cockpitt hee hath taken of y<sup>e</sup> Earle of Danby. Some 3 bills were (or were like to bee) found at y<sup>e</sup> sessions in being, viz. against Whittaker, Rous, and y<sup>e</sup> foreman of y<sup>e</sup> jury w<sup>ch</sup> would not find Colledge his bill. His name I forgett; and 'tis thought y<sup>e</sup> pollicy herein is to render them fitt for the London petty juries, by w<sup>ch</sup> Colledge w<sup>d</sup> scarce have been cast. Y<sup>e</sup> poore fellow is not like to live longer then too morrow. Duke Lauderdale is ill of a feaver and sent for D<sup>rs</sup> hence too day. Some say Ch: Just: Pemberton is not easy in his place<sup>b</sup>; y<sup>t</sup> his Ma<sup>ty</sup> meanes not for Newmarket; and y<sup>t</sup> a speciall commission of oyer, &c. shall bee for y<sup>e</sup> L<sup>ds</sup> indictments. I present my wives most humble thanks and service to your Lo<sup>p</sup> and my Lady and also the like from,

My Lord,

Your Lo<sup>ps</sup> ever obedient servant,

SIR CHARLES LYTTTELTON.

MY LORD,

London, Octo<sup>br</sup> 11th, [16]81.

* * * * *

I am sorry to heare you have no other thoughts of coming hither but upon y<sup>e</sup> tryall of y<sup>e</sup> Lords, w<sup>ch</sup> I doe not heare anything so much sayd of as to conclude when that may bee. It has bine much talked of, as if my Lord Shaftsbury was offred to be set at liberty, if he would but promise to retire to his house in Dorsetshire; and Thom Thinne told mee, the other day, at Richmond (who, by y<sup>e</sup> way, lyes there to be w<sup>thin</sup> y<sup>e</sup> sent of my Lady Ogle, for he does not yet visit her, nor is like to doe so, till she comes hither, w<sup>ch</sup> will be the last of this month, when her mourning is out. Y<sup>e</sup> next day sheele open her doores to all pretenders; tho' I think it is scarce to be doubted but she has entertained M<sup>r</sup> Thin's addresses by 3<sup>d</sup> hands, and is too farr ingaged to him to receive any other), that his house was making ready to receive him there. But I am told from one that best knows, my L<sup>d</sup> would be well content to take a further journey to be quit of y<sup>e</sup> Tower; and that he has offred to goe to Carolina<sup>a</sup> upon those termes, and has bine refused. And the King says, if it were any body els, tho' he knew he were guilty and c<sup>d</sup> prove it upon him, he could grant w<sup>ht</sup> he desires, but to him he knowes that if he sh<sup>d</sup>, he w<sup>d</sup> say y<sup>e</sup> condition was exacted from him and that it was a force put on him.

THE SAME.

MY LORD,

London, No<sup>br</sup> 10, [16]81.

* * * * *

My Lady Ogle went up yesterday wth her grandmother to y<sup>e</sup> old Change, and there slipt from her, and 'tis not yet known who is gone wth her, nor whither she is gone. But, last night, Dick Bret came to y<sup>e</sup> King and told him hee had waited on him before to acquaint his Ma<sup>ty</sup> that she was not married to M<sup>r</sup> Thin, but now he was come to tell him she is married to him. The King sayd she had bine unworthily and basely betrayd by her friends. They say she raild much at them of late to some she durst trust, in that they have abused her in making her beleve he had 20,000 a yeare, was of a better family, and but 23 yeares old. He has never layn wth her since he was married, not so much as spoken to her, nay, scarce seen her, and says she never will. Besides, I heere my Lady Trevor will prosecute him as married to her daughter, and says she can prove it.<sup>a</sup> If it be but a contract, they say 'twill breake y<sup>e</sup> marriage wth Lady Ogle. They say y<sup>t</sup> Thinne has given bonds for vast summes of mony to her friends upon this account. Dick Bret and Harry Howard, they say, are deepe in, and they talk of others, who I dare not name for feare of y<sup>e</sup> statute; but I beleve that's a scandall.

It's a greate secret yet, but I am told that my Lady Portsmouth is shortly going into France for her health.

The King dined to-day aboard y<sup>e</sup> Mordaunt.

THE SAME.

MY LORD,

No. 22, [16]81.

* * * * *

Tis expected that y bill of my Lord Shafts. will be brought to y<sup>e</sup> grand jury a Thursday; but tis such a return of a jury that one can hardly expect anything but ignoramus from them. I was told to day that it has bine considered ab<sup>t</sup> bringing the bill into y<sup>e</sup> Marshals court; but I beleve there is nothing in it.

We have had a greate deale of puther and bloody threatenings about a paper set up in the coffee house, but no fighting; and I belceve they are come of a little dully.

There is one of the finest poems come out of Absolon and Achitophel that ever you read, wherein there is a greate many charracters of all y<sup>e</sup> great men of both sides. Pray send for it. Tis Dreydon's they say; and no doubt, upon y<sup>e</sup> presumption, some body will fall upon him.<sup>a</sup>

A chambermaid of my wife's, a very homely wench, is to be married a Thursday to one S<sup>r</sup> William Milward, a man of 800<sup>li</sup> a yeare. I am heartily sorry to heare my Lady is not well. I feare Kirby is too moist for y<sup>e</sup> winter season for so delicate a complexion.

THE SAME.

MY LORD,

No. 29, [16]81.

My Lord Sh[afterbury] is bayled, and all the others, Howard, Willmore, and Whitacre.<sup>b</sup> My L<sup>d</sup> Sh., after, went y<sup>e</sup> back way very privately home, whither out of modesty not to shew himself to y<sup>e</sup> populace, or that he thought they were prevented by y<sup>e</sup> strict order my L<sup>d</sup> Mayor had taken to prevent all seditious concours of y<sup>e</sup> people, is a question. There is a very lying partiall acc<sup>t</sup> come out of y<sup>e</sup> proceedings at y<sup>e</sup> Old Baily; but there will be one very suddenly by authority, w<sup>ch</sup> c<sup>d</sup> not so soone passe y<sup>e</sup> presse, because the judges are to examine it, and they are too busy at this time. It's beleev'd wee shall have a parlim<sup>t</sup> and an act of oblivion pass to quiet all.

<sup>a</sup> The endgelling which Dryden had got in December, 1679, was still fresh in people's memory. Rochester had been roughly handled in the "Essay on Satire," the joint production of Dryden and Mulgrave, and took his revenge in this way.

THE SAME.

MY LORD,

London, Dec. 6, [16]81.

I begin to be of y<sup>r</sup> opinion, as to the parlimt. and y<sup>e</sup> act of oblivion; and the rather, because I have a little more then ordinary reason to beleeve y<sup>e</sup> Duke will be sent for.

Y<sup>e</sup> Du<sup>sse</sup> of Portsmth does certainly goe into France after X<sup>t</sup>masse, and, tho' it be by advise of her phizitians, yet she is in doubt, it's sayd, she shan't return. But, to confirm her to y<sup>e</sup> contrary and of the King's constant goodnesse towards her, my Lord Hallifax is lately reconciled to her interest, at least so farr as to visit her and attend y<sup>e</sup> King in her lodgings, w<sup>ch</sup> formerly he never would, and this too, they say, by y<sup>e</sup> King's possitive command. And as a further and more unquestionable prooffe of her power, her son<sup>a</sup> is declared Master of the Hors, and Oglethorp<sup>b</sup> is in Armstrong's place; w<sup>ch</sup> puts y<sup>e</sup> D. of Mon: too beyond all hopes of being ever restored, so he must be either Cesar aut nullus. I was told by one lately, as an argument of his being very low in pocket, that his fine set of coach horses were offred to be sold to y<sup>e</sup> person y<sup>t</sup> told it mee.

I am sorry y<sup>r</sup> brother is so ill in his affaires, and doubt he may loose his company by his conduct, and see no remedy.

The person you have sent for to y<sup>r</sup> daughter is y<sup>e</sup> same Charlot would have recommended, and is a very ingenuous young woman and draws finely.

My L<sup>d</sup> Grafton <sup>a</sup> has y<sup>e</sup> command of y<sup>e</sup> Guards,<sup>b</sup> in Russells place too, and I heare he has 6000<sup>li</sup> for it.

THE SAME.

MY LORD,

Jan. 3<sup>d</sup>, 1681[2].

I shall send my trunks aboard y<sup>e</sup> yach a Thursday, and in 3 or 4 days I hope at furthest wee may sayle. The Duke of Monmth and L<sup>d</sup> Sunderland are both forbid to come into Whitehall, and the King has told M<sup>r</sup> May<sup>c</sup> and some others that they must forbear their company or not come into his presence.

My L<sup>d</sup> Sunderland used to come to y<sup>e</sup> Duchess of Portsmouth, when y<sup>e</sup> King sat down to dinner; so yesterday, when he came, the Duchesse delivered that message herself and sent her woman to my Lady Sunderland,<sup>a</sup> that she should be glad if she met her in a third place, but that the K<sup>g</sup> had commanded her not to see her in her own lodgings. Y<sup>e</sup> D. of Mon: used to come to M<sup>rs</sup> Crofts<sup>e</sup> lodgings at night.

There has bine severall angry messages passd between the D. of Albemarle and y<sup>e</sup> D. of Monmth, about words the D. of M. sh<sup>d</sup> say concerning the troope of Guards; and they say that y<sup>e</sup> D. of Albemarle would have made a quarrell to bring it to a duel, but y<sup>e</sup> Duke avoyded it.

George Leg has his com<sup>n</sup> for Master this day.<sup>f</sup>

I am in hast.

THE SAME.

MY LORD,

Jan. 5, 1681[2].

I goe aboard a Saturday.<sup>a</sup> Its y<sup>e</sup> generall talk of a parlim<sup>t</sup> to meete some say at Norwich; but most at Oxford, in March or Ap<sup>l</sup>.

My L<sup>d</sup> Arguile,<sup>b</sup> it's beleev'd, is heere; his case is thought very hard, and y<sup>e</sup> proceedings agst him vigorous; and all imputed to y<sup>e</sup> Duke's severity, and so made use of by those that dont love him, as an argument w<sup>ht</sup> wee may expect from his governm<sup>t</sup> heere. But Arguile is not much pittied, being looked on generally as a very ill man to y<sup>e</sup> Crown, and who has made use of y<sup>e</sup> King's favours heeretofore to do very greate injustices to others.

<sup>b</sup> Archibald Campbell, 9th Earl of Argyle. It will be remembered that he was at this time condemned to death, but escaped into Holland. Halifax's words, as quoted by Lord Macaulay, will recur to the memory: "I know nothing of Scotch law, but this I know, that we should not hang a dog here on the grounds on which my Lord Argyle has been sentenced."

THE DUKE OF YORK.

Edenburgh, Jan. 27, 1682.

I would not lett this bearer, S<sup>r</sup> Charles Littelton, retorne without a letter from me, to lett you know how sensible I am of the assurances you gave me of your stedynesse to me, by the letter he brought me from you. 'Tis but what I had reason to expect from you, having known you so long, and that you never yett made one fals step to his Ma[jesty] and the Crowne. If others had followd your example, things had not been in the condition they are, nor I heare; but where so ever I am, you may depend upon my being a true freind to you.

JAMES.

WILLIAM LONGUEVILLE.

MY LORD,

28th Feb<sup>r</sup>, [1682.]

The jury too day were halfe English, halfe strangers. One jury tryed all. Count Coningsmark<sup>a</sup> was quitted; but an appeale c<sup>d</sup> not bee entred by some of Mr. Thin's kindred. See Magna Charta c. . Y<sup>e</sup> jury were thought hugely partiall. S<sup>r</sup> W<sup>m</sup> Roberts was foreman. The other 3, vizt. Wortz y<sup>e</sup> Capt. y<sup>e</sup> Lieut<sup>t</sup> Sterne, and y<sup>e</sup> Polander,<sup>b</sup> were found guilty. Though they 3 pleaded not guilty, yet in effect they ownd all when they made their defences.

The Count hit upon y<sup>e</sup> humour of protestantcy, and told them of his ancestors and of himselfe, and how happy hee was to bee tryed by a protestant jury and in a protestant countrey. The Count is at large, but under bayle, w<sup>ch</sup> were S<sup>r</sup> Nathan<sup>l</sup> Johnson (his friend and interpreter), last yeare mayor of Newcastle as I think, Major Oglethorpe, &c. Lady Ogle is not like to appeale him; and none else can, unlesse yong Bainton,<sup>a</sup> who is but from his sister, and so, claiming by a woman, cannot. Nor can any other, since hee that is nearest cannot. This law I have not exactly look't into, but in a bookseller's shop and over a pint of wine heard it talked off. Pray, my Lord, forgive this broken account, but I hope it may bee, as meant, accepted from,

My Ld, your Lops most obedient,

WM. L.

SIR CHARLES LYTTTELTON.

MY LORD,

March 11, [1682].

I have a letter from Scotland, w<sup>ch</sup> says they expect the Duke back very quickly; and tis very much beleevd heere that it may be so, but I think that it w<sup>d</sup> be no good complement to y<sup>e</sup> Duchesse to send for her hither and him back, unlesse it be to fetch her. He is dayly expected at Newmarket, because he sent an expresse to tell y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>s</sup> he w<sup>d</sup> come aboard y<sup>e</sup> yach a Monday night. I intend to goe to Cambridg, and the next day to Newmarket, and come away the same night, because I despaire of lodging.

The Lord Mayor's party think they had a greate day of it yesterday; for, after a long debate by councell on both sides, the Court of Aldermen judged it to be in y<sup>e</sup> Mayor to adjourn or call y<sup>e</sup> court for election; and there was 14 alder: agst 7, and so y<sup>e</sup> court is adjourned for another pole to Fryday next.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>a</sup> "He went to death like an undaunted hero," and he "told a friend of mine that he did not value dying of a rush, and hop'd and believ'd God would deale with him like a gentleman" are Evelyn's remarks. Reresby tells us that he had led a forlorn hope at Mons.

The two Bantam embas[sadors]<sup>a</sup> desired it, and were knighted to-day, and had each y<sup>e</sup> sword w<sup>ch</sup> did the deed. They were but ordinary swords.

The privy seales are not yet disposed of,<sup>b</sup> i.e., they were not last night, but the talk gives um to M<sup>r</sup> Seymore, and an earldom wth them. But there is whispered yet greater changes: That y<sup>e</sup> Duke of Monmouth will be restored to y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>gs</sup> favor and to y<sup>e</sup> M<sup>r</sup> of y<sup>e</sup> Hors place too. Y<sup>e</sup> D<sup>sse</sup> is every night at y<sup>e</sup> Duchesses court and very kindly rec<sup>d</sup>, and she and her Lord were, too, never better together. Nay, I heare that Shaftesbury has offered himself to y<sup>e</sup> Duke, and not wth out hopes of being rec<sup>d</sup>; for y<sup>e</sup> Duke made him a wise and no unkind answer, that he had bine an open enemy, and, when he had reconciled himself to the King, he would be the first w<sup>d</sup> take him by y<sup>e</sup> hand, as he had done my Lord Sund[erland]. It's thought that my L<sup>d</sup> Shaft: is affraid he shall be left alone, for that Essex, Montague, and others are making conditions for themselves. I c<sup>d</sup> tell you other stranger matters yet in hand, but 'tis enough at a time.

<sup>a</sup> Evelyn saw them, 19th June, at Lord Berkeley's, and has handed down a minute account of their appearance as they sat before him, "cross-legg'd like Turks, and something in the posture of apes and monkeys."

The Duke of M[onmouth], I heare, has entered into a new covenant wth those of his party never to quit them, and is gone into Cheshire to be treated there by my L<sup>d</sup> Matlesfield,<sup>a</sup> Whitley,<sup>b</sup> Booth,<sup>c</sup> Lewson,<sup>d</sup> and all that party who have long expected him, and where there is not such another gang of phanatiques in y<sup>e</sup> kingdom, and its like is y<sup>e</sup> reason why the King resolved of putting a guarrison into Chester Castle. The King does not come to town till Munday next, and then he goes the same day to Chatham, down y<sup>e</sup> river ; so I goe a Saturday to be at Sheerness as he passes by.

The King is mightly pleased at Winchester, and y<sup>e</sup> toun has made him a present of y<sup>e</sup> Castle for a place to build upon, and y<sup>e</sup> B<sup>p</sup> has given him timber and y<sup>e</sup> gentlemen will bring it ; so he is resolved to build, there being stone enough on y<sup>e</sup> place.<sup>e</sup> The Duke says tis abundantly better place for all sort of pleasure then Newmarket, and then 'tis neere y<sup>e</sup> forrest for hunting. But you must know there is a faction in this business too, y<sup>e</sup> Whig party being lords at Newmarket, as hunting, got houses and possest themselves of y<sup>e</sup> best conveniences there. The K<sup>g</sup>, however, goes to Newmarket in October ; they say, not till y<sup>e</sup> sherriiffs are decided.

The apprentices have bine mutinous ab<sup>t</sup> St Giles's and w<sup>d</sup> have puld down a house, so y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> Guards were faine to come, and some of them are taken and put into prison. The privy seales are not like to be disposed of yet. They were promised 1st to Lord Halli : and, after, to Seymore, as I am told ; so, till something els happen, that both may be satisfied, it may be they will remaine in y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>s</sup> hand. The Duke appeares for L<sup>d</sup> Hamilton's<sup>a</sup> having y<sup>e</sup> garter, but y<sup>e</sup> D<sup>ss<sup>e</sup></sup> of Osnaburg<sup>b</sup> has writt to P. My L<sup>d</sup> Monmth goes not to Chester till Thursday. The K<sup>s</sup> sayd to my L<sup>d</sup> Noel<sup>e</sup> at Winchester y<sup>t</sup>, if y<sup>e</sup> D. of Mon: w<sup>d</sup> have submitted himself to him, as he ought, he sh<sup>d</sup> have willingly received him; but for my L<sup>d</sup> Shafts, he w<sup>d</sup> not doe him that injury who, while he remaines wth y<sup>e</sup> other party, is y<sup>e</sup> noble patriot of his country, y<sup>e</sup> Protestant Lord &c, and, when he sh<sup>d</sup> come in to him, he w<sup>d</sup> be y<sup>e</sup> fals and popish traiterores L<sup>d</sup> Shafts[bury] &c.

refused to be examined by him, because he sayd, having his habeas corpus, he was no longer a prisoner by his warrant, and so went out of y<sup>e</sup> roome into y<sup>e</sup> court; but, before he went away, he was served by y<sup>e</sup> same sarjeant wth a new warrant to take him again into custody, till he found good baile to keepe y<sup>e</sup> peace and to answer M<sup>r</sup> Attorney y<sup>e</sup> 1st of y<sup>e</sup> term.

There is another thing w<sup>ch</sup> is now as much talked on: the new orders ab<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> bedchamber, since the K<sup>g</sup> is come into these new lodgings.

My L<sup>d</sup> Chamberlin <sup>b</sup> w<sup>d</sup> have come in, when y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>g</sup> was in his closset; but y<sup>e</sup> page told him he c<sup>d</sup> not. He, notwthstanding, came in and desired my L<sup>d</sup> Bath<sup>c</sup> to inform the pages he was not to be kept out. My Lord sayd, he did not know he was, and commanded the page to let him in. Thereupon my Lord Arran<sup>d</sup> told Chamb: the page had done his duty, and he ought not to come in wthout leave; upon w<sup>ch</sup> there grew high words between them. The K<sup>g</sup>

THE SAME.

MY LORD,

Richmond, June 30th [16]83.

It's probable y<sup>r</sup> L<sup>p</sup> has ere this heard some thing of the discoverie of a new Presbyterian fanatique plot, no lesse then to murder y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>s</sup> and y<sup>e</sup> Duke and destroy y<sup>e</sup> Gov<sup>mt</sup>.

There is also one West,<sup>a</sup> a lawyer of the Inner Temple, come in too, or rather indeed forced in (as they say) by his father in law, an honest man had found him out who was of greater trust among all those people. These have discovered abundance of persons and things, and there are warrants out to apprehend them, who are many of them fled. Algernon Sidney is taken, and Wildman, and they are in y<sup>e</sup> Tower; and, since them, my L<sup>d</sup> Russell out of his own house, and my Lord Grey, who has since made his escape at y<sup>e</sup> Towre gate from the Serjeant at armes, through treachery or folly, because he w<sup>d</sup> take no guard wth him, and was asleep, if not drunk, or pretended to be so, when he went out of y<sup>e</sup> coach. The sarjeant was Deereham,<sup>b</sup> formerly my L<sup>d</sup> Chamberlan's gentleman of hors, and my quarter<sup>mr</sup>. My Lord tooke boate and got into Southwark, whither he was closely pursued, but not taken. The K<sup>g</sup> is so enraged at it, he has not only turnd y<sup>e</sup> sarjeant out of his places, but sent him to y<sup>e</sup> Tower, and commanded he sh<sup>d</sup> be put into y<sup>e</sup> dungeon, and sayd he sh<sup>d</sup> rot there. Hee was 3 days there. But y<sup>e</sup> L<sup>t</sup> came to y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>g</sup> and sayd he w<sup>d</sup> perish if he were not presently removed, for y<sup>e</sup> water and mud came in so upon him, he stood up to y<sup>e</sup> knees in it; so y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>g</sup> gave leave he sh<sup>d</sup> be removed.

<sup>c</sup> Robert Ferguson, the busiest of "fanatical knaves." "Violent, malignant, regardless of truth, insensible to shame, insatiable of notoriety, delighting in intrigue, in tumult, in mischief for its own sake, he toiled during many years in the darkest mines of faction." Pilloried thus by Macaulay, and branded as Judas in "Absalom and Achitophel," he is in a fair way of being notorious for ever. He escaped to Holland, to be at the bottom of any mischief that was brewing.

Scot, are mightily searcht after. There are a greate many more fled, and warrants out to search for them. There were 3 shutes of the silk armes taken at Umfreville's<sup>a</sup> house, wth some new muskets and collars of bandeleeres filled with powder, and a bag of bullets. He was not found, but is since, as I heare, taken. He was a greate man in all juries in y<sup>e</sup> Popish, or rather Oates's, plot, It was asked Keeling if Oates knew of y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>gs</sup> being to be murdered or anything of the plot; but he sayd he thought he did not, for they beleevd him such a rogue they w<sup>d</sup> not trust him. There is orders gone into all countreys to disarme all that are looked on as disaffected to y<sup>e</sup> gov<sup>mt</sup>.

I am told this morning, y<sup>e</sup> Duchesse of Mon: was delivered of a dead child, and that 'tis thought she can't live.

There was a com<sup>n</sup> scaled yesterday for the tryals of the traytors; and I heare my Lord Russell will be first tried, tho', it may be, more of them together. As I heare more, I shall give y<sup>r</sup> L<sup>p</sup> an acc<sup>t</sup>.

good Lady is an unspeakable refreshment to me, which in this age that understands no reason of commerce but the prosecution of the ends of gain or pleasure will be lookt upon as extravagance, but will be absoldv'd by your better judgement of things, who know how solicitous the resentments of friendship are and whose charity as well as interest in them makes you concerned for their relief. We have had no notice of the fire w<sup>ch</sup> your Lordship mentions to have bin at Roan, no more than I perceive your Lordship has of the diabolical design lately discoverd against the King's life and the government, the prevention of w<sup>ch</sup> we owe, next to God's mercy, to the fire which was lately at Newmarket.<sup>a</sup> The villany is so direfull that one would think it could not enter into the hearts of any who had the shape of men, and it passes belief that such men as the Lord Russell, the Lord Grey, the Duke of Monmouth &c. should be privy to it. Very few daies will bring those that have not secured themselves by flight to their trial. God grant that others may be deterred from the like villanies, and that they, if it be possible, may repent of them, and, however it fares with them at an earthly tribunal, escape at the greater w<sup>ch</sup> awaits them. I add my praiera for all blessing to your Lordship and family, and remain,

Mr Hambden<sup>a</sup> were both sent yesterday to y<sup>e</sup> Tower, and my L<sup>d</sup> Howard of Escrick taken out of his house. He had concealed himself in his chimney. So soone as he came to y<sup>e</sup> King, he fell a crying bitterly, and desired pen and paper that he might recollect and discover w<sup>ht</sup> he knew; so has bine writing his narrative ever since. Last night my L<sup>d</sup> Essex was sent for by a sarjeant at armes, Coll: Oglethorp and 30 hors. They met him coming to town. He lay all night in my Lord Fevershams lodging, and this morning, after being examined, was sent by water to y<sup>e</sup> Tower. The K<sup>s</sup> is very displeased wth him. He is charged, as I heare, to have signed an association.

Mr Forbus was taken last night I desire, my L<sup>d</sup>, you will thank y<sup>r</sup> keeper (for I thanked you in my last) for y<sup>e</sup> bravest buck y<sup>t</sup> ever I saw, tho' I have had many good ones from you.

My most humble services to my Lady and M<sup>rs</sup> Hattons.

THE BISHOP OF OXFORD.

MY HONORD LORD,

[12th July, 1683.]

The conveyance of letters from you has of late bin very propitious, every week having brought me those assurances which I with all imaginable concern desire to receive. 'Tis to be doubted, when the autumn gusts and winter long nights come on, there will be a more interrupted correspondence; but, if the execrable design against the King and government be fully discovered and broken, there will probably be such a turn of mens minds as may persuade the calling of parliament before the third year is expired, which will have one desirable effect: the bringing back your Lordship to your friends. The discoveries come on so fast that there will want prisons to secure malefactors, and innocent men begin to fear least the really guilty should attone for treason by perjury and revive the old trade of evidence, laying their plot at their neighbours dores. The King does very advisedly hasten the trials that the jealousy of the people may be removed, who think every thing, however real, to be a trick, and that his person may be in some safety by the terror of severity. We wonderd at the Lord Russell's being engaged in so black a design, a man neither needy in his fortune nor extravagant in his manner; but that wonder is encreast since the Earl of Essex is in the Tower. One would have thought it impossible that the son of the Lord Capel, after wealth and honor heaped upon him, should design the subversion of the government. Tis less strange that Lord Howard of Estrick, Lord Brandon, Lord Herbert of Cherbury, Mr Wharton,<sup>a</sup> Mr Hambden, and others of the like forme should engage in such an affair. The best ont is, a few daies will give us light. May they also give security to the King and government.

When your brother Grey is come to you, your Lordship will soon observe what we may expect from him. Mr Pullen's <sup>b</sup> characters are, I doubt, not much to be depended on. There must be a fault somewhere besides in my Lord, if, after so many months stay in France, no progress has bin made in the language. My young Lord of Manchester <sup>c</sup> was expected at London on Wednesday last. For ought I know, it might have been well if my Lord Grey had accompanied my Lord Preston <sup>d</sup>; any thing had bin preferable to

SIR CHARLES LYTTTELTON.

MY L<sup>d</sup>,

July y<sup>e</sup> 14th, 1683.

Yesterday morn: my L<sup>d</sup> Essex cut his own throate in y<sup>e</sup> Tower wth a razor w<sup>ch</sup> he asked of his man that waited on him, having never a penknife to give him. He had asked for a penknife every day since he came thither. He did it in y<sup>e</sup> close stoole roome, while his man was gone down; but his page was in y<sup>e</sup> roome. He eate his breakfast well and was not perceivd to be in any disturbance of mind; but, y<sup>e</sup> day before, he had sent to desire my L<sup>d</sup> Clarendon might speake wth him, w<sup>ch</sup> he did, and he made protestations that he knew nothing of any design to murder the King, but he said nothing to vindicate himself from being in other designes upon the governm<sup>t</sup>. The K<sup>s</sup> happened to be in y<sup>e</sup> Tower at y<sup>e</sup> same time this happened, to view y<sup>e</sup> new fortifications. The news was presently carried to the Old Baily, where was upon theyre trialls my L<sup>d</sup> Russell, Hone, Rowse, and Capt. Blagge,<sup>a</sup> a seaman, who were all found guilty, and who none of them made but very weake defences. My Lord had nothing but to call some persons to give an account of what they knew of his life, to make him unlikely to bee in such wicked designes he stood charged wth. The wittnesses agst him were my Lord Howard, Rumsey, and Shepp-

My L<sup>d</sup> Salisbury<sup>c</sup> was married yesterday to y<sup>e</sup> younger daughter of rich Bennet [and his] sister to S<sup>r</sup> George Downings sonne.<sup>d</sup> S<sup>r</sup> John Babor's son has run away wth S<sup>r</sup> Thomas Draper's<sup>e</sup> daughter. But Walcott sayes hee is meane, in that hee denies his share in the plott, for that he had his full share therein. This Walcott never denyed it but in a course of law, to see if legally there was prooffe ag<sup>t</sup> him. His teachers, hee sayes, misguided him. I shall bee here yett about 10 dayes. MY LORD,

I have just now rec<sup>d</sup> y<sup>rs</sup> of y<sup>e</sup> 16 wth y<sup>e</sup> inclosed to my brother, and have only since to tell you that my L<sup>d</sup> Russell was beheaded this morning. He sayd not much, but that he did not design to murder y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>s</sup> nor y<sup>e</sup> gov<sup>mt</sup>, but to keepe out poperie. He sayd the evidence agst him was true, as to y<sup>e</sup> place and company he was in, but he tooke that to be but misprision, for w<sup>ch</sup> he did not ask God or y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>s</sup> pardon, for that I can heare. I saw him die at a distance and he seemed very stout. The hangman gave him 3 blows, besides sawing wth y<sup>e</sup> ax, before he cut his head of. He came to y<sup>e</sup> scaffold in his own coach, w<sup>ch</sup> was not in mourning nor his livery; himself was in black.

The P. of Denmark is a handsom fine gentleman. They say hee be married a Tuesday at Windsor. The Duke gives him place heere yet.

My brother<sup>a</sup> Ruthen died yesterday and I am going to his funerall. He died of a feavor and wanted 5 or 6 months to be at age. Yet I hope his signature will be good.

Wee have had a deplorable fire, whereby 2 staire cases were most suddainly burnt in y<sup>e</sup> Temple, and no deeds, monyes, clothes, or anything but y<sup>e</sup> lives of a few, could bee saved. S<sup>r</sup> Thomas Robinson, our treasurer, leaping out of his window one paire of stayers, was bruised, being grosse; so y<sup>t</sup> wthin an houre hee dyed, and was just now buried. Hee had an iron chest now found, and y<sup>e</sup> gold and silver in it melted thought neere 10000<sup>l</sup>, and his office L<sup>d</sup> Pemberton hath 6000<sup>l</sup> to take for it. One Glyde, at whose chamber, a ground roome, it is thought to have begun, was burned. M<sup>r</sup> Lloyd, y<sup>e</sup> B<sup>p</sup> of Peterborough's brother, in y<sup>e</sup> next chamber, escaped in his shirt. M<sup>r</sup> Williams and one lodging wth him for a night are both burnt. This was below y<sup>e</sup> Kings Bench buildings.

L<sup>d</sup> Dartmouth is reported gone to visit your island, as also Jersey, &c.; and on his return it's sayd hee will goe out wth 13 sayle, and towards Tangier most believe. Our plott is nothing more known then it was, unlesse M<sup>r</sup> Charlton<sup>b</sup> have added to it by any discovery, hee being newly taken. The tryalls are abroad 1st too day, but I have not yett had time to read them. L<sup>d</sup> Delamere hath made y<sup>e</sup> application to y<sup>e</sup> King most winning on his Ma<sup>ty</sup> of any of our great men that I heare of. L<sup>d</sup> Suffolk,<sup>c</sup> you heare, hath been humbling himself too, as Earl of Kent,<sup>a</sup> Macclesfield, &c. I hope with your Lop., this mistery of iniquity being well and providentially discovered, wee may have a good government y<sup>e</sup> better hinged and established.

My Lord, I present my humblest duty to my Lady, and wish your Lop. and all your family all happinesse, being ever,

SIR CHARLES LYTTTELTON.

MY LORD,

London, Aug. 14, [16]83.

Since my last, my L<sup>d</sup> Conway is dead, and has left his dowager<sup>b</sup> vastly rich, they say his whole estate for life and 1000<sup>i</sup> a yeare for ever and all his personall estate. I am told, since I came hither, that wee shall have a parlim<sup>t</sup> call'd suddenly. My Lord Grafton is the most mortified creature in the world, because y<sup>e</sup> command of y<sup>e</sup> fleete was taken out of his hand and given to my L<sup>d</sup> Dartmouth, who is undoubtedly gone to bring away y<sup>e</sup> forces from Tangier; but I cannot be well assured if his orders be to ruine the place or put it into another hand. His taking Dr. Trumball,<sup>c</sup> a civillian, wth him lookes as if he had some publike treaty to make.

The news from France is that y<sup>e</sup> Turkes made an assault in six places upon Viena at a time, and were beaten of wth greate losse; and they have since removed theyr camp a league of y<sup>e</sup> town.

There is news come of a 2<sup>d</sup> victory the imperiall forces have obtained over y<sup>e</sup> Turkes, wth the totall overthrow of all theyr forces and a mighty slaughter, and treasure taken; and that, since, the Xtians have beseged Newhawsell<sup>d</sup> and another towne, I think tis Buda.

I have had a very sore losse at Jamaica, my good friend M<sup>r</sup> Long being dead, it having broke all my designs of settling a plantation there; for S<sup>r</sup> T. Lynch advises mee to wthdraw y<sup>e</sup> little stock I had sent thither in order to it, and I have accordingly desired him to make returnes of it as he can. I had a faire prospect, as I thought, of making a provision for my younger children from thence; but now they must depend upon Providence, w<sup>ch</sup> will be more sure.

I heard by somebody y<sup>e</sup> other day, it was my L<sup>d</sup> Cardigan<sup>a</sup> who lives heere, that you are coming back. I have it often in my thoughts a fit husband for y<sup>r</sup> daughter, and methinks you cannot choose a better party for both sides then my L<sup>d</sup> Grey;<sup>b</sup> or why not my L<sup>d</sup> Manchester? But these you cannot escape the consideration of, and therefore I had as good have sayd nothing. Y<sup>r</sup> daughters fortune is much more considerable by y<sup>e</sup> no remote possibilitie she has of an encrease of it, not only from y<sup>r</sup> L<sup>p</sup> but her uncles, who are none of them married.

Pray, my L<sup>d</sup>, present my wifes and my humblest services to my Lady, &c.

THE BISHOP OF OXFORD TO LADY HATTON.

MOST HONOR'D MADAM,

[2 Nov. 1683.]

Your good Ladyship was so obliging to write two daies together, and I am desirous to transcribe that pattern; for, tho I would mortify all other ambitions, I can not quietly permit myself to be outdon in kindness. It is a bold attempt to think to equal my Lady Hatton in the expressions of friendship, but I should deserve to forfeit that relation, did I not endeavor to answer the obligations of it in punctual, tho imperfect, returns. I should be glad to hear that my Lord your brother had left Paris and begun his journey for Italy, while the weather favours travail and the Alps have not the cold of winter added to their snow.

Your honor was pleas'd to enquir of a book call'd the Beauty of Holiness,<sup>c</sup> pretended to be writen by the author of the Whole Duty of Man, whither it were really wrote by him. To satisfy your Ladiship herein, I am to let you know that some artifice has bin usd by several writers to make their labours more passable by a pretence to this title; and yet, to justify themselves, if a more strict enquiry be made into it, one of them cald his book, The Duty of Man; another, The Whole Duty of Man, Gatherd out of the Scriptures; another, A Supplement to the Whole Duty of Man; so that, when the future writings of the first author which refer to his precedent book are questioned, tis answered that they refer to the book cald The Duty of Man, and not The Whole Duty. The second saies that he refers to that book of his that gatherd the whole duty of man out of Scripture, and not the other; and the third, if he chance to write a farther supplement, will have to say for himself that he only referd to the former supplement, which he plainly owns not to have bin writen by the same hand which wrote the original book. Thus, Madam, you see what little arts there are in the world to deceive without saying downright untruths, to the second of which I think your enquiry refers. Within few weeks all the genuine writings will, I hope, be finisht in one volume, that will in some measure for the future supersede the like frauds<sup>a</sup>. I must not end till I have wisht your dear honor all comfort, health, and blessing, and desird you to present my respects to your good sister and daughter, assuring you that I am and ever shall be, honord Madam,

Your most faithfull serv<sup>t</sup> in our Lord,
JO. OXON.

Did I not beleive, dear Madam, that you have better intelligence of all the news then I can give you, I should oftener venter to trouble your Ladyship with my letters; so that, that being the reason of my silence, I hope your Ladyship will forgive the not writing, since I designe it as a greater kindnes to you, dear Madam, then the contray. My Lady and all hear was mighty glad to hear that you was breeding, and shall be very much pleased to have that good news confirmed from your Ladyship, and when we shall have the satisfaction of seeing you all in London again. I see my cousin, Jane Hatton,<sup>b</sup> often, so I know by her how all our frinds doe at Guersney.

Now as to news: Mr Sydney has been tryed and found guilty and condemed, but when he is to be execuetted I know not. The Duke of Monmouth surrenderd himself to the King, and was receivd by him and Duke as well as he ever was. What he has discovered is not known. The Attourney was ordered to putt a stop to all proceedings against him. He goes to court just as he usd to doe. I beleive your Ladyship knew my Lady Killdaire,<sup>c</sup> who, pore woman, is dead of the small pox, which she got with being with her Lord who has had it. She is a great lose to her son. The other night Lady Mary Garrett<sup>d</sup> and her women and some other of her companions was at a tavern, whear they had musick; and after some time they went away and would not pay the musick; and so thare was a quarrell amoungest them, and some of the fiddlers was killed, and thoes that did it was taken, and one of them was the Ladys women in mans cloaths, who was a Friench women; and she is much concerned and tells many storys of her lady, who thare is a warant from my Lord Chief Justice to take; but I fancy she will not be easily found, for, if she should, it is beleived she will be punished. They say the women will be hanged. My Lady and my brother and all heare gives thare humble servies to my Lord and your Ladyship and cousen Hattons. THE BISHOP OF OXFORD.

MY HONORD LORD,

[14 Dec., 1683.]

In my last I gave your Lordship notice of the calamity which had befalln me in the loss of my sister, which every day I have new occasions to be sensible of. It will be a relief to me to hear that all is safe with your Lordship and my good Lady and the blessing which she gives you expectation of.

The late changes at Court have put all men at gaze. The Duke of Monmouths return and pardon and favor with the King and great applications made to him were the wonder of a week; and, after that, his being forbid the Court and discharged from his lodgings at the Cockpit are as unexpected a turn upon the other side. There are not such tides in the sea wherewith you are encompassed as there is in Court interest and favor. Your Lordship hears that Mr. Sidney died with the same surliness wherewith he liv'd; and indeed mens deaths are seldom better then their lives. I beseech Almighty God to carry your Lordship with an entire vertue and honor thro this naughty world; and, after all your afflictions, to return to you in mercy and comfort.

I remain, my honord Lord, your

SIR CHARLES LYTTTELTON.

MY D<sup>r</sup> LORD,

Whitehall, Dec<sup>br</sup> 17th, 1683.

I have bine so much at Richm<sup>d</sup> of late that truly I have had little opportunity to write you any thing of that has passd heere, till I knew you had it from other hands, tho' the various metamorphoses of the D. of M[onmouth] (and in that of the Court too) might have employed severall hands to describe it. His coming in was a huge surprize to y<sup>e</sup> standers by, and his reception wth the usual goodnes and indulgence of the King But all this wth himself sudenly disappeared, for, upon his refusing to sign an acknowledgm<sup>t</sup> of his having had a share in y<sup>e</sup> late conspiracy, he was commanded from Court (his pardon being sealed), and accordingly he retired and is, I think, at present at Moore Park. The K<sup>s</sup> has since made a narrative in Councill of his confessions before he rec<sup>d</sup> him to grace, and of w<sup>ht</sup> passd since, and commanded it to be all entered into y<sup>e</sup> Councill book.

THE BISHOP OF OXFORD.

MY HONORD LORD,

8 Jan., [1684].

The northern parts of England are by God and nature liberally stor'd with fuel; else, your daughter would have an ill time of it this very cold season in hir wintering in the north. Notwithstanding the severity of the last year, it was in no degree so fatal as this has prov'd already, every day bringing news of persons who in several places have bin overwhelmed in snow or otherwise perisht with cold; but tis to be hoped that what is violent will not be of long continuance, and the return of the sun will restore us to more treatable weather.

This Christmas has produced an alteration in my family. A little before the holidiaies, Colonel Macartie, uncle to the Earl of Clancartie, brought a letter from my Lord Sunderland, signifying his Ma<sup>ties</sup> pleasure that the young Earl should keep his Christmas at London with his uncle. No sooner the poor creature came up but he was married to my Lord Sunderland's daughter, and is finally remov'd from hence.<sup>a</sup> Such extraordinary proceedings are not usd to be very fortunate. If heirs of families can be thus disposed of, parents have little security either of their children or estates.

It seems S<sup>r</sup> John Churchill has put an end to the contest about the Mastership of the Rolls. If he can hold it for the same terme his predecessor did, twill be a very gainfull emploiment to him.<sup>a</sup> But your Lordship sits by unconcerned and pities those that toil to be miserable and envied. That you may have the blessing of content and self-denial is praied for in your behalf by, my honord Lord, your

Most humble and affectionat serv<sup>vt</sup>,

JO. OXON.

I am apt to think that my Lord Prestons journey is only to agitate for supplies of mony, which letters are not prevalent enough to procure. Since S<sup>r</sup> George Wakeman was my Lord Grey's doctor, tis well his ailing was only the jaundice, w<sup>ch</sup> every nurse can prescribe to. The exercise of a journey is the surest remedy for that distemper; and Bruxels will make a more thorow cure then the knight.

THE SAME.

MY HONORD LORD,

25 Jan. [1684].

The weather is such that there is little likelihood my letters should come to your hands. However, I cannot forbear to write and repete my wishes of health and comfort to your good Lordship and lady. I do not hear of any likelihood of a parliament to call you over this spring, but you have another occasion w<sup>ch</sup> I hope will be successfull.

Tis said that the misunderstandings of the two great men at Court grow every day higher, and that the Earl of Anglesey has lately bin called before the King and Counsel for charging the Lord Howard for accusing the Duke of Monmouth falsely, the Earle saying that the Lord Russel was murtherd. My Lord Anglesey, being requird by the King to answer whither he had said such things, desired to be excusd, saying that what was suggested was only private discourse in his own house. There is a subpena issued out against the Duke to summon his appearance, but tis not likely to be servd, it being not known where he is. Tis thought that the Lords in the Tower may speedily have their liberty. There is no news yet of the fleet at Tanger. The charge of their work, its thought, will be double to what it was estimated. Captain Herbert,<sup>a</sup> who was lately admiral against Algiers, is made Rear Admiral of England for his life. Your Lordship hears I presume what executions the French make in the Spanish Netherlands, and how Amsterdam and some other towns belonging to the state oppose the levies for their assistance. Also, how the Electoral College advise the Emperor to a peace with France, and how the King of Poland has bin disobligd by the Emperor designing to make a separate peace with the Turks. The league between the Dane and French is said to be renewed, and how far that may extend is not well known. I pray God bring peace out of this discord and confusion, and give comfort and blessing to your Lordship and family.

I remain, my honord Lord, your

Most humble and affectionat serv<sup>t</sup>,

JO. OXON.

<sup>a</sup> Arthur Herbert, who took such a distinguished part in the Revolution; afterwards Earl of Torrington.

THE SAME TO LADY HATTON.

MOST HONORD MADAM,

25 Jan. [1684].

You will allow me to give myself the satisfaction of constant writing, tho I am deprivd of that of hearing. The severity of cold continues still upon us; but I look down upon it as one of the worst effects of the rigor of the season that all commerce and intercourse are frozen up. We are told strange stories of several streets built upon the river of Thames that have joined Southwark to London. I should be glad if the practice could be emproved to make a road to Guernsay and join it unto our continent, that there might be an easier passage for letters to you and for your honors return to us. In the meantime this new city upon the river is a lively embleme of the designes and business of this world, where the foundation is water and the first thaw drowns the whole fabric. That your honor may build upon the unmoveable foundations of piety and vertue, w<sup>ch</sup> no change of weather or affairs can undermine, is the praier of,

honord Madam,

Your

Most faithfull ser<sup>vt</sup> in our Lord,

JO. OXON.

SIR CHARLES LYTTTELTON.

MY LORD,

Richm<sup>d</sup>, June 14, [1684].

I was yesterday at Hampton Court, where there was a Councill. There was M<sup>r</sup> Constable, M<sup>r</sup> Chidleys<sup>a</sup> Secretary, who took Armstrong. He gave this acct. of it: that he had bine wth him, my L<sup>d</sup> Grey, and others, at Cleve; so has ever since had some notice w<sup>ht</sup> became of them. And, so soone as M<sup>r</sup> Chidley knew y<sup>t</sup> Armstrong was come into Holland, he got an order from y<sup>e</sup> States to apprehend him where he then was, and demanded of him to assist him in the executing it. H<sup>e</sup> made some scruple; but he telling him he w<sup>d</sup> get 500<sup>li</sup> by it the K<sup>s</sup> had promised, w<sup>ch</sup> he was ready to pay him, the rhetorick prevailed; and he, wth 3 more, went immediately to his lodging into the roome he was in, and Constable layd hold on him and s<sup>d</sup>: "This is the man." Another in y<sup>e</sup> roome wth him drew his sword, and Armstrong put his hand towards his; but they presently tooke away his sword and the others that were wth them shuffled away and were some of his gang, but there was no order to seize them. Armstrong presently pretended a great neede to goe to y<sup>e</sup> privy, and it happened there was one wthin y<sup>e</sup> roome. Being permitted to doe so, he threw 2 papers into it; w<sup>ch</sup> being perceived, they seized w<sup>ht</sup> els he had about him, and, after, recovered these 2 papers, w<sup>ch</sup> were found to be one a letter to y<sup>e</sup> Duke of Brandenbourgs secretary and another to a Frenchman who was secretary to my L<sup>d</sup> Montague when he was Embassador. I think his name is Fallazy or some thing like it, and where he is I know not; but they were both from y<sup>e</sup> D. of Monmouth to recommend Armstrong's worthines to theyr care and protection; which I heare the King has so much the more reason to take offence at, that the D. of Monmouth gave Armstrong the worst charrecter to y<sup>e</sup> King in y<sup>e</sup> world, when he was last wth y<sup>e</sup> King

Armstrong, when he was taken, pleaded it was contrary to y<sup>e</sup> laws of nations for to seize him under another dominion, for w<sup>ht</sup> he had done heere; and the rather, being a naturall subject to the States, as being born at Nimeguen, and his mother a Duch woman (and so it was). However, they put irons on him and brought him to y<sup>e</sup> Hague; and there had 12 of an English yachs crew came well armed, and carried him away to Scedam, and so aboard y<sup>e</sup> yach.

His wife and daughters presented a petition at Windsor. The K<sup>s</sup> said he had pardoned him twice and kept his counsell into y<sup>e</sup> bargayn, that was, he had taken no notice of w<sup>ht</sup> he knew of his being pensioner and spy to Cromwell.<sup>a</sup> They petitioned, as I heare, the K<sup>gs</sup> Bench yesterday, to take of y<sup>e</sup> outlawrie; but it was thrown by, and 'twas said there yesterday he w<sup>d</sup> receive his sentence to-day.

It's true the Pope took M<sup>r</sup> D'Estree,<sup>b</sup> the French Am: at Rome, by the hand and lead him to an altar, where he kneeled down and prayd God would make his M<sup>r</sup> sensible of the innocent blood and all the miseries he had brought upon the Xtian world, or, in his due time, revenge it on him; and in y<sup>e</sup> consistory they had a consult if he sh<sup>d</sup> not be excommunicated, there being 14 cardinalls for it; but the Pope s<sup>d</sup> he w<sup>d</sup> yet wayte Gods leizure to give him further time to repent before he w<sup>d</sup> proceed to so severe a sentence. The French fleete is gone out againe, and tis beleevd to bombard Barcelona.

I heard yesterday my L<sup>d</sup> Brudenel<sup>c</sup> w<sup>d</sup> buy the M<sup>r</sup> of y<sup>e</sup> Hors<sup>d</sup> place of L<sup>d</sup> Dartmouth.

<sup>a</sup> Burnet also mentions this, that Charles alleged that he refused mercy to Armstrong for this reason. The story was, that he had been sent by Cromwell to assassinate Charles. He left papers with the sheriffs to refute the charge.

DR. EDMUND KING.<sup>a</sup>

MY LORD,

Hatton Garden, June 21, [16]84.

The consideration I have had of your<sup>r</sup> Lord<sup>ps</sup> melancholia,<sup>b</sup> together wth my owne, and illnesses y<sup>t</sup> had attended me, has often prevented my writing to y<sup>r</sup> Lord<sup>p</sup> to aske how you doe, tho' God knows you have been often in my thoughts on many acc<sup>ts</sup>, and perhaps as kind wones too as can be conceivd in the breast of one in my sphear. My Lord, there is noe body shall be glador then my selfe to hear of your Lord<sup>ps</sup> health; and, if I durst, I would advice you to all things lawfull for your health and comfort in this world, w<sup>ch</sup> may be soe manag'd as not to hinder those of the next. Your Lord<sup>p</sup> is certainly to consider some things a little sooner under your circumstances then others of yo<sup>r</sup> quallities. Will yo<sup>r</sup> Lord<sup>p</sup> pardon me if my affection outruns my judgment (in your Lord<sup>ps</sup> thoughts), if I deserve y<sup>t</sup> censure when I shall tell you your Lord<sup>p</sup> I beleive will doe well to have an eye to the support of yo<sup>r</sup> familie, and look upon y<sup>r</sup> glass how the sand runs, and give me leave to say I know a Lords granddaughter who is about 19, finely accomplisht, bredd by the Countess of K—, her grandmother, 5 or 6000<sup>li</sup> certaine, or therabouts. Beautie inough, nay, a large share, vertue, and hono<sup>r</sup> unspotted. Those y<sup>t</sup> have her in care, I am sure, will be glad a time might be thought fitt to be admitted into y<sup>r</sup> Lord<sup>ps</sup> thoughts. Ill say no more nowe, till I hear whether yo<sup>r</sup> Lord<sup>p</sup> will bear this hint from him y<sup>t</sup> has noe end but true love for yo<sup>r</sup> Lord<sup>sp</sup> and am certainly yo<sup>r</sup> Lord<sup>ps</sup> faithfull sarvent.

<sup>a</sup> The physician who was present when Charles the Second was seized with the fit which preceded his death. King bled him and restored him to consciousness, a service for which a thousand pounds was awarded to him. It appears, however, from the Bishop of Oxford's letter of the 7th February, 1686, that the reward was never paid, but that King received knighthood instead, which, as the Bishop observes, was equivalent to fining him a hundred pounds. He was a Fellow of the Royal Society.

<sup>b</sup> Lady Hatton had died in May.

I am not asham'd of my name, but will not now write it; yet I hope y<sup>r</sup> Lord<sup>p</sup> knowes my hand, tho' in this place smaller than usual.

SIR CHARLES LYTTTELTON.

3 Feb., 1685.

Yesterday, as y<sup>e</sup> King was dressing, he was seized wth a convulsion fit and gave a greate scream and fell into his chaire. Dr King, happening to be present, wth greate judgment and courage (tho' he be not his sworn phizitian), wthout other advise, immediately let him blood himself. He had 2 terrible fits, and continued very ill all day, and till 1 or 2 a clock at night. He had severall hot pans applied to his head, wth strong spirrits. He had the anti-moniall cup, w<sup>ch</sup> had no greate effect; but they gave him strong purges and glisters, w<sup>ch</sup> worked very well; and they cuppd him and put on severall blistering plasters of cantharides. It tooke him abt. 8 a clock, and it was eleven before he came to himself. He was not dead, for he expressed great sense by his grounes all y<sup>e</sup> time. At midnight there was little hopes; but after, he fell a sleepe and rested well 3 or 4 howers, and S<sup>r</sup> Ch. Scarboro<sup>a</sup> told mee he thinkes him in a hopefull way to doe well. His plasters were taken of this morning, and the blisters run very well; only one is yet on his leg, w<sup>ch</sup> is very painfull.

He found himself ill when he rose; and those abt. him perceived it (but he s<sup>d</sup> nothing) by his talking and answering not as he used to doe; and he went into his closset in his gown, and stayd half an hower alone; and Thom Howard<sup>b</sup> desired Will Chiffing to goe to him, but he w<sup>d</sup> not let him come in, and as soone as he came out the convulsion seized him, and he fell into his chaire. The phizitians conclude the sore on his heele was y<sup>e</sup> gowte, and the applying plasters to it repelled y<sup>e</sup> humor to his head.

Tuesday, 7 at night.—The Kings head is not yet opened, that is, y<sup>e</sup> plasters of cantharides to raise blisters not yet taken of.

His mouth and tongue and throate are inflamed wth y<sup>e</sup> hot mede-

The phizitians were wth y<sup>e</sup> Councill this afternoone, and told them they beleeved his Majesty in a condition of safety.

My L<sup>d</sup> Alington<sup>a</sup> died a Sunday. S<sup>r</sup> Thomas Vernon is dead too of y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>gs</sup> distemper. The ports are all stopt, and expresse gone to Scotland and Ireland, as to all the L<sup>t</sup>enancies in England. Yesterday, when y<sup>e</sup> King was dressed, hee fell very suddainly down of an apoplecticall fitt or of convulsions (at our end of y<sup>e</sup> towne I have nothing certain), and D<sup>r</sup> King then present and having his lance did presently bleed him, which did much good and caused him to recover somewhat of sence. All the day various reports went of his mending and growing worse, as apprehensions &c. are among us. But this present day began with y<sup>e</sup> good news of his Ma<sup>ty</sup>s very good night and amending, as much as in so short a time could be hoped. Y<sup>e</sup> Ld Allington, Constable of y<sup>e</sup> Tower, dyed suddainly, and our King was mencioning of it when hee was himselfe taken. My L<sup>d</sup> Keeper on Sunday evening told mee that hee was much pleased wth your Lops. catalogue, and that hee would ask y<sup>e</sup> favour of seeing some of them. Mr. Fanshawe will write your Lop. word how happily things goe on still at court; and how considerable D<sup>r</sup> King is like to bee, I believe many wayes your Lop. will heare, for y<sup>e</sup> Duke was, and is, fully bent for expressing his thanks to him for the good successe he hath had.

I come just from above to tell you this, w<sup>ch</sup> will flye but too fast to one that loves him so well. God Almighty comfort and preserve him and y<sup>e</sup> kingdomes.

You will heare of our King's death yesterday about 12 at noone. I am, by L<sup>d</sup> Keeper's order, to tell your Lop. that this evening orders were for proclaiming of King James in Guernsy and Jersy. Y<sup>e</sup> King's body was opened too day in the presence of 20 physitians and others, and found infinitely full of blood in severall parts, as if drowned wth blood. His now Ma<sup>ty</sup> hath declared hee will protect y<sup>e</sup> Prot<sup>t</sup> religion, y<sup>e</sup> Law, and satisfyed many; w<sup>ch</sup> will be in print. #### THE BISHOP OF OXFORD.

MY HONORD L<sup>d</sup>,

We are here full of the good news from Scotland, and hope rebellion is a plant which will not thrive better in England. However, we go on to raise in this place<sup>e</sup> our voluntier militia, consisting of two troops of horse and six companies of foot, w<sup>ch</sup> will be

settled in very few daies, and we shall not be sorry to have put ourselves to needless trouble. My Lord Argile will, I hope, be able to give the King a true account what charitable prince it was that assisted him with such a quantity of arms and mony, that just retribution be made for so liberal a benefaction. If it please God that a good account be given of the Duke of Monmouth and his party, tis to be hoped there will be no cause for your Lordships being commanded to Guernesay, but that you may be permitted to stay among your friends in England and attend your own occasions. My Lord Grey, I presume, is in the west, where I heartily wish he may light into a good sort of acquaintance. Some of the young noblemen of the town who are gon down, will, I doubt, be of as little use to the public service as they will be to him. God Almighty give a good issue to this concern of the State, and prosper your Lordship in your private interests, which is heartily praied by,

My Lord,

Your Lordships most humble and affectionat ser<sup>vt</sup>,

JO. OXON.

THE SAME.

MY HONORD LORD,

[25 June, 1685.]

I hope my Lord Grey, who applies himself to your Lordship to be furnisht with mony to raise his troop, dos also crave your advice and assistance in the choice of his officers and soldiers, men of such fidelity and courage with whom it may be fit for him to hazard the great state of life and fortune.

It is an odd piece of pageantry that the late Duke of Monmouth should assume the stile of King;<sup>a</sup> besides the extravagance of the claim, it is not popular with his party, who are all averse from kingly government. So that I am apt to think tis don upon the notion that there is some legal security to them who fight for a king, however frail his title be. But where the whole transaction is madness, tis a vain thing to seek for the reason of what is don. I pray God as good an end may be put to ours as is to the Scottish rebellion. It is not easy to guess, unless there be great expectations from London, what should encourage such a handfull of men to wait till they are overlaid by numbers from all parts of the nation. A foreign aid, tho of our next neighbour, cannot give encouragement of having timely relief.

I am very sorry to hear that your daughter is indisposd upon her going abroad, but hope the inconvenience suddainly past over, and has left no other effect behind besides caution for the future. Methinks one of the two holidiaies which now happen should give a vacancy for a meeting in your Lordship's affair, that you may have the satisfaction of some kind of prospect into what is likely to be don. That all your concerns may have blessing and success is earnestly praied by, my honord Lord,

Your Lordships

Most humble and affectionat ser<sup>vt</sup>,

JO. OXON.

THE SAME.

MY HONORD LORD,

June 28, [1685].

It will be high time that somewhat be attempted upon the rebells by the King's forces, for it is an unaccountable thing that they should be sufferd to ramble up and down for several weeks without any notice taken of them, or so much as a single troop falling upon their rear. Whatever bystanders think of it, neighbor princes will imagin that we ar a very easy prey to an invading army, who cannot make head, in three weeks time, to a desperate man who landed with only an hundred and fifty with him; but I hope this reproach shall proceed no farther, and that rebellion will be as short livd in England as it has bin in Scotland.

I perceive the parliament is not yet adjourned, and your Lordship has not hitherto any instructions whither you are to go to Guernsey or Northamptonshire. It is a great satisfaction when our choices are fixt by our superiors, for then, whatever the event be, we can justify ourselves, as to the world, so also, what is of more moment, to our own consciences. If your Lordship be commanded to your government, you have a sister and daughter who will not regret to bear you company, and, if you think fit to leave your daughter behind, God be thankd she has that vertue and prudence which may supersede your fears of hir miscarriage in your absence. Tho, considering the tenderness of a young ladies fame in this malicious world, which no guard of innocence or caution can secure, and also considering how boundless a parents fears will be in the behalf of an only child that is far off, I am apt to think your Lordship may in the close resolve not to part company. Whatever you conclude upon, I beseech Almighty God to give it blessing. I remain,

My honord Lord,

Your most humble and affectionat ser<sup>vt</sup>,

JO. OXON.

THE SAME.

MY HONORD LORD,

Jul. 12, [1685].

It has pleasd Almighty God to put a happy end to the two rebellions of the north and west, and disappoint the expectation of ill men among our selves and in our neighbourhood. While others entertain themselves with jollities and boastings, it will be our duty to look up unto that Providence which only can give and preserve peace to governments and render it a blessing. I am sure the poor Church of England is infinitely concerned to recommend himself by all offices of devotion and duties of religion to that overruling power and goodness she entirely subsists by, and, having a conversation in heaven, be also the care of it.

I remain,
My honord Lord, your

THE SAME.

MY HONORD LORD,

Jul. 19, [1685].

The manner of the D. of Monmouths death is matter of great mortification to me. Tis a strange instance of obduration and being given up to strong delusion that a dying man should think himself sure of salvation, and yet not think it necessary to repent of murther, rebellion, and adultery, or own himself to have bin guilty of them, notwithstanding the most manifest notoriety of fact which fix those guilts upon him. We, who partake the same human frailty, have great reason not to be high-minded; but fear, considering that whatever befalls any other may happen to us, and that nothing can distinguish or make secure but the grace and favor of Almighty God, out of which men may sin themselves to such a degree as to believe themselves saints when they are incarnat devils, and take themselves to be secure of heaven when they are sinking into the pit of hell.

* * * * *

I remain, my honord Lord,
Your Lordships
Most humble and affectionat ser<sup>vt</sup>,

SIR CHARLES LYTTTELTON.

MY LORD,

At Taunton, Octobr 7th, [16]85.

I thought it unreasonable to divert you wth y<sup>e</sup> entertainem<sup>ts</sup> of this place, w<sup>ch</sup> have bine nothing but complaints of y<sup>e</sup> violence of our predecessors to y<sup>e</sup> country in all kinds, both as to the persons as well as goods, such as I have scarce known practised at any time in our former civill warrs, and w<sup>ch</sup> I cannot but beleve wee shall heare more of, when y<sup>e</sup> parlim<sup>t</sup> meetes; and of the execution of so many of y<sup>e</sup> traitors heere, 18 at one lump, and all quartered, and more every day in other parts of y<sup>e</sup> country, w<sup>ch</sup> will be to y<sup>e</sup> number of neere 300;<sup>a</sup> and most of theyr quarters are, and will be, set up in y<sup>e</sup> townes and highways, so y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> countrey lookes, as one passes, allready like a shambles. You may think w<sup>ht</sup> it will be, when all is done. Those who suffered here were so far from deserving any pitty, at least most of em, and those of y<sup>e</sup> best fashion (unlesse, to speake more charitably, it be most greivous), that they shewd no shew of repentance, as if they died in an ill cause but justified theyr treason and gloried in it.

 THE BISHOP OF OXFORD.
MY HONORD L<sup>d</sup>,

[20 Dec., 1685.]

I am exceedingly glad that your affair goes on so prosperously with my Lord Nottingham;<sup>a</sup> but it was some surprize to me to be told it by the public news letter. This is a peculiar way of publishing the bans of matrimony and, if it can obtain, will supersede the use of an Act of Parliament against clancular marriages. Your daughter, if she can comport with the temper of a grave husband and denie herself those gaities which may be decent for the wife of one who is of hir age, may promise to herself as much happiness in this disposal as is to be had in this world. But little things lead to great, and, if herein she can comply and render herself a meet helper, she will not want any sober enjoiment or real satisfaction.

I wish my Lord Clarendon good luck with his honor,<sup>b</sup> which to me seems sufficiently hazardous. His son's match seems very desirable, but it comes often to pass that rich widows prove poor wives;<sup>c</sup> and I am told there are several pretensions to the personal estate of M<sup>rs</sup> Whitmore, w<sup>ch</sup> may make a better dividend among the lawiers then the executor of kindred. If the condition of those other officers who are cashiered<sup>d</sup> be no worse then M<sup>r</sup> Cook's, they will not be in ill circumstances by the loss of their commands. I pray God fit us for the more necessary duty of obeying, and preserve to us our laws and our religion. I add my heartiest praiers for the continuance of all blessing to your Lordship and family, remaining,

My honord Lord,

your most humble and affectionat ser<sup>vt</sup>,

JO. OXON.

<sup>d</sup> "Several of the officers, military and civill, that appeared in the house of commons in this present parliament against the king's interest are (tis said) dismis'd their several places and commands; as, Sir Stephen Fox, lord Manchester, capt. Cook, capt. Browne and others." Luttrell, under date of 13 Dec. 1685.

THE SAME.

MY HONORD L<sup>d</sup>,

I was in hope that the practice of duelling had bin forgot; but, if it be resum'd, tis to be doubted this little intervall of late will only give a greater appetite and the recommendation of a fashion newly reviv'd. This instance happening where an example is not likely to be made is the more unfortunat, for without severity a stop will not be put.<sup>a</sup> The age of the young lady whom your Lordship mentions is no objection, unless there have bin some personal obstacle which has kept one from a husband till two or three and twenty years are over when there was a portion of 20000<sup>l</sup>. Tis easy paiment of 1000<sup>l</sup> to D<sup>r</sup> King to quit scores by a knighthood, w<sup>ch</sup> in truth is the fining him a hundred pound. In the mean time, tis well that a good officer is remembred at Court after a year is past, and that respite, which by the doctor's means was given, proved of greater importance then could be easily imagind.

I am, thank God, still upon my legs, and continue to go to church without inconvenience. I pray God perpetuate the happy opportunity.<sup>b</sup> Adding my praiers for the health and prosperity of your Lordship and family, I remain,

My honord Lord,

Your

Most humble and affectionat ser<sup>vt</sup>,

It was y<sup>e</sup> kindest thing in the world, dearest Brother, to let me heare from you last post; for, in earnest, I am soe conserved for my poor sister H[atton]'s confinement to hir chamber, y<sup>t</sup> my thoughts are never at rest but when I heare from you. It would be a melancholy thing to be allwayes in a chamber and have nothing to

There was yesterday a vast crowed at Whithall to heare D<sup>r</sup> Sharp.<sup>a</sup> Y<sup>e</sup> Bishop<sup>b</sup> went from thence to y<sup>e</sup> King's Chaple, and was there till ten a clock at night, and a Maunday Thursday went along wth B[ishop] Laban<sup>c</sup> all y<sup>e</sup> time he washed y<sup>e</sup> poor mens feet. The K<sup>s</sup> one told me heard him tell M<sup>r</sup> Pepys that he w<sup>d</sup> build a fort to command the river some miles from y<sup>e</sup> town, and shewd him where it shd be upon y<sup>e</sup> chart. He has viewd all y<sup>e</sup> fortifications heere, new and old, and bine aboard y<sup>e</sup> Royall Charles to see y<sup>e</sup> working of a new engine of S<sup>r</sup> Sam: Morland's, and is now gone aboard againe; and to morrow, very early, comes ashore heere, and touches above 300 people y<sup>t</sup> are heere for y<sup>e</sup> evill, and goes after to y<sup>e</sup> B<sup>p</sup> at Farnam<sup>c</sup> to dinner, and to bed to Windsor. I shall start wth him towards Sherenes, taking Tunbridg (as it is) in my way; and, wth as much dispatch as I can, hasten home. My wife is yet at Tunbridg. My 10 companyes, I feare, are to stay heere all winter. ## DR. SAMUEL FREEMAN.

MY LORD,

September 8th, [16]87.

I am very sorry y<sup>r</sup> Ldship should meet with any discouragement in so pious a work as y<sup>r</sup> church affaire is. I wonder much at M<sup>r</sup> D[ean] of [Paul's] proceeding in this matter. 'Twas to be wishd y<sup>t</sup> all y<sup>e</sup> out-parishes had many more churches in them, answerable to their greatness and number of inhabitants; and y<sup>t</sup> any incumbent should he displeasd to see the necessities of his people reliev'd in a matter of so high a nature seemed to me to be very unaccountable. M<sup>r</sup> D[ean] comes but seldom to town and makes very short staves; yet I saw him about 3 weeks since, but he sayd nothing of it. Yesterday I din'd with my Ld. Bp. of London, at Fulham, and amongst other things told his Ldship y<sup>t</sup> you had begun y<sup>r</sup> church in Hatton Garden; and hee replyed y<sup>t</sup> hee was very glade of it, and wished y<sup>t</sup> there were more such good works begun. When I see y<sup>e</sup> Deane of St. P[aul's] next, I think to give him an occasion to discourse of it; and then its likely I may be able to send y<sup>r</sup> Ldship his objections against it.

I beleeeve y<sup>r</sup> Ldship has an account sent you of y<sup>e</sup> Kings reception at Oxford. 'Tis at large in this days gazett, but nothing in it of what he sayd to y<sup>e</sup> fellows of M[agdalen] Coll. I saw an account of it from D<sup>r</sup> Aldridge,<sup>a</sup> Sub-deane of Xts. On Sunday, about 3 in y<sup>e</sup> afternoon, his Mat<sup>ie</sup> sent for them and askt y<sup>m</sup> why they did not obey his mandate and admitt y<sup>e</sup> Bp. of Oxford<sup>b</sup> president of their coll.; and when y<sup>e</sup> senior of y<sup>m</sup> began to give his Mat<sup>ie</sup> an account, the King took him up short and sayd hee would heare nothing from them, and thrice at least repeated y<sup>t</sup> hee was their king and would bee obeyd, and then bid them goe to y<sup>e</sup> coll. and immediately choose y<sup>e</sup> B. of Oxford, or els hee'd make y<sup>m</sup> feel y<sup>e</sup> weight of a prince's hand. They were noe sooner got to their coll. and deliberated a short time, but 19 of 21 resolvd on this answer: That they were extremly sorry y<sup>t</sup> his Ma<sup>tie</sup> requird of them impossibilities, y<sup>t</sup> they were precludd by their former election, and, y<sup>e</sup> place being full, they could not putt an other in it. What will bee y<sup>e</sup> issue is not yet known. The young students began to mutter very much at his Ma<sup>ties</sup> wordes to y<sup>e</sup> fellows of Mag.; but, bateing this roughness to y<sup>m</sup>, his Ma<sup>tie</sup> shewd himself very gracious to y<sup>e</sup> rest of y<sup>e</sup> university and mightily pleasd with his reception, saying he would ever protect y<sup>m</sup> and hopt to be as kind to them as any of his predecessors had been; bid them not bee griev'd y<sup>t</sup> hee had given ease to y<sup>e</sup> dissenters, saying y<sup>t</sup> humility and charitie were y<sup>e</sup> soul of y<sup>e</sup> Xtian religion, and hee hopt y<sup>t</sup> their eye would not be evill because hee was good.

Here is lately come out a very seasonable and excellent Letter of Advice to a Dissenter,<sup>a</sup> writt impartially and with a great deale of witt and strength. They are mightily catcht up and are sent farr and neare. I hope y<sup>r</sup> Ldship will meet with one of y<sup>m</sup> in y<sup>e</sup> country. I had sent one, but y<sup>t</sup> it is too big to come in a letter.

The reformation of y<sup>e</sup> companies in London sticks for y<sup>e</sup> present and some think y<sup>t</sup> they are discouragd to proceed. Whether there will bee a parliament or no they say is very doubtfull. At my Ld. of London's yesterday they talkt of my Ld. Grey's selling of his horses and hounds, and of his intention to goe again for some time beyond sea. The Bp. told mee hee wishd his freinds would perswade him to stay.

THOMAS TRAMALLIER.

MY LORD,

Jesus College, October 27th, 1687.

On Thursday last in the afternoon came hither the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, viz., the Bishop of Chester, the Lord Chief Justice Wright, and Baron Jenner;<sup>a</sup> and the next day in the morning they went to Magdalen College chapel; but that place not pleasing them, they remov'd to the college hall, where, according to a citation putt up on the college gate two days before, appear'd before them the President, D<sup>r</sup> Hough,<sup>b</sup> the Fellows, with the rest of the Society. Their commission was first read, empowering them to visit the universitys, particularly Magdalen College, the same in effect, mutatis mutandis, with the general commission of that court; and then the Bishop of Chester made a speech, or a charge, consisting for the most part of upbraiding reflexions upon the loyalty and behaviour of the college towards his Ma<sup>ty</sup>, with some exhortations to submitt to the King's mandate. In the afternoon they mett again; when D<sup>r</sup> Hough declar'd to them in his name, and the name of the society, that he own'd their authority so far as it agreed with the laws of the land and y<sup>e</sup> statutes of the college, and no further; telling them withall that it was a hard thing they should undergoe a visitation at so short a warning. This declaration of submitting no otherwise to their visitation, as also of the hard measure he had, he afterwards confirm'd, among other arguments, by the oath he had taken as President, which is indeed very solemne and express, and other statutes of the college, which they are all sworn to observe; giving them an account of y<sup>e</sup> whole transaction, but particularly of the methods they had us'd to avoid their falling under the King's displeasure. In the mean while the commission order'd several papers to be read, concerning that affair, both from the ecclesiastical courts and the college; askt questions to and fro, especially about the coming in of some of their presidents by mandates, to which suitable answers were return'd; and call'd for y<sup>e</sup> books and registers, with other instruments relating to the estate of the college. One thing I must not omitt, because indeed it was very singular: when D<sup>r</sup> Hough insist'd upon their obligation to observe the statutes of y<sup>e</sup> coll: and told them it was his resolution, by God's help, to doe it, the Bp. askt him, why then they did not read mass, according to the statutes of the college? To which the D<sup>r</sup> answering that, besides that mass contain'd several impietys, it was contrary to the laws of the land, the Commissioners desir'd him to shew them to what law; and the Acts of Uniformity being instanc't in, they all profess't they could see no such thing in them. But all this was but skirmishing in respect of what was done on Saturday.

That morning then the Commissioners, according to their adjournment, sate in the college common room, whence all people were turn'd out; but being lett in again, after they had closeted the D<sup>r</sup> for about an hour, the sentence of the Ecclesiastical Court was read thrice by the Bishop; which was to this effect: That he was declar'd no President, and was forthwith to deliver up the keys. To this he answer'd that he was perhaps the only instance in England, since the Restauration, that was turn'd out of his property without a legal tryal or so much as a citation; and that he could not, nor would not, part with his right.

In the afternoon the fellows were called in, and being ask't one by one, whether they would comply with the King's mandate for the Bp. of Oxon, that being read to them, they all unanimously refus'd it but two, D<sup>r</sup> Tho. Smith, and Charnock.<sup>a</sup> It happn'd a little before, as D<sup>r</sup> Hough was protesting against the proceedings of the Commissioners, and appeal'd to the King and his courts of justice, that the people gave a hem; for which they thought fitte to bind him over to Westminster in 2000<sup>li</sup> bail. They talkt once of committing him; though he told them that by depriving him they had discharg'd him from looking after the college; and with [that] all the Fellows offer'd to take their oaths that they were no way concern'd in it. My L<sup>d</sup> Chief Justice was pleas'd to say that if the civil power could not keep us civil, the military should. It was a rude thing, without doubt; and therefore it was since condemn'd by a programma from the Vice Chancellour.

On Tuesday morning they sate again; but it was in order to admitt the Bishop of Oxford; which being not to be done by the Fellows, they did it in the person of his chaplain; who, as his proxy, took the oaths, and was afterwards putt in possession of the President's lodgings; but not without breaking open the doors, Dr Hough retaining still the keys. It was expected the sheriff of the county would have bin concern'd in it, with the posse comitatus, or that y<sup>e</sup> three troopes of horse, which have been quarter'd here ever since the raising the army, should have bin employ'd in that execution; but it was done in y<sup>e</sup> manner that I relate, whatever private instructions they might have. In the afternoon the [course] was chang'd; and the Bp. of Oxon being consider'd as possess't of the Presidentship, a new question was putt to them, viz. whether they would obey him now he was in by the King's authority? To this the Fellows, Demyes, chaplains, and others of the foundation, answer'd, they would submit to him as far as was consistent with the statutes of the college; only two refus'd it absolutely, the famous Dr Fairfax,<sup>a</sup> and the under porter. The Dr moreover, entering his protestation in due forme of law, was depriv'd instantly of his fellowship, and commanded to depart the college within a fortnight; as the under porter was within three days. In the morning there was putt into the court an answer to that doughty argument that the

King's mandate is an inhibition; but they were wheedled off of it by some few sugar words, they then beginning to flinch. I was surpris'd, I must confess, to see it come to this; but I dare not judge them. This is plain, I think, that they have thereby shew'd the King a way to putt into every place; not to say that in it's consequence it affects every man's property in England. They pretend that they have herein follow'd the advice of their most judicious friends; and that there was positive order sent to turn out every man of them that would not submitt. Your Lordship will hear more of it in parliament when it setts. All happiness may attend your noble family.

I am,

My Lord,

Your Lordship's most humble obedient servant,

THOMAS TRAMALLIER.

THE SAME.

MY LORD,

Jesus College, Nov. 17, [16]87.

I presum'd about three weeks agoe to trouble your Lordship with a long tedious account of the proceedings of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners at Magdalen College; and because they are return'd here again, I shall beg leave to continue my relation of what has hapen'd since.

I inform'd your Lordship then, as I apprehended it, and as I think most people did that heard them, that the Fellows had submitted to the Bishop of Oxford, and that they would obey him as their President. But it seems we were mistaken; for on the Thursday following, when the Commissioners would have had them to subscribe a kind of address of submission, to be presented to his Ma<sup>ty</sup>, they putt in this final answer: "May it please your L<sup>d</sup>ships, We have endeavour'd in all our actions to express our duty with all humility to his Ma<sup>ty</sup>; and being conscious to ourselves that, in the whole conduct of this business before your L<sup>d</sup>ships, we have done nothing but what our oaths and statutes indispensably oblige us to, we cannot make any declaration, whereby to acknowledge that we have done amiss, as having acted according to the principles of loyalty and obedience to his sacred Ma<sup>ty</sup>, as far as we could without doing violence to our consciences and prejudice to our rights (of which we humbly conceive this of electing our President to be one), from which we are sworn on noe account whatever to depart. We therefore humbly beg your L<sup>d</sup>ships to represent," &c. Subscribed by all but Dr. Thomas Smith and Charnock. Mr. Fulham, one of the Fellows, had the misfortune then to be suspended from his fellowship by the Commissioners during the King's pleasure, for telling them that they had violently enter'd the President's lodgings without the legal way by the sheriff and the posse comitatûs. But on Tuesday they came hither again in the afternoon, and lodg'd that night at the Bp. of Oxon in Magdalen College, where yesterday morning they sate in the college common room; and the Fellows appear'd before them. The first thing that was done was the reading of a couple of mandates from the King, out of a bundle the Bp. of Chester held in his hands, in favour of one Joyner,<sup>a</sup> who was a Demye there above forty years agoe and sold his place before the troubles broke out, and one Alibone, a student of St. Omers, <sup>a</sup> William Joyner, or Lyde; a Demy in 1636, and afterwards Fellow. He renounced his fellowship and went over to Rome in 1644. For some years he was in the service of Edward, Earl of Glamorgan; and led a retired life. He was now brought out of his seclusion to be restored to his fellowship, which, however, he held but one year, and then, as Wood says, he "retired to his former recess, where his apparel, which was formerly gay, was then very rustical."

but both Papists; and the admitting of them Fellows thereupon by the Commissioners, without taking any other oath but that of Fellow, the rest being dispens'd with by the mandate. Then Chester, being the mouth of the Commissioners, made his speech; where, after a recapitulation of his former charge and their proceedings, he fell a railing most violently against the Fellows, calling them popular, petulant, obstinate, perverse, seditious, libellous, forgetting all this while that he stands register'd at Queen's College for having born arms against the King at Worcester. But amongst other his strange doctrines I must not pass by one, for it is a piece of new divinity, worthy the ambition of the candidate of the Arch-bishoprick of York; and it is this: he told the Fellows, in the exhortative part of his speech, that they must sacrifice their consciences, as a peace-offering to the Father of their Countrey.

After this, there was an instrument produc't, containing the forme of a submission, to which they were all requir'd to subscribe, except D<sup>r</sup> Tho. Smith, of whom the Bp. was pleas'd to say that his Ma<sup>ty</sup>, in consideration of his carriage in that whole affair, did graciously condescend that it should not be putt to him, and Charnock. But they all refus'd it; for which they were presently after sentenc'd by the court, five and twenty in number, to be depriv'd their fellowships and banisht the college. They were denied a copy of the instrument; but it was to this effect: That they should acknowledge themselves to have acted all along disloyally and disobediently, and beg the King's pardon; and that they own'd the Bp. of Oxon as their lawfull President, and would obey him accordingly. There were afterwards three new Fellows putt in by mandates; and two mandates more were offer'd, but not accepted of by the persons for whom they were design'd. The Fellows putt in their several protestations, and the Commissioners went away in the afternoon; but God only knows where that furious zeal will terminate. The university expects to find in your Lordship a true patriot of your countrey, and does not doubt to see the noble spirit of your ancestors revived in your person, who were the great support of the Church of England both at the settlement of the Reformation and the late calamities of it, when the same occasions shall return.

SIR CHARLES LYTTTELTON.

MY LORD,

Shene,<sup>a</sup> May 15th [16]88.

It's a greate while since I heard from you; and y<sup>e</sup> longer I think, because, when I did so last, you complained of ill health. I was all the last weeke and part of that before at Sherenesse and Rochester, to attend his Ma<sup>ty</sup>, who went to give order ab<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> navy, making severall new platformes and batteries upon the Medway, and y<sup>e</sup> putting out some ships to sea and to get others in a readinesse, if there sh<sup>d</sup> be occasion for it, as I hope there will not yet awhile. For, tho' the Duch are (they say) out wth a more considerable fleet then we yet know w<sup>ht</sup> they have to doe wth, I can hardly think they will attempt any thing upon us. It will be (tho') to insult us, if they come to brave it on our coast. I left rideing before Sherenesse our R Ad: Strickland<sup>b</sup> wth 3 more men of warr, 4th and 5th rates, and 3 or 4 fireships; and, it may be, these, or y<sup>e</sup> men of war at least, are designed to carry Q. Dowager to Portugall, who, they say, goes in August. My son Harry has a mind to goe wth her, and from thence into Spain, and then into Italy, if he can get y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>es</sup> leave.

The B<sup>rs</sup> have bine before y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>s</sup> in Councill and are committed to y<sup>e</sup> Tower, because they would not enter into a recognizance each of 500<sup>li</sup> to appeare in y<sup>e</sup> terme, upon pretence it w<sup>d</sup> injure theyr peeriage. I heare they were prest much in it, and severall instances of y<sup>e</sup> temporall peeres who had done it, as y<sup>e</sup> Duke of Buck, L<sup>d</sup> Lovelace,<sup>a</sup> and others. As they past through y<sup>e</sup> courts to y<sup>e</sup> water side from y<sup>e</sup> Councill (there being a greate crowd both w<sup>thin</sup> and w<sup>thout</sup> doores), the people praid for y<sup>m</sup>, and y<sup>e</sup> AB<sup>p</sup> held out his hand and said: "Be dutyfull to y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>s</sup>; hold fast to y<sup>r</sup> religion; and God blesse you."

Yesterday, 5 minutes before 10 in y<sup>e</sup> morning, y<sup>e</sup> Queen was delivered of y<sup>e</sup> Prince of Wales. I come now from seeing him as he was undressing, and he is a delicate fine boy, very well complexioned, and lookes healthy and sprightly. He is to have no wet nurs. Sunday next is appointed for y<sup>e</sup> thanksgiving in y<sup>e</sup> churches heere, and y<sup>e</sup> Sunday following in all the kingdom. I wish my Lady Hatton as much joy as I beleeve the Queene has, for y<sup>e</sup> same reason. I goe to morrow to Rochester to stay, I know not how long.

At y<sup>e</sup> presse at y<sup>e</sup> Theatre I accidentally met wth D<sup>r</sup> Mills,<sup>b</sup> whose Greeke Testament is advanc'd as far as y<sup>e</sup> 16th of y<sup>e</sup> Acts. I found I had highly recommended myself to him and many in the University by having been instrumental in prevailing with M<sup>r</sup> Dodwell<sup>c</sup> to accept y<sup>e</sup> history lecture, w<sup>ch</sup> he hath done to y<sup>e</sup> great satisfaction of y<sup>e</sup> University. D<sup>r</sup> Mills kept me a day longer at Oxford then I designed, treated me all y<sup>e</sup> time, and brought me into y<sup>e</sup> acquaintance of soe many persons I had much adoe to get from them. Amonst others he caryed me to D<sup>r</sup> Aldrige and D<sup>r</sup> Hammond<sup>d</sup> at Christchurch, who both give you their service and testify a great honour and regard for y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>ppe</sup>. I went to visit y<sup>e</sup> 2 black wallnutts trees you see much admired, but I could see but one, and y<sup>t</sup> a most beautifull tree. Y<sup>e</sup> other is cut down, and I doubt y<sup>t</sup> I saw will have y<sup>e</sup> same fate, for it is much slighted and vilified.

I humbly thank y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>pp</sup>e for y<sup>e</sup> accompt of books. If Le Grand hath not got more fame by his animadversions on Burnet Hist. of y<sup>e</sup> Reformation<sup>a</sup> then by y<sup>e</sup> Ecclesiasticall History he hath publish'd, he had much better have fixed himself to his study of philosophy.<sup>b</sup> It is more then a fortnight since I sent up to London, by ye Letcomb carier, a parcel directed for y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>pp</sup>; but I feare it hath miscaried, for I cannot hear anything from my house of y<sup>e</sup> receipt thereof. In it wase some seeds I received from Bobart at Oxford, Mabillon his Museum, and Dr. Bernard de Mensuris et Ponderibus antiquis, who wth great earnestness invited me to his chamber at Oxford, received me wth great civility, wou'd have presented me with what he had publish'd on Josephus,<sup>c</sup> but unfortunately y<sup>e</sup> keeper of y<sup>e</sup> Theater, where they are layd up, wase not to be found. It wou'd have been a very acceptable present to me, for it is never like to be published; and, tho' it be imperfect, I am assured, not only from his fame but from competent judges who have perused it, that ther are several very excellent discourses in his animadver-

'Savilian Bernard's a right learned man; Josephus he will finish when he can.'"

sions, w<sup>ch</sup> he made soe large, that it wou'd have been soe long before y<sup>e</sup> worke had been finish'd, that D<sup>r</sup> Fel, B<sup>p</sup> of Oxford, chose to break of y<sup>e</sup> worke rather then have it soe voluminous [as] it wou'd have been, had D<sup>r</sup> Bernard gonne on in y<sup>e</sup> like method. The like fate hath attended what D<sup>r</sup> Aldridge had undertaken on y<sup>e</sup> same author.<sup>a</sup> I hope shortly to send you a specimen of y<sup>e</sup> B<sup>p</sup> of St. Asaph his Chronology, in w<sup>ch</sup> he is soe exact and inserts soe many things (w<sup>ch</sup> tho in truth seem digressions, yet are very curious, usefull, and instructive), that it will be long before y<sup>e</sup> worke be finish'd. I hope shortly to waite on his Lo<sup>pp</sup><sup>e</sup>, and shall freely deliver him my sentiments: That it was highly to be wish'd he wou'd first finish his Chronol[og]y, and after, by way of appendix or as addenda, add those discourses; for his Lo<sup>pp</sup><sup>e</sup> doth only finish as he prints. Y<sup>e</sup> original copy is in short hand, and y<sup>e</sup> discourses soe brief, shoud he dy before it wase finish'd, it wou'd be impossible for any one to proceed according to his designe. But, if his Lo<sup>pp</sup> had finish'd his General Chronology, he might, wou'd health and opportunity permit, in an appendix enlarge on several discourses. The actions of Hercules and Theseus take up a whole sheet. Shou'd he as much enlarge on those of other men of renown, what a voluminous worke must be expected, and who cou'd hope to live to see it finish'd? I hope shortly to send you a specimen. In y<sup>e</sup> interim I have sent you y<sup>e</sup> last cast of D<sup>r</sup> Mills his Gr[ee]k Test[ament], that you may see how far it will exceed all others hitherto printed, and wth what liberty he criticizes; w<sup>ch</sup>, tho it may offend y<sup>e</sup> bigots, will not I suppose y<sup>e</sup> Pere Simon. Dr. Bernard, in his preface in his De Ponderibus, w<sup>ch</sup> I sent you, hints a design to publish a Chronology,<sup>b</sup> which he shew'd me, and I heartily wish he wou'd speedily commit it to y<sup>e</sup> press; for he, having been more conversant in orientall and astronomicall authors, hath inserted many very remarkeable things, of w<sup>ch</sup> y<sup>e</sup> B<sup>p</sup> of St. Asaph could have no cognisance. But y<sup>e</sup> D<sup>r</sup> designs to publish first a calendarium of all y<sup>e</sup> oriental and western nations, w<sup>ch</sup> will be a very curious and usefull worke for elucidation, not only of his own, but of all other chronologyes. He hath allsoe in a sheet (w<sup>ch</sup> he designes to be forthwth engraven) compared y<sup>e</sup> alphabets of all nations,<sup>a</sup> and hath composed a learned discourse of y<sup>e</sup> original of letters, and shewes how every nation hath borrowed from y<sup>e</sup> first letters invented, wth several very curious and learned discourses thereon. I cou'd name severall other plants, but wthout a stove you cannot keepe them, and, if you desire very curious plants, you must have a stove, and I wish you wou'd have a discourse [with] my L<sup>d</sup> B<sup>pp</sup> as to y<sup>e</sup> making, ordering, and advantage of one.

I have sent you some more seeds of y<sup>e</sup> large Nasturtium Indicum wth a scarlet flower, said to be vivace, because, if sown now, it will continue all winter, and you may propagate it by slipps. Last Tuesday y<sup>e</sup> King and Queen went for Windsor; the Prince of Wales to Richmond yesterday. Ther is a small campe ther form'd of 6 companies of y<sup>e</sup> Foot Guard, and 2 troops of dragoons.

Last Wednesday his Ma<sup>ty</sup> came to y<sup>e</sup> campe, and, after we had march'd and his Ma<sup>ty</sup> wase seeing y<sup>e</sup> line fire, one Cob,<sup>b</sup> y<sup>e</sup> Parson of Wollaston in Northamptonshire, about 60 yeares of age, being a horse back but very drunke, did very disorderly press to have spoke [to the] King, w<sup>ch</sup> his Ma<sup>ty</sup> perceiving, he asked what he wou'd have. He replyed he wase a minister of y<sup>e</sup> Ch. of Engl<sup>d</sup>; and, hastily endeavouring to light of his horse, he fell and put out his ankle. Ye King sent presently for a chirurgion, and caus'd it to be set in his presence, and ordered ye parson to be caryed to ye hospital; but he chose to goe to Twitnam. Doth y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>pps</sup> know this parson? And of what reputation is he?

The King came hither yesterday, and so down the river of Medway to see y<sup>e</sup> new fortifications and to Sherness; was pleased to comand me to follow him to Chatham this morning, having not y<sup>e</sup> time to give our orders concerning the placing and remove of some officers in my reg<sup>mt</sup> upon y<sup>e</sup> death of Capt. bridles; and the King does really expect to heare they are landed upon some part of his dominions the next faire wind. He resolves to draw all his land forces together ab<sup>t</sup> London.

To morrow my L<sup>d</sup> Feversham tells me will be a declaration out, w<sup>ch</sup>, 'tis hoped, will give greate sattisfaction as to gov<sup>mt</sup> and religion. Coll: Hen. Sidney, who asked leave, when he went, to goe to y<sup>e</sup> Spaw, was forbid to see y<sup>e</sup> P. of Orange, and promised he w<sup>d</sup> not, is now wth him.

The French have besieged Phillipsburgh, and M<sup>r</sup> Schombergh is wth 16000 men in Cologne.

The K<sup>s</sup> lookes and is very well; so is y<sup>e</sup> P. of Wales.

I wish, in so dolefull a case as our countrey now seemes to bee in, that I knew any thing worth writing or of a reviving sort; but so it is (my L<sup>d</sup>), the forrein invaders will probably bee landed this next weeke, if not at y<sup>e</sup> first of it. His Ma<sup>ty</sup> had 6 Bps. to him yesterday morning, and one of them sayd: omnia benè, as I am told.<sup>a</sup> Too day hath produced a declaracion why y<sup>e</sup> parliament writts are recalled, and a pardon also as I heare. L<sup>d</sup> Lovelace is in England, and was at Wickham election of a mayor a day or two since. when he heares where the landing is. I wish your Lop. much health, and a quiet world to us all in God's good time. My service humbly presented to my Lady and to M<sup>rs</sup> Hatton, I subscribe, wth some hast,

SIR CHARLES LYTTTELTON.

MY LORD,

Sheernesse, October 2<sup>d</sup>, [16]88.

I hope you are not in Holland, tho' I hant had y<sup>e</sup> honor to heare from you a greate while, and that there is so much news from thence. The wind is faire to day to bring y<sup>m</sup> for England, if they be so resolved, w<sup>ch</sup> it has not bine before a good while. We have abundance of materialls sent hither, and there are at least 40 carpenters to ab<sup>t</sup> a hundred laborers at work to put this place in a better defence. All y<sup>e</sup> platformes allready repaired. Here is come into y<sup>e</sup> harbor, wthin 2 days, 7 fireships, where they are to stay for further orders. I had a letter yesterday from a capt<sup>n</sup> in y<sup>e</sup> Downes, that y<sup>e</sup> fleet was coming to y<sup>e</sup> Nore; so I hope we are safe here, but I think this countrey or place is suspected to be attempted, because there is lately two regim<sup>ts</sup> more come to Rochester. I thank God, I have kept free of y<sup>e</sup> ague yet, but I have a terrible cold; and every day our people fall down of agues. I have 200 commanded men in constant guarrison of Coll: Hales<sup>a</sup> regim<sup>t</sup>, and an order to send for y<sup>e</sup> rest of y<sup>e</sup> regim<sup>t</sup> upon y<sup>e</sup> sight of a forraine fleet. They lye at Canterbury and Sittingburn, but there are 100 of y<sup>m</sup> commanded away lately, to relieve so many of my regi<sup>mt</sup> who were at Landguard Fort; my London, October 6, [16]88.

Being, my L<sup>d</sup>, by his Mat<sup>ties</sup> late proclamation convinced that y<sup>e</sup> Prince of Orange design'd an invasion, I hastened hither in order to goe to my command and now only stay to attend on my collonell, who, upon y<sup>e</sup> first change of wind, designs for Plymouth, from whence wee expect our regiment will soudainly be commanded to joyn y<sup>e</sup> rest of y<sup>e</sup> army. I wase yesterday at Kinginston, wher I found my L<sup>d</sup> and Lady Nottingham very well, but wase much sorry to heare ther that y<sup>r</sup> old distemper still torments y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>pps</sup>.

Last Thursday y<sup>e</sup> L<sup>d</sup> Chancelor went into y<sup>e</sup> city to cary an instrument under y<sup>e</sup> great seale, wherby y<sup>e</sup> city wase restored to their antient charters and priviledges, and S<sup>r</sup> Will. At such a season as this I hold myself bound to give your Lop. 2 letters for one. Last post I sent your Lop. account where 1000<sup>l</sup> might bee had, and that if you came up I thought the better. The wind keeping westward, the Dutch fleete is not arrived, as farr as I can heare. Yesterday our King had the B<sup>ps</sup> with him againe, and told them of this invasion again and how little concerned his people seemed. He declared Magdalen Colledge should bee restored by the B<sup>p</sup> of Winton, the visitor; that a fast should bec held; and that praiers for y<sup>e</sup> occasion should bee penned and presently used. Mr Godwin Wharton is layd in y<sup>e</sup> Tower, but for what indeed I have not yet heard.<sup>a</sup> Some report goes as if 16 comissions were taken with one —; I forgett the man's name. I heare there was a disturbance in Lime street last Sondag, and y<sup>e</sup> mayor was feigne to quiet the same. The friery by the arch in Lincolns-Inn Fields also hath been ill treated. L<sup>d</sup> lieutenants of y<sup>e</sup> Romish profession begin to be removed, for that none care to act under them. I wish your Lop. good health and quiet into your family, being,

J Here hath been a report that y<sup>e</sup> Dutch have by y<sup>e</sup> late storms received great prejudice in their fleet; but y<sup>t</sup> report is now quash'd, and they are daily expected wth a very great force. I trust y<sup>e</sup> nation in generall will behave themselves wth loyalty to their prince and regard to their country y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> Dutch in 1688 will succeed noe better then y<sup>e</sup> Spaniards did in 1588. We are here, as in all other parts of Engl<sup>d</sup>, in daily expectation to heare y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> Dutch are landed, y<sup>e</sup> wind being now S.E. As soon as they are, we expect to bee commanded from hence.

Some few dayes since a French pickaroon in a small barke wth only 2 gunns lay off here at sea, out of command, sent ashore severall times. At last in y<sup>e</sup> night time manned out 2 boates wth 15 men each and clapp'd aboard on each side a Duch vessell of 300 tunnn,

THOMAS TRAMALLIER TO JOHN STRETEHAY.<sup>a</sup>

It is now about a twelvemonth that I writ to my Lord an account of the visitation at Magdalen College, and the ejection of that Society. I suppose his Lordship will not be displeased to hear of their restauration; and therefore, if you thinck it fitt, I shall desire you to read this to him.

On Saturday last was sennight the Bishop of Winchester, as being Visitor of the College, in pursuance of an order from the King forthwith to resettle the Society of Magdalen College, came hither. He was attended into the town by above three hundred persons on horseback, most of them scholars, and six or seven coaches full of noblemen and doctors. The solemnity was to be performed [the day] following; but, to our great amazement, his Lop. was gone on Sunday morning. It seems there came a messenger from Court to summon him to the Council, to be present at the business of the Prince of Wales, as it appeared afterwards. But on the Wednensday in that week he came again; and the day following, after morning prayer in the chapel and a speech made to him by one of the doctors of the house, producing the King's letters, he compleated the resettlement. Things were put in statu quo, only M<sup>r</sup> Charnock was left out; and thus by the providence of God, and upon a revolution of affairs, that honest and stout society, which was designed to be the præludium of further attempts, was restaur'd within the compass of about a year to its full rights and property, having first seen that illegal anti-Church of England court, by which they had sufferr'd, fully dissolv'd.

The Bishop went for London, being to attend his Majesty to the field. Mr. Walker,<sup>a</sup> it is sayd, is going to resigne up his headship of University; his disciple, we hope, will follow his steps herein likewise at Christ Church.<sup>b</sup> If my Lord goes to the Island this winter, as M<sup>r</sup> Bonamy tells me, and takes Oxford in his way, I hope I shall have the happiness to see you here. God preserve his Lordship and family in these times of great uncertainty and danger. I am, with great truth,

Sir, your most humble faithfull servant,

THOMAS TRAMALLIER.

SIR CHARLES LYTTTELTON.

MY LORD,

Shereness, November 6th, [16]88.

The Duch passed by wth theyr fleet through y<sup>e</sup> Dover roade westward on Friday even, and, 'tis supposed, went to Portsmouth; of w<sup>ch</sup> youle heare as soone as we. One of their fly-boates wth 200 of y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>gs</sup> subjects and all theyr officers fell into one of y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>gs</sup> frigots way, having lost her rudder in y<sup>e</sup> storm, and are all prisoners. All the forces in this country are marchd away except that part of Hales regimt. w<sup>ch</sup> are heere, being 200, and 100 more at Landguard Fort; and those are marchd to Rochester. My Lord, I cant tell how to advise myself, if I sh<sup>d</sup> presse to be sent for away to march after my regim<sup>t</sup>. Loath I am to be out of the ocasion where the King, my friends, and my all are at stake; but this place is a post of greate concern and in my trust; and, if any thing sh<sup>d</sup> fall out contrary to expectation, may be imputed to me. I have really no vanity, but w<sup>d</sup> doe w<sup>ht</sup> I think may be most usefull; and, tho' I doe not think, now they are past by us, this is like to be y<sup>e</sup> scene of y<sup>e</sup> war, yet w<sup>ht</sup> secret practisses may be I can't foresee. Good my Lord, give mee free advise in this matter, and tell me how you resolve in y<sup>r</sup> own station.

The Prince of Orange, being at Exeter, hath made much marching hence for Salisbury plaine, whither our King is hastning, and by Monday will bee setting hence they say. The mobile<sup>a</sup> has been very turbulent hereabouts, and, after sundry appearances against y<sup>e</sup> popish chappels of Budg-Row and Lime Streete, they have been last Sunday furiously bent for y<sup>e</sup> destroying that in y<sup>e</sup> late house of Earle Berkely, and [with] much adoe were beat off, when they had shewed their discontent; but yesternight, as part of y<sup>e</sup> goods were removing from thence, the said mobile tooke y<sup>e</sup> cart and goods and burnt all in Holborne or some other place. Some were hurt and, as 'tis sayd, killed on that commocion. Lieutenant-Gen<sup>l</sup> Worden<sup>a</sup> is to bee here wth some 5 or 6000 men, to keepe all quiett if he cann. I have been busied in my chamber all day, so have no more news.

I am, My L<sup>d</sup>,

Your Lops. most obedient servant,

WILLIAM LONGUEVILLE.

SIR CHARLES LYTTTELTON.

MY LORD,

Shereness, No<sup>br</sup> 15, [16]88.

I had a letter this post from L<sup>d</sup> Middleton. He tells me his Matie is pleased to make me eldest Brigadeer of Foot, tho' he thinkes it for his service I sh<sup>d</sup> continue here. I have y<sup>r</sup> L<sup>ps</sup> of y<sup>e</sup> 10th, and am heartily sorry you continue to have y<sup>r</sup> health so ill, w<sup>ch</sup> I doubt not (too) is y<sup>e</sup> more trouble at this time you can't be so able to serve the King. Poore Harry<sup>b</sup> is marcht wth the army. My regim<sup>t</sup>

“I had yours last night. I told the king I could not see his majestie without some confusion that so much of my blood had forfeited his duty in my son's defection, which he was pleased very graciously to return: ‘he could not wonder that my son had done so since his own children were so disobedient.’ But I should have told you that I said withall as he went without my leave, so he should never have my blessing till he had returned to his duty: and the king was pleased to say, he was satisfied: I was not, he knew, in fault, and told Sir John Talbot to that purpose afterwards. I was with the king last night at his conchee, and he told us my lord Churchill waited four hours after he came to the prince of Orange's quarters before he was admitted to see him, and then had no quarters assigned him, so was faine to go five or six miles off to get any. Indeed they say there is very little regard to those that are gone, and the prince pays nobody a penny but those he brought with him, and those have been stays to keep guard at St James's, and there will be a considerable force left in y<sup>e</sup> town of y<sup>e</sup> new raised men; and I am told y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>s</sup> will be at y<sup>e</sup> head of 30000 good troopes, w<sup>ch</sup> I pray God give him good success wth, and send us a happy meeting. I have some buisness will necessarily require my getting leave, if it may be, to come to London, but for a few days; and, if I thought y<sup>r</sup> L<sup>p</sup> w<sup>d</sup> be there, I w<sup>d</sup> contrive not to ask it before.

Nov. 15, [16]88.

I have rec<sup>d</sup> y<sup>rs</sup> by the bearer of this, and should have oftener writt to you had it bin convenient to send letters by y<sup>e</sup> post, or that I had any thing to impart to you y<sup>t</sup> was necessary for you to know, in w<sup>ch</sup> case I would have sent a messenger on purpose, as I shall doe hereafter, in case you do not think fitt to come to town, w<sup>ch</sup> I should raised by his commission, so that I believe our spark will grow quickly weary of his adventure. Till the trumpet comes back we can tell nothing what to think of the treaty the lords were gone upon: the trumpet went to demand their passe. Here is come an addresse last night from the fleet, brought by lord Berkley and captain Leighton, signed by lord Dartmouth and every captain, to thank the king for calling a parliament, as the only expedient to preserve his majesty, the peace of the kingdom, and the protestant religion, which they resolve to defend I think with their blood. Sir Roger Strickland's hand is to it. The poor king is mightily broken. A great heart can't so easily bend. I don't know yet if I shall be commanded to stay here or goe back. I hope tomorrow though to come and dine with you. I have not time to say more, and the room is full of officers; so, dear, good morrow.

be glad you would resolve to doe; for, tho we doe not yet hear of any disturbances in y<sup>e</sup> North, yet I can't imagine y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> P. of O. would not think it very usefull, if not necessary, to his designes to give such a diversion; and, since he did not goe thither himselfe, as was thought he at first intended, tis probable he will not leave those gentlemen destitute of a support to y<sup>m</sup>selves or uselesse to him; and, if there be any credit to be given to them y<sup>t</sup> saild wth his fleet and affirme it consisted of near 800 sail, w<sup>ch</sup> agrees also wth y<sup>e</sup> Dutch prints, tis certain there did not goe above 500 to y<sup>e</sup> west, and consequently y<sup>e</sup> rest must be gone northw<sup>d</sup>; and then you will be in y<sup>e</sup> road. Besides, there daily happen severall things in w<sup>ch</sup> y<sup>r</sup> friends would be glad of y<sup>r</sup> company to consider and advise wth you; and tho I must acknowledge I cant think London a very safe place, because y<sup>e</sup> prentices doe daily comitt disorders in great numbers, and doe threaten even y<sup>e</sup> great chappell, for w<sup>ch</sup> reason tis said y<sup>e</sup> King deferred his journey till after Q. Eliz[abeth's] birthday, yet you have a friends house so near London, where I am sure you will be welcome, y<sup>t</sup> you may have all y<sup>e</sup> opportunities of doing any businesse there, and yet be out of y<sup>e</sup> very noise as well as dangers of any such tumult; and if y<sup>e</sup> King should not goe from London, yet y<sup>r</sup> want of health is not onely a good occasion for you to come hither, but does also answer many other objections ag<sup>t</sup> y<sup>r</sup> coming to town.

This day news is brought to y<sup>e</sup> King that 3 entire regiments are gone over to y<sup>e</sup> P<sup>r</sup> of Orange. S<sup>r</sup> Francis Compton and his regiment of horse, w<sup>ch</sup> was y<sup>e</sup> Earl of Oxford's, Langston's <sup>a</sup> regiment of horse w<sup>ch</sup> was y<sup>e</sup> Earl of Plimouths, and my L<sup>d</sup> Cornbury wth his regiment of dragoons. Onely one Clifford, <sup>b</sup> a papist officer in my L<sup>d</sup> Cornburys, stays behind; but y<sup>e</sup> men are all gone wth my Lord; and Major Littleton <sup>c</sup> and one officer more in S<sup>r</sup> Fra. Comptons regiment refusd to goe, but are carried away wth y<sup>m</sup> as prisoners. Thus far is certain; but tis said also y<sup>t</sup> 2 companies of S<sup>r</sup> John Laneres regiment are gone also, and tis expected y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> foot, when they are advanced far enough to have an opportunity, will follow this example; some, entire regiments, but many, companies. This news has putt y<sup>e</sup> King into great disorder, insomuch y<sup>t</sup> he did not dine publickly as he usd to doe, and tis uncertain whether he will hold his resolution of going to y<sup>e</sup> army at Salisbury on Monday; for there are arguments on both sides. If he does not goe, there will want his presence, w<sup>ch</sup> is thought y<sup>e</sup> best means of restraining y<sup>e</sup> army from deserting; and yet, if he should goe, his person may be in great danger by mutinies or worse; and tis said also y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> Prince of Or. is upon his march wth his whole army towards London, w<sup>ch</sup> is greatly encreased by a multitude of comon people, tho I do not hear y<sup>t</sup> many gentlemen of y<sup>t</sup> country are gone in to him.

The B<sup>p</sup> of Exeter is come to London, and went this morning to y<sup>e</sup> King, who has made him Arbhb<sup>p</sup> of York, and removd Trelawny from Bristol to Exeter. I fancy Trelawny will not accept it at this time, and, tho y<sup>e</sup> other did that of York after some importunity, yet I guesse he will repent and refuse it.

You may have heard perhaps of a design of y<sup>e</sup> Lords about y<sup>e</sup> town to present a petition to y<sup>e</sup> King. There was indeed a short petition framd and agreed upon by y<sup>e</sup> L<sup>d</sup> Halifax, E. of Nott., L<sup>d</sup>

present circumstances is wisht for even by y<sup>e</sup> Court, and tho every man would serve y<sup>e</sup> King in just and honest things and wayes, yet, since y<sup>e</sup> news of this revolt of y<sup>e</sup> army, tis rather a shame then a credit to y<sup>e</sup> Lords to addresse now, as if they had not dar'd to doe any thing for y<sup>e</sup> publick as long as y<sup>e</sup> case was more doubtfull. But to joyn wth y<sup>e</sup> other Lords might be construed an obstruction to y<sup>t</sup> reformation w<sup>ch</sup> is necessary to establish y<sup>e</sup> peace of y<sup>e</sup> kingdome; and whether these L<sup>ds</sup> and B<sup>ps</sup> will proceed w<sup>thout</sup> y<sup>e</sup> rest is uncertain. I should rather think they will not.<sup>a</sup> But of this you shall have an acc<sup>t</sup> by y<sup>e</sup> post, for I doe not foresee any thing y<sup>t</sup> will be a sufficient cause to detain the bearer hereof, nor does any thing more occur to me at present.

I am

Y<sup>r</sup> most humble servant.

THE SAME.<sup>b</sup>

MY LORD,

Nov. 20, [16]88.

The petition of y<sup>e</sup> Lords was deliverd w<sup>thout</sup> y<sup>e</sup> concurrence of the others for reasons y<sup>t</sup> I writt in my last. Tis in print and [I] shall therefore say no more of it, only y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> King in answer told y<sup>m</sup> y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> B<sup>ps</sup> had better pray and preach for him, and y<sup>e</sup> temperal Lords appear wth swords in their hands then petition.

Tis said y<sup>e</sup> Admiral Herbert has met wth 15 French ships of warr; destroyed nine. Three escaped, and 3 more come into Pli-

<sup>a</sup> Macanlay has taken his account of this petition from Clarendon's Diary, from which it appears that nineteen signatures were procured. The present letter is valuable as giving Halifax's view of the matter, for Nottingham evidently only repeats Halifax's reasoning.

But y<sup>t</sup> is s<sup>d</sup> is of y<sup>e</sup> most importance to y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>p</sup> is, that my L<sup>d</sup> Delamere came to Manchester and declard for y<sup>e</sup> Pr of Or. wth 100 horse, and y<sup>t</sup> he was going to Nottingham to meet y<sup>e</sup> L<sup>ds</sup> Devonshire, Manchester, Scarsdale, Lumley, Latimer, &c. Perhaps you may have heard this already; but, if not, I think you may depend upon it as true, at least y<sup>t</sup> there will be an insurrection in y<sup>e</sup> North, if it be not begun already, w<sup>ch</sup> will make it necessary for y<sup>r</sup> Lop. to remove to y<sup>e</sup> place I mentioned in my last.

SIR EDMUND KING.

MY LORD,

[20 November, 1688.]

Tis true our lot is cast in a dismall time at present; a great storme seemes to be gathering, thunder and lightening threaten'd; God knows who may be struck; every on has cause to feare, especially when we consider wee have (more or less) all too much provokt the patience of God, who has constantly vouchsaf't dayly mercies to us, and we have not made the gratefull returns as we ought to have done. It's now high time we becom seriouslie considerate, and all of us begg of Him to spare us once more, and y<sup>t</sup> we may outlive the storm, and see a calme againe before we goe off the stage of this world. But, if God has otherways determin'd, let us retire into our closetts and begg submission to His will and a free pardon for all our neglects of duty and comission of sin, y<sup>t</sup> we may be willing to suffer for His sake y<sup>t</sup> lay'd downe His life for us, and y<sup>t</sup> we may doe it chearfully, if it should be sooner than we at present expect. According to the custome and course of natur, we cannot stay long here; therefore pray God fitt us for Himselfe, and make our passage easie (if it be His will), and at last receive us into His everlasting arms of happiness, wher we shall be out of gun-shott and all manour fears to all eternitie. If ever ther was a time in our days to thinke seriously of things, it's not yet we have encouragm't from God's word: "Fear not him y<sup>t</sup> can kill the body and can doe noe more, but feare Him that can destroy both soul and body," etc. Perhaps we needed to be put in fear, y<sup>t</sup> we may kno we are but men. God's mercie is never so much minded by us as in great danger. Tho our danger is great, w<sup>t</sup> cannot omnipotence doe? Let us not despair, but waite His time for our deliverance the way His infinite wisdome has appointed. God knows what will become of us.

Great disturbance is sayd to be in Wales too. I hope these frightful stories will not hinder you from taking things good against the spleen, as you call it. L<sup>d</sup> Abbington went wth L<sup>d</sup> Cornbury, S<sup>r</sup> Will<sup>m</sup> Portman, M<sup>r</sup> Lutterell, Strangwedg,<sup>a</sup> Mallet, and many more a[re] named. The P. of O. has listed they say 6000, and cares for noe more. Moste say L<sup>d</sup> Devonshire, L<sup>d</sup> Lumley, Lord Chomly, Earl Exeter, L<sup>d</sup> Latamore, L<sup>p</sup> Exeter.

The King has a brave army, and this day at Salisbury plaine intends to call all the officers together. Bernard Hoard is said to be killed by an officer he beat at Chichester.

Pray excuse him y<sup>t</sup> loves his King and country and prays for yo<sup>r</sup> Ld<sup>ps</sup> body and soul. Pray, my L<sup>d</sup>, let us be chearfull and trust God, to whom I desire to resighn my will and intreat you doe so too. Let not the two first parts of this make you mellancholie, nor the last afraide. I tell you only reports. I never write new[s] to any body.

fall, who be preserved in part, and who bee utterly ruined time only can discover. Great estates are in the most immediate danger one would think. The King, as 'tis writ from Salisbury, was taken a Tuesday with 3 bleedings at nose, so by advice let blood and slept all night after it. Sarsfield, finding a party of 40 of the enemy commanded by one Cambell, fell on and killed 30 and tooke 6 prisoners.<sup>a</sup> They say Speaker Seymour, Sir W<sup>m</sup> Portman, and Col. Lutterell are gone into the Prince of Orange. L<sup>d</sup> Delamer is up in Cheshire; will meet more in Nottingham, as 'tis said. I am with great respect,

My L<sup>d</sup>,

Your Lops. most obedient servant,

Wm. L.

This day wee have certain news that his Ma<sup>ty</sup> and his army are upon the return hither; that York has been, by L<sup>d</sup> Fairfax and L<sup>d</sup> Dumblane &c, seized for y<sup>e</sup> Pr. of O.; that many of the nobles and gentlemen goe daily to him. M<sup>r</sup> Seymour is left govern<sup>r</sup> of Exeter. S<sup>r</sup> Jn. Vowell<sup>b</sup> is newly gone to y<sup>e</sup> Pr. of O., and more then I care to name. The L<sup>ds</sup> about Nottingham also are said to bee desirous of a free parliam<sup>t</sup>. So your Lop. may judge what is to be by you done, as to your coming up or staying where you are. Many heere do not like y<sup>e</sup> army's returne, but feare as much as any in the country. Would your Lop. had a good doe to spare and bestowed it on mee for a little particular purpose; not that I can enjoy at this time of doome. My most humble service to my Lady and M<sup>rs</sup> Hatton. I take my leave as

Your Lops obedient servant,

WM L.

THE EARL OF NOTTINGHAM.

MY LORD,

Sunday, Nov. 25, [16]88.

I hope y<sup>r</sup> Lop. will pardon me the misinformations I sent you in my letter on Tuesday last; for in such a conjuncture as this, when every man is greedy of newes and talks himselfe as his interest or inclination leads him, tis not to be wonderd at y<sup>t</sup> there be many false reports, and tis hard to distinguish y<sup>e</sup> true; and therefore I will venture again to write you w<sup>t</sup> I hear.

But I think I have better assurance of what follows: That our fleet is much shatterd by the late stormes. S<sup>r</sup> Jo. Berry<sup>a</sup> is come to y<sup>e</sup> Spithead wth 3 or 4 ships w<sup>ch</sup> will want considerable repairs, and says he knows not wh<sup>t</sup> is become of y<sup>e</sup> rest; but I hear and believe y<sup>t</sup> 7 of y<sup>m</sup> are gone to y<sup>e</sup> Dutch.

expected on Tuesday; so y<sup>t</sup> it looks as if London was to be y<sup>e</sup> stage, especially since it cannot be imagined but y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> army w<sup>ch</sup> is forming by y<sup>e</sup> Lords in y<sup>e</sup> North will come to London too. But, however, I can't think Kirby a safe place for y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>ps</sup> family; for, tho' tis said y<sup>t</sup> they were to be at Northampton as last night, yet no doubt some of y<sup>m</sup>, particularly those of Lincolnshire and y<sup>e</sup> others in Yorkshire who are not yet gott together, will come by Stanford; and tho' no injury could be apprehended from a disciplind army, yet in so great a number of men so suddenly drawn together there will be stragglers, and y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>ps</sup> house is too near y<sup>e</sup> road (especially if they goe crosse y<sup>e</sup> country to Northampton) not to be visited. So y<sup>t</sup> I have this to say yet for Kensington, y<sup>t</sup> tis safer then Kirby from y<sup>e</sup> violence of disorderly soldiers; and besides, by a speedy removal from Kirby, you will avoid y<sup>e</sup> importunities of some whom you would be unwilling to deny, and yet cannot grant what they will ask; and in such difficulties tis best to prevent y<sup>e</sup> necessity of answering. I must confesse to y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>p</sup> y<sup>t</sup> difficulties must be expected here too, and I have reason to expect my share in y<sup>m</sup>; but I hope in God to have an honest issue out of y<sup>m</sup>, and I shall be y<sup>e</sup> lesse concernd whatever it is.

Just now I hear y<sup>t</sup> my Lord Churchill and Duke of Grafton are gone to y<sup>e</sup> Pr. of Or. wth 6000 horse and foot, and many of y<sup>e</sup> rest of y<sup>e</sup> English and Scotch are going too, particularly Kirk and Trelawny.<sup>a</sup>

The King is in a very ill condition of health by his bleeding, insomuch y<sup>t</sup> he has writt to y<sup>e</sup> Queen she must expect no more letters from him, because he can't hold down his head.

Pray lett me hear y<sup>t</sup> you have rec<sup>d</sup> this, and w<sup>ht</sup> your resolutions are about staying at Kirby or leaving it.

THE SAME.

MY LORD,

Tuesday, Nov. 27, [1688].

He y<sup>t</sup> will write news cant want matter, for he will have enough to contradict one post w<sup>t</sup> he writt by y<sup>e</sup> former.

Bristol has not declar'd for y<sup>e</sup> Pr. of Or., but are ready for him; for there are not ten men there y<sup>t</sup> will oppose him.

The gentlemen of Herefordshire and Gloucestershire are in armes, and Sr Edward Harley at y<sup>e</sup> head of y<sup>m</sup>; and y<sup>e</sup> Duke of Norfolk is so in Norfolk.

THE COUNTESS OF NOTTINGHAM.

Tuesday, y<sup>e</sup> 27th Nov. [1688].

I hope, being y<sup>r</sup> Losp is so unwilling to remove, you will not be obliged to it, and must confess I am something of y<sup>r</sup> opinion y<sup>t</sup> where you are is a[s] safe from anny y<sup>t</sup> will hurt you as you can be; for, tho there should be rising northward, w<sup>ch</sup> there is reason enough to expect, you wont probably have anny of the Irish neer you, who I find have given every where more terrour then anny forrieng forces. The King returned last night to London. He has been much troubled wth a bleeding of y<sup>e</sup> nose, for w<sup>ch</sup> he has been twice let blood since he went. My L<sup>d</sup> Churchill and the Duke of Grafton and Coll. Berkeley went on Saturday to the Prince of Orange, and on Sunday the Prince of Denmarke and the Duke of Ormond. Yesterday morning the Princess went away, were is not yet knowne, wth her only my Lady Churchill and M<sup>rs</sup> Berkely. Yesterday my L<sup>d</sup> Feversham and my L<sup>d</sup> Dumbarton seised on Coll: Kirk, it being suspected he would goe over to the Prince. I hear to day of a great tumult at Uxbridge, were the soldiers have been a great while very insolent, and yesterday set the twone on fier in three places, w<sup>ch</sup> moved the inhabitants to rise to defend themselves and to quench the fier; whereupon the soldiers fell to blundering,<sup>a</sup> and the inhabittance have killed, they say, 30 soldiers. Y<sup>r</sup> Losp. saying nothing how all y<sup>r</sup> family does makes me hope they are all well.

I am y<sup>r</sup> most obedient daughter and humble servant,

A. NOTTINGHAM.

ROGER JONES.

MY HONOURD LORD,

Nov. 28, [16]88.

My Lord<sup>b</sup> intended to have taken his last leave of your Lordship by a letter; but, in regard he must have communicated something of his designs, which could not be don with safety, he thought it more advisable to deny himself that satisfaction. For this reason he has left his commands with me to give your Lordship this trouble, to assure your Lordship of his unalterable resolution to retain a just and inviolable sence of your Lordship's continued kindness to him. My Lord recommends M<sup>r</sup> Yelverton whoely to your Lordships care and direction, and begs your Lordsp. to influence him (as much as may be) in all his actions; but particularly he desires your Lordsp. to have an eye upon him dureing this unhappy warr, least his forwardness may engage him in something that may not be consistent with discretion nor his safety. I found my Lord extreamly tender and fond of him this last time, and is resolv'd (if it pleases God to bless him with life) to make an honourable provision for him; so that he needs not run the hazard of any desperate attempts to make his fortune.

My Lord marcht from hence with two and twenty horses of his own well mounted, besides equipage, w<sup>ch</sup> was his coach and car-ravan. My Lord Manchester had twenty horsemen well mounted, besides equipage; and S<sup>r</sup> Robert Barton, M<sup>r</sup> Biggs and M<sup>r</sup> Efton in his Lordships company. At my Lord Northampton's M<sup>r</sup> Mountague of Horton<sup>a</sup> with his two brothers, Christopher and Charles, and other gentlemen mett them. From thence they marcht directly to Northampton, where Captain Atkins and Captain Chapman joynd them with the militia of Buckinghamshire. S<sup>r</sup> Justinian Isham joynd them yesterday about nine, by w<sup>ch</sup> time they were three hundred strong and upwards, and expected three hundred more in the afternoon. But at diner they receivd an allarum from Banbury, that on Munday night fifteen hundred of the Kings army from Salisbury were expected to quarter there that night, so that they were forct to march immediately away towards Leicester, and so forwards untill thay joyn my Lord Delameer. In Warwickshire my Lord Northampton is assured of above a thousand horsmen, as they give out privatly.

It is confidently reported Father Peters and Father Warner gave his Majesty the sacrament, and obligd him by vertue thereof to promise neither to call a parliam<sup>t</sup> nor to accommodate. His Majesty was forct to take opium severall nights together to give him rest; w<sup>ch</sup> at last so indisposed him that he was obligd to be twice blouded.

Captain Berty summond the militia of Oxfordshire by a pretended order; and accordingly they met on Saturday last with the severall gentlemen in order to joyn this county. M<sup>r</sup> Attkins and Chapman pretended to an order from my Lord Chancellor to call the Bucks militia, w<sup>ch</sup> took effect. M<sup>r</sup> Palmer of Eeckon is to be interred to night. That your Lordship and good Lady and all your Lordships hon<sup>ble</sup> family may be blessed with all y<sup>e</sup> blessings of Heaven and earth is the constant prayer of,

My honord Lord,

Your Lordship's most obliged and humble servant,

ROG. JONES.

THE EARL OF NOTTINGHAM.

MY LORD,

[1st December, 1688.]

Pardon me for not writing y<sup>e</sup> 2 last posts, and for writing so little as I have time to doe now.

Wee are here quiett and have no terrible news at all, save that such (who are few I doubt) think sadly for his Ma<sup>ties</sup> sake; and, if they know not how to doe good, take care to doe no hurt. L<sup>d</sup> Delamere is at Worcester by last night's letters. S<sup>r</sup> Nicholas Butler<sup>a</sup> is out, or put out, of all. For all that, I was told that Earle of Salisbury was yesterday made of y<sup>e</sup> bedchamber. 3 or 4 papists were yesterday dismiss by y<sup>e</sup> King out of y<sup>e</sup> London lieutenancy. Marq<sup>s</sup> Hallyfax, Earl of Nottingham and L<sup>d</sup> Godolphin are going to treat wth y<sup>e</sup> Prince of Orange. I wish (and that's all a poore man can doe) that it succeed, which most feare it scarce will, this endeavour. L<sup>d</sup> Arran is made col<sup>ll</sup> of y<sup>e</sup> regim<sup>t</sup> late y<sup>e</sup> D. of Berwick's, and S<sup>r</sup> Fra. Compton but lieut<sup>t</sup> col<sup>ll</sup> still. The parl<sup>t</sup> proclamation is abroad too day, and for a pardon. The Earle of Sandwich is dead in France. No more now, my L<sup>d</sup>, but wth all possible respect I take leave as,

My L<sup>d</sup>,

Your Lops. most obedient servant,

my Lord Northampton's; and from thence, in his Lpp.'s coach, to Leicester on Fryday, where she lodged that night, and yesterday went towards Nottingham (in order for Yorke). She did not discover herself till they came to Harbrough, from whence St Ch. Shugbrough<sup>a</sup> and about 50 horse attended her to Leicester, where my L<sup>d</sup> Cullen<sup>b</sup> and diverse Leicestershire gentlemen came to wait upon her and are gone along with her to Nottingham. The mayor and aldermen treated both her Highnesse and his Lpp. y<sup>e</sup> Bpp. with two noble banquetts, and all demonstrations of respect and joy was shewd, with which her Highness was very well pleased, and seemed wonderfull pleasant and cheerful. The Bpp. also thanked y<sup>e</sup> gentlemen for their respect, and tould them he was forced to lay aside y<sup>e</sup> Bible at present, but hoped very suddenly to take it into his hands againe. My Lord, this is w<sup>t</sup> our country affords, and if you have had it from better hands I hope you will be pleased to pardon y<sup>e</sup> bouldness of,

My Lord,

Your Honours most dutyfull serv<sup>t</sup>,

It is said all y<sup>e</sup> lords and gentlemen at Nottingham will attend her Highnes to Yorke and continue for some tyme there.

MY LORD,

Leicester, 10th Dec. [16]88.

Hearing y<sup>r</sup> Princesse came to this place last night (in her journey to Oxford), I came to se how affaires stood. Here is a greate appearance of nobillity and gentry (few being left at Nottingham): 15 lords, Devonsh: Northton: Chesterfeild, Manchester, Grey, Carteret, Cullen, Beaumont, Sherard &c. There are about 14 or 15 troupes of horse. The Bpp. is captain, L<sup>d</sup> Cullen lieutenant, S<sup>r</sup> Justinean Isham cornet, to y<sup>e</sup> Northamptonshire troupe consisting all of gentlemen. S<sup>r</sup> Scroupe How,<sup>a</sup> M<sup>r</sup> Cooke<sup>b</sup> of Derbyshire, and diverse other gentlemen comand troupes alsoe. On Satturday came a letter from diverse of y<sup>e</sup> principall gentlemen of this county to y<sup>e</sup> severall high constables, desiring y<sup>e</sup> summons to y<sup>e</sup> militia, horse and foote, to meet here at Leicester with a months pay, w<sup>ch</sup> in an instant was done, and I doe not heare that one failed. To day I finde there is an order or warrant signed by S<sup>r</sup> Justinean, M<sup>r</sup> Montagu, and M<sup>r</sup> Andrews, Deputy Lieut<sup>s</sup>, for raising y<sup>e</sup> Northamptonshire militia, both horse and foot, to morrow to attend y<sup>e</sup> Princesse and meete at Daventry on Wednesday, but will march to Coventry or Warwick with her. She goes from hence to morrow by way of Coventry.

I know not w<sup>t</sup> your Lpp. will please to doe about sending in horses; therefore I desire not to give any order at Maydwell, but humbly desire, if your Lpp. send from Kirby, that notice may be given to M<sup>r</sup> Dawson, to whom I have sent to provide a man and horse to goe in upon your Lpp.'s order. I intend to be at Harbrough to morrow, where, if I receive your Lpp.'s comands, they shall be observed by, my L<sup>d</sup>,

Your Honour's most duetyfull serv<sup>t</sup>,
J[OHN] H[ORTON].

THE COUNTESS OF NOTTINGHAM.

The 11 of December, [1688].

I heared yesterday, by a servant of my Lord Godolphins y<sup>t</sup> came this way, y<sup>t</sup> the Lords will be back to day, were they will [find] a clear coast, for yesterday y<sup>e</sup> Queeen and M<sup>r</sup> Whales<sup>a</sup> went and tooke watter at Durham Yard, and from thence to Foxhall, were the coaches were ready for them, for Dover; and wth them, tis sayd, my Lord Chancellour, my Lord Peterbourough and my Lord Salisbury and my Lord Sunderland are gone, but whether wth the Queeen or no I cant tell; and tis sayed y<sup>e</sup> Chief Justice Herbert<sup>b</sup> is gone too. To day the King is gone, as I am told, but I have but an imperfect account of it from some of my owne servants y<sup>t</sup> were in twone. It has been much talked of, and I think not without a cause, of the Queeen Dowagers goeing to Eastwell, my Lord Winchelsea; but she has now put y<sup>t</sup> of for some time.

There has been a skirmish at Reading, were the Irish were very insolent and threaten us. Their manner is to fier the twone, and thereupon the inhabitants being frightnend run out and meet wth some of the Princes forces (they say that regiment that was my Lord Scarsdale, since y<sup>t</sup> the Duke of St Albaneses), and begged of them to rescu them, as those they looked upon as there delivereres; and so they fell upon the Irish men and killed ten of them and tooke 30 prisoners, for at first they made some resistance, but then betook themselves to their best weapons, there heels, and, because nothing should hinder these last, threw of their bootes and armes and whatever was cumbersum to them. My L<sup>d</sup> Feversham was comeing and meet them in this disorder; so he presently ordered Twyford bridge to be broken downe, y<sup>t</sup> they might not be persued. There was in Reading at y<sup>t</sup> times my Lord Dunmore regiment, who are Scosh, and some of S<sup>r</sup> John Leniers regiment; but they never a man drew a sword, but went of civelly to make roome for the Princeses forces.

They talke much of my L<sup>d</sup> Inchaquen <sup>a</sup> being up in Ireland, and my Lord Tryconnel breeding who wold speak to an Englishman wth his hat on. The Duke of Gordon <sup>b</sup> is turn protestant (sic) and is up in Scotland wth the Duke of Queeenbourough. They say y<sup>t</sup> one Tuesday last my L<sup>dy</sup> Marie Fenwick declared herself a papist. I begg the favor of y<sup>r</sup> Lops. to present my humble dutty to my Lady and service to my cosen Finch and his lady. I will be sure to let my Lord know, when he comes, what y<sup>r</sup> Lordsh. sayes of M<sup>r</sup> Pullyn.

ANNE NOTTINGHAM.

THE EARL OF NOTTINGHAM.

MY LORD,

Kensington, Dec. 13, 1688.

My wife writt you word by y<sup>e</sup> last post y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> King was gone away; and he is now seizd at Feversham by the rabble, who will offer him no violence but will not suffer him to goe away wthout y<sup>e</sup> consent of y<sup>e</sup> citty of London. In this conjuncture y<sup>e</sup> Lords meet every day, and this day they have sent y<sup>e</sup> L<sup>ds</sup> Aylesbury, Middleton, and Yarmouth, to attend y<sup>e</sup> King; and y<sup>e</sup> L<sup>d</sup> Feversham is gone by their order wth 120 horse and 40 grenadiers to preserve y<sup>e</sup> King from any violence of y<sup>e</sup> people, but not to restrain him in y<sup>e</sup> least from any liberty or resolution y<sup>t</sup> he pleases to take; and they have writt to y<sup>e</sup> Pr. of Or. an account hereof. Tis thought y<sup>e</sup> Queen and Pr. of W. will be taken too, for some vessels are in pursuit of y<sup>m</sup>; and Father Petre is in Kent street, and order is sent to apprehend him.

My L<sup>d</sup>, I will not pretend to advize y<sup>r</sup> Lop.; but I think it would be very fitt for you to be in town at this time, when every day produces such extraordinary things; and, tho you cant remove y<sup>r</sup> family on a sudden, yet you might immediately come y<sup>r</sup>selfe, and I should be glad you would come hither y<sup>t</sup> we might consider of y<sup>e</sup> present circumstances and how to behave ourselves; and London is not yet a safe place, y<sup>e</sup> rabble committing every night great disorders; and there is another reason for y<sup>r</sup> coming, and y<sup>t</sup> is, y<sup>e</sup> Pr of Or may be here tomorrow, but there is no doubt but he will be here on Saturday.

I came back on Tuesday night; but I have no time to give you a narrative of y<sup>t</sup> negotiation, most of w<sup>ch</sup> is in print already. My most humble service to my Lady and M<sup>rs</sup> Hatton.

I am,

NOTTINGHAM.

WILLIAM LONGUEVILLE.

MY LORD,

Thursday, 13th of Decr, 1688.

On Tuesday evening his Ma<sup>ty</sup> did leave Whitehall; and, being in Feversham creek retaken, they say heere that hee's come back to Whitehall too night. S<sup>r</sup> Ed. Hales and M<sup>r</sup> Sheldon <sup>a</sup> were in his company. The Earl of Salisbury and M<sup>r</sup> Ch. Hales were taken at Ashford, M<sup>r</sup> Obad. Walker and others at Sittingborne, Baron Jenner <sup>b</sup> and others at Feversham.

The multitude have done strangely to the Spanish embassadour in burning his books, coach, and spoyling his goods and house and what was there, as in a franchise, layd in. And so have divers lesser things been spoyled and done. Last night all the towne were, by false rumours of y<sup>e</sup> Irish soldiers, kept in feare and upp all night. The Duke of Grafton is come to towne to day. I wish, my L<sup>d</sup>, heere may come good out of all this hurly-burly. Had I time, your Lop. should heare oftener; but last post I had none, and not much now, being all y<sup>e</sup> afternoone taken off by Temple businesse, which on this present juncture takes up much of one's time.

I am, wth true respect,My L<sup>d</sup>,

Your Lop.'s most humble servant,

WM. L.

SIR EDMUND KING.

Thursday night, Dec. 13, [16]88.

Every day brings new alarms or woonders, nay, almost every hower. I intended to send w<sup>t</sup> papers are out, but I finde 2 or 3 of them in the gazett, w<sup>ch</sup> cam not out till 7 this night. The mobile have been extreemly insolent and ungovernable, and yet are not supprest. This day, about 1 a clock, we had news that the King was stopt by fisher boats, and that he is now at Feversham in Kent.

I went to Whitehall and met my Lord Prestons lady,<sup>a</sup> who said it was true, and soe said Lady Peterboro<sup>b</sup> and Lady Cleveland and many more; and this night the Duke of Grafton is com to towne. I went to grete him, but he was wth the Lords in counsell to night; and I finde this news has shoakt their measurs for the presant, but I beleeeve they must proseed now. The Prince of O. is not com yet. L<sup>d</sup> Peterb. is taken too, and his l[ady] beleive[s] it. Sr Edw. Hayles is saide to be wth the K[ing], and the Bis[hop] of Chester (but I doubt y<sup>t</sup>). We hear 24 preists taken in one vessell, and all wish it true. I was in Cheapside w<sup>n</sup> the Chancellor<sup>c</sup> was brought to my L<sup>d</sup> Mayor. Ther never was such joy; not a man sorrie y<sup>t</sup> we could see. They longd to have him out of the coach, had he not had a good guard. Dr. Oates, I am told, is drest in all his D<sup>rs</sup> robes againe, and expects liberty quickly.

We had a terrible alarm last night; at 12 a clock in the night cri'd, "Arm! arm! arm!" 7000 Irish was com from the army, disbanded but in a body, and killing all they met. We was all up in arms till 5 in the morning. It arize from some disorder amongst them in Brainford, and was allayd by telling the Princes van guard of horse pursu'd them and cutt them to peeces. It's a strange thing we have not the truth out yet. We doe not thinke we are safe till the Prince com's; all the Protestants long for him. Ho! you are happie in yo<sup>r</sup> quiet place. God keep it soe. Pray pray for us, as my poore wife desires me to tell you wth her humble service to y<sup>r</sup> L<sup>p</sup> and to my L[ady] H[atton], and mine too.

Just now I am tolde (just now) that the King is dead 2 howers after he was taken, if I may use y<sup>t</sup> word. I have alsoe word brought me that there is 4 troops of the P. of O. horse come to towne: Coll. Slingsby's regiment.

Since I writt this, the news letter came.

I doe not kno which is best: to have the news that belongs to the Bill of Mortalitie true or falce, nor, upon the wholl, I doe not beleive the first, but that he is taken by Admiral Herbert.

WILLIAM LONGUEVILLE.

MY LORD,

Satterday, 15th of Decr, 1688.

Now it appeares heere how needfull the Prince of Orange his coming to this populous place is; till which, indeed, heere is nothing but distraction and danger. The King is at Feversham, as 'tis said, and pretty well, at the mayor's house. Desirous hee was of being at liberty to bee gone, but most believe the people there will not, unlesse by the Pr<sup>ce</sup> of O. his direccion, leave him to himselfe and to bee gone. His Ma<sup>ty</sup> writt up to Mr Froude to send him a few servants and some linnen and money. Foure lords went unto him, viz<sup>t</sup> the Earle of Ailesbury, Earles of Yarmouth and Feversham, and L<sup>a</sup> Middleton. Most of this day his Ma<sup>ty</sup> was reported to bee dead; but I heare it was an untruth; altho 'tis by his best friends thought hee cannot but bee heart broken and not long in this life. God looke on him for good; however, his happinesse for this world seemes closed.

Maj<sup>r</sup> Wildman and D<sup>r</sup> Burnett are in seeming power. Some 50 ladies are now at Windsor wth the Pr. of O. Too day a declaracion is abroad for recalling the disbanded army to their officers or colours, subscribed by the Pr<sup>ce</sup> of Orange and dated at his Court at Henly.

I am alwaies,

My L<sup>a</sup>,

Your Lops most faithfull humble servant,

WM. L.

THE EARL OF NOTTINGHAM.

MY LORD,

Dec. 18, [16]88.

In y<sup>e</sup> mean time I shall follow your directions about y<sup>r</sup> affair of Guernsey, as well as I can and as I have opportunity; but I hope there can be no need of any sollicitation on y<sup>r</sup> behalfe, y<sup>r</sup> pattent being for life, or, if there should be any such need, I am apt to think I shall not be a very proper advocate. But y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>p</sup> may be sure y<sup>t</sup> I shall alwaies take y<sup>e</sup> same care of y<sup>r</sup> concernes as of my owne.

N.

CHARLES HATTON.

This day y<sup>e</sup> bill for y<sup>e</sup> coronation oath pass'd, not with opposition in y<sup>e</sup> House. The Commons have voted y<sup>e</sup> calling a Convocation. Yesterday they brought in a Comprehension Bill of their owne, if possible, more favourable to y<sup>e</sup> fanaticks then y<sup>rs</sup>, and more destructive to y<sup>e</sup> Ch[urch] of E[ngland]. After it wase read, severall moved for a day to be appointed for a 2d reading. Some mentioned that day sennight, some y<sup>t</sup> day fortnight. S<sup>r</sup> Edward Chisnal said it wase a bill soe destructive to y<sup>e</sup> Ch. of E. he desired it ly on y<sup>e</sup> table till Doomsday, w<sup>ch</sup> occasion[ed] some heats w<sup>ch</sup> quickly pass'd over; and then S<sup>r</sup> Henry Capell, wth a large preamble, attesting his zeale for y<sup>e</sup> Ch. of E. as y<sup>e</sup> promoters of y<sup>t</sup> bill usually doe, declared it wase of y<sup>t</sup> consequence he must second those who moved for y<sup>e</sup> longest day. Then replied M<sup>r</sup> Speaker: "You move for Doomsday?" w<sup>ch</sup> gave noe small diversion to all y<sup>e</sup> House but S<sup>r</sup> Henry.

And for y<sup>r</sup> diversion, if you have not heard it, I shall tell you a pleasanter story. The Countess of Dorchester lately went to visit a certain lady, who received her very coolly; upon w<sup>ch</sup> y<sup>e</sup> Countess told her she wase much surpris'd: "For," said shee, "if I have broke one commandement, you have another; and what I did wase more naturall."<sup>a</sup>

Here is a reporte 5000 Swedes are landed at North Yarmouth and 10000 more expected, to remove greivances and defend our liberty and property. All here are y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>pps</sup>, my sister's, nephew, and neices humble servants, but more particularly y<sup>r</sup> truly affectionate brother to serve you,

C. HATTON.

SIR CHARLES LYTTTELTON.

London, Ap<sup>l</sup> 9th, [16]89.

I am yet in suspense how my regim<sup>t</sup> will be disposed, for we are treated so hardly, both in words and deedes, ab<sup>t</sup> it, that, tho' we are not broke, I cant think they care to keep us. They will not allow us, w<sup>ht</sup> they doe to others, to make our recruits; and tell us wthall the King is so dissatisfied wth y<sup>e</sup> officers ab<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> deserting of y<sup>e</sup> soldiers, that, as a mark of his displeasure, this hardship is put upon us. I have plainly told my L<sup>d</sup> Churchill, who is now L<sup>d</sup> Marlborough, we think we deserve better usage, as being the regim<sup>t</sup> who's officers have stuck best together in y<sup>e</sup> service of any in y<sup>e</sup> army, there being none but L<sup>t</sup> Coll. and one capt. who have quitted it; but I doe so despize the opinion I heare is had of me, that I did privately contrive the meeting and deserting at Brandford, &c. as y<sup>e</sup> playing such a 2<sup>ble</sup> game, when I had taken this Kings com<sup>n</sup>, that I am quite wearie of serving any longer and am very willing to resign to those they can be better assured of, and endeavour, as soone as I can, to come to an issue in. S<sup>r</sup> George Huet kissd y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>s</sup> hand to day to be a baron;<sup>a</sup> so is Ad: Herbert.<sup>b</sup> Mon<sup>sr</sup> Bentin is Earl of Portland. My L<sup>d</sup> Faulkland<sup>c</sup> is out, and M<sup>r</sup> Russell in his place.

Pleases y<sup>t</sup> he sath he will not have his brothers scimm milke. This day Ch. Baron Montagu wase very busy in discoursing severall lords in y<sup>e</sup> lobby, and many thought he wase turned sollicitor for his old place.<sup>b</sup> I have enclosed a printed paper w<sup>ch</sup> I borrowed for y<sup>e</sup> satisfaction of y<sup>r</sup> perusall, w<sup>ch</sup> when you have, pray send it backe, for they are not to be bought. When you have read it, you cannot doubt who is concluded to be y<sup>e</sup> author, who is threaten'd by S<sup>r</sup> Rob<sup>t</sup> to be excluded out of y<sup>e</sup> Act of indemnity; and all S<sup>r</sup> Roberts patrons and partisans are not a little nettled at it.

Last Thursday, my L<sup>d</sup>, Captaine Ellis went to Hampton Court by my L<sup>d</sup> Nottingham's advise, who presented him. He desired mee to goe wth him, w<sup>ch</sup> I did out of curiosity to see it, never having before. The outside is very meane. How it is furnish'd within I cannot tell, nor had I curiosity enouf to informe myself. I wase soe disgusted to see y<sup>e</sup> front and back side, I admire how anyone can fancy it. It wase soe late before wee return'd, goeing and coming by water, I cou'd not write y<sup>t</sup> night.

I moved y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>pp<sup>e</sup></sup> for a letter to M<sup>r</sup> Temple,<sup>a</sup> to expedite Cap<sup>tn</sup> Ellis; but, shou'd y<sup>r</sup> letter now come, I wou'd not follow him to deliver it, for, last night, about 6 a clocke, he tooke occasion by water to goe into another world. He went upon y<sup>e</sup> water about 12 at noone, enquir'd how y<sup>e</sup> tide wase. Betwixt five and six in y<sup>e</sup> evening he tooke boat at Whitehall, went wth y<sup>e</sup> first oares who plyed him, who wase a stranger to him, refused those who used to carry him, bid y<sup>e</sup> waterman carry him below bridge, and, just as he wase shooting y<sup>e</sup> bridge, lay'd down in y<sup>e</sup> boate a shilling and a peice of paper in w<sup>ch</sup> wase writ y<sup>e</sup> following words: "My folly in undertaking what I cannot performe hath done y<sup>e</sup> King great prejudice, w<sup>ch</sup> cannot be stopp'd any other waye but this. May his undertakings prosper! May he find a blessing!" Then bid y<sup>e</sup> waterman farewell, and leap'd over. Afterward, he rise up againe, but y<sup>e</sup> eddisse suck'd him in before y<sup>e</sup> waterman cou'd bring his boate about, and so wase drown'd.

The accompt I gave you last Saturday of M<sup>r</sup> Temple wase too true. His body wase found yesterday morning, taken up neere the Tower.

The occasion of his writing those words he left in y<sup>e</sup> boate hath raised much discourse here in town. The discharge of y<sup>e</sup> office of Secretarie of Warre is not a difficult taske; besides, M<sup>r</sup> Blaithwait, knowing how well M<sup>r</sup> Temple wase at Court, to gaine his friendship did (I am very well assured) not only give him at present all y<sup>e</sup> assistance he cou'd to render it easie to him, but promised to continue it as long as he pleased. Therefore y<sup>e</sup> discharge of y<sup>t</sup> office cou'd not bee y<sup>e</sup> foolish undertaking what he cou'd not performe he soe fatallly lamented. But I am inclined to beleeeve it wase his undertaking y<sup>t</sup> Tyrconnel woud deliver up Ireland upon articles, for I am told by a very intelligent person y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> L<sup>d</sup> Ch. Justice of Ireland,<sup>a</sup> who came here from Tyrconnel, did, according to his instructions, apply himself to Mr. Temples relations, and M<sup>r</sup> Temple negotiated y<sup>t</sup> affaire, and being imposed on wth false assurances y<sup>t</sup>, if Major Generall Hamilton<sup>b</sup> was sent into Ireland wth advantageous proposall to Tyrconnel, he wou'd deliver up y<sup>t</sup> kingdom, and y<sup>e</sup> expence of sending over men might be saved, M<sup>r</sup> Temple, beeing soe imposed on, did wth great earnestness assert his opinion; w<sup>ch</sup> being proved to bee erronious by y<sup>e</sup> event, some hasty and inconsiderate personns did say some few dayes since to M<sup>r</sup> Temple that all y<sup>e</sup> blood shed in recovering Ireland wou'd call for vengeance from him and his family; the reflection on w<sup>ch</sup> made him, who wase naturally very melancolly, take y<sup>t</sup> fatall resolution w<sup>ch</sup> hath disapointed y<sup>e</sup> delivery of y<sup>r</sup> letter, for I have noe intention of following him wth it.

SIR EDMUND KING.

MY LORD,

May 23th, [16]89.

Having writt twice to enquire after y<sup>r</sup> Lord<sup>ps</sup> health and not hearing, I began to fear I forgot to direct them to the Weldon bagg, w<sup>ch</sup> might occasion their miscarriage. Pray give me leave to send this on the same arrand. By some I have heard yo<sup>r</sup> Lord<sup>p</sup> and familie have continued well, and by others y<sup>t</sup> yo<sup>r</sup> Lord<sup>p</sup> had som of yo<sup>r</sup> olde paines againe, w<sup>ch</sup> I am concern'd at, but hope the Tunbridge waters will prove more successfull than other methods have done. 'Twill be a kinde of presumption to write yo<sup>r</sup> Lord<sup>p</sup> any news, yet, being yesterday wth the Earle of Twedall,<sup>a</sup> who is come lately from Scotland on acc<sup>t</sup> of his health (and under my care), read me his letters from thence; that y<sup>e</sup> Lord Dundee came to Perth and tooke away y<sup>e</sup> Lord Blaire<sup>b</sup> and two more Conventionors and part of a troop raising there; that Mackey keeps in those parts, but Dundee sculks about; that the young men of y<sup>t</sup> kingdome are very unanimous and meet in divers places to exercise; that the new batterie against the Castle at Edenbrough is now finyshd and the mortar peices are planted, and they expect wthin a day or two to begin to use them.

Yesterday and to day the towne rings wth a report from several letters that those in Londonderry have made another sally and kill'd several thousands Irish and a great many great officers; and they say the Duke of B[erwick] is kill'd, and that the seige is raisd. Yesterday on told me he heard the K[ing] say ther is now 20 saile of Dutch men of warr at the Spitthead; but we are informd the French have taken 7 of the Dutch merchant ships worth 150,000<sup>l</sup> or more. Many other discourses mak a noise here; but soe few reports prove true, y<sup>t</sup> I rather aske your Lord<sup>ps</sup> pardon for w<sup>t</sup> I

July 11, [16]89.

I am very glad, my L<sup>d</sup>, to heare y<sup>e</sup> waters agree soe well wth y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>pp</sup><sup>e</sup>, and I am told y<sup>r</sup> presence will be requird here, and by y<sup>r</sup> freinds expected, in a short time, y<sup>t</sup> is, when Capt<sup>n</sup> Vaughan, Capt<sup>n</sup> Mole,<sup>a</sup> &c. come to be tryed on their impeachm<sup>t</sup>; for it is thought y<sup>e</sup> day will be appointed to morrow, when their answer is to bee given in. The Lords house have sat thes 3 dayes very close and long on y<sup>e</sup> bill for reversing y<sup>e</sup> judgm<sup>t</sup> ag<sup>t</sup> T[itus] Oates.<sup>b</sup> It hath been caryed ag<sup>t</sup> generall clauses in y<sup>e</sup> bill only by 2 votes, y<sup>e</sup> L<sup>d</sup> Devonshire and D<sup>r</sup> B[urne]t of Salisbury. The freinds of T. O. will have y<sup>e</sup> judgm<sup>t</sup> to be erroneous. Others say y<sup>e</sup> divesting him of his ecclesiastic orders wase erroneous, for y<sup>t</sup> lay not in their power to doe, and y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> rest of judgm<sup>t</sup> wase not erroneous but too severe. To morrow y<sup>e</sup> sages of y<sup>e</sup> law are to deliver their opinion whither one branch of a judgm<sup>t</sup> being erroneous doth not render y<sup>e</sup> whole judgm<sup>t</sup> soe. It is reported y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> L<sup>d</sup> Mountague<sup>c</sup> moved for an address to K[ing] W[illiam] to have y<sup>e</sup> L<sup>d</sup> Hallifax removed from y<sup>e</sup> Woolsack and Ser<sup>t</sup> Maynard placed ther; but his freinds wou<sup>d</sup> have had y<sup>e</sup> question waved. But my L<sup>d</sup> Hallifax put it, and very few seconded y<sup>e</sup> Lord Mountague. This day a bill was brought up

m<sup>t</sup> of both Houses wase this day, and w<sup>t</sup> will be done to morrow to reconcile both Houses in y<sup>e</sup> concern of y<sup>t</sup> worthy man T[itus]

shippe coming from Turkey, laden wth silke to y<sup>e</sup> valew of 50000<sup>ll</sup>, and y<sup>t</sup> 5 shippes laden wth provisions ar taken from within y<sup>e</sup> barre at Chester, and y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> French Toulon fleet hath joyn[ed] their other at Brest, 20 leagues from whence y<sup>e</sup> Dutch and English fleet ride and bides defyance to y<sup>e</sup> French.

Ther is much discourse this day, in coffee-houses, y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> notorious rebell Dundee is very potent and victorious and y<sup>t</sup> ther is great discord in y<sup>e</sup> parl<sup>t</sup> in Scotland.<sup>b</sup> But many think thes reports are raised by y<sup>e</sup> papists and not to be credited, for y<sup>e</sup> Gazette this day doth not mention any such thing.

SIR CHARLES LYTTTELTON.

MY LORD,

London, Aug. 8th, [1689].

I am very glad y<sup>e</sup> fright of y<sup>e</sup> children is over and y<sup>t</sup> you stay to drink y<sup>e</sup> waters w<sup>ch</sup> seeme to doe you good.

Y<sup>e</sup> news to day is: Kirk is in Derry, y<sup>e</sup> Irish drawn of, and y<sup>e</sup> protestants encamped w<sup>thout</sup> y<sup>e</sup> town.<sup>a</sup> If it be so, as I beleeve, when y<sup>e</sup> forces that goe hence are landed, I beleeve they will carry all before y<sup>m</sup>. Yesterday I discoursed wth a gentleman who was store keeper of y<sup>e</sup> ordnance in Ireland. He confirmed to mee w<sup>ht</sup> I had before heard, y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> reason y<sup>e</sup> Irish c<sup>d</sup> not take it was want of guns to batter it. He told mee there was but a very few in all y<sup>e</sup> kingdom of any force, and y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> country ab<sup>t</sup> Derry was so rotten they c<sup>d</sup> not be drawn thither. He seemed to me a sober intelligent man; but I can't conceive at this time of yeare but y<sup>e</sup> ground will beare any weight.

News this morning is y<sup>t</sup> Dundee is certainly dead.

It's thought y<sup>e</sup> par: will be adjournd next week. They voted this morn:, I think, y<sup>t</sup>, after such a day in 8<sup>obr</sup>, no body, men nor women, shall come to Court in any thing but wollen, except for linings, and all women, under such a quallity, to weare hatts.

CHARLES HATTON.

Your Lo<sup>ppe</sup> guessed very right, when you declared y<sup>e</sup> great offence y<sup>e</sup> act for wearing woollen wou'd give, for yesterday y<sup>e</sup> L<sup>ds</sup> in their House were besett wth soe numerous and mutinous a rabble, that this day, for their security, they were by their order guarded wth 2 companies of y<sup>e</sup> trayne bands, y<sup>e</sup> constables of Westminster wth their beades. My L<sup>d</sup> Maior ordred a regim<sup>t</sup> of y<sup>e</sup> militia to bee on y<sup>e</sup> guard in London, and y<sup>e</sup> L<sup>t</sup> [of y<sup>e</sup>] Tower y<sup>e</sup> severall companies in y<sup>e</sup> Hamlets. And y<sup>e</sup> sherif of Middlesex wase ordred to be in a readiness wth a posse comitatus. Last Tuesday ye Masters of y<sup>e</sup> company of silke weavers petitioned y<sup>e</sup> H. of C. y<sup>t</sup>, before y<sup>e</sup> wollen act passed, they might be heard by their counsell; but y<sup>e</sup> H. of C., to shew their bravour, rejected y<sup>e</sup> petition and passed y<sup>e</sup> bill, and y<sup>e</sup> same day sent it up to L<sup>ds</sup> House, whither yesterday all y<sup>e</sup> silke weavers, their wives, and children came. I beleeve ther were above 20000. Both y<sup>e</sup> pallace yards, y<sup>e</sup> Abby Church, Westminster Hall, y<sup>e</sup> Court of Request, y<sup>e</sup> Painted Chamber, wase, from 9 of y<sup>e</sup> clocke in y<sup>e</sup> morning till 2 in y<sup>e</sup> afternoone, soe crouded, it wase scarce possible for any person to pass. Coll. Birch<sup>a</sup> wase y<sup>e</sup> great promoter of y<sup>e</sup> Woolen Act, but, forseeing y<sup>e</sup> storme wase likely to fall on him, he fled into y<sup>e</sup> country; and it wase well he did, for, had he come to parl<sup>t</sup>, I verily beleeve he had been torn to peices. My L<sup>d</sup> North,<sup>b</sup> y<sup>e</sup> B<sup>p</sup> of Winchester,<sup>c</sup> and other Lords set up for Publicolas, made severall orations; but their eloquence prevayled very little, the rabble frequently interrupting y<sup>m</sup> wth their clamorous shouts, one and all, y<sup>t</sup> nothing sho'd satisfy y<sup>m</sup> till y<sup>e</sup> bill wase flung out. But at last, upon reiterated assurances y<sup>t</sup> care sho'd be taken

My Lady Essex Griffin<sup>a</sup> is sent to y<sup>e</sup> Tower for a Pewter Pot Plot, much more ridiculous then M<sup>rs</sup> Sellier[s] Meal Tub. My L<sup>d</sup> Griffin's cooke bespoke of a pewterer an oblong square pewter pot, to put brandy in; but it wase to have a false bottom, in w<sup>ch</sup> wase to be put some counterband goods to be sent into France. When the pot wase made, yesterday morning, betwixt one and two of y<sup>e</sup> clocke in y<sup>e</sup> morning, y<sup>e</sup> cooke and a foot boy went to call up y<sup>e</sup> pewterer, to come to my L<sup>d</sup> Griffins house to sodder in y<sup>e</sup> false bottom. The pewterer told y<sup>m</sup> he cou'd not ther doe it soe conveniently as at his own house, and bid y<sup>m</sup> fetch y<sup>e</sup> pot and he wou'd get ready his tooles and sodder in y<sup>e</sup> bottome presently. They went, fetch'd y<sup>e</sup> pot, and, as soon as y<sup>e</sup> pewterer had received it, he told y<sup>m</sup> he must know w<sup>t</sup> wase put into y<sup>e</sup> false bottome. They pretended that ther wase jewells. But y<sup>e</sup> pewterer, pulling what wase in y<sup>e</sup> false bottome, found letters to y<sup>e</sup> King and severall papers, apprehended y<sup>e</sup> cook and footman, and, sending for a constable, caried y<sup>m</sup> to y<sup>e</sup>

The L<sup>d</sup> Griffin is come in and layes all y<sup>e</sup> blame of y<sup>e</sup> late business on his lady, whose contrivance it wase without his privity; all w<sup>ch</sup> she averres, and y<sup>t</sup> a letter writ in his name in a hand very like his wase write by her direction by a very skilfull person in counterfeiting hands, who is since fled into France. You will easily imagine y<sup>e</sup> intreague of y<sup>e</sup> Pewter Pot. The managem<sup>t</sup> thereof and my L<sup>d</sup> Griffins delivering himself up furnishes this town wth various reports. If coffee house tales were to be credited, my L<sup>d</sup> Griffin hath impeached at least 20 personns of note.

The H. of C. have appointed a committee to examine by w<sup>ht</sup> meanes my L<sup>d</sup> Grffin had intelligence where y<sup>e</sup> severall stations of y<sup>e</sup> winter guard of y<sup>e</sup> navy were to bee, w<sup>ch</sup>, it is said, were resolved on on Saturday night and found mentioned in my L<sup>d</sup> Griffins paper y<sup>e</sup> next Monday morning.

My L<sup>d</sup> Preston, when he came up to y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>es</sup> Bench from y<sup>e</sup> Tower by habeas corpus to be bailed, wase frighted (I suppose) by a story ther told him, y<sup>t</sup> my Ld Montague had 80 bailifs ready to seize him when bailed, wth w<sup>ch</sup> he acquainted y<sup>e</sup> court, telling them he wase a peere of England. The court took noe notice of his peerage (nor wase it necessary), but told him y<sup>t</sup>, coming and going, he wase under y<sup>e</sup> protection of y<sup>e</sup> court; and y<sup>e</sup> under-Sherif of Middlesex being by, y<sup>e</sup> court charged him at his perill not to arrest my L<sup>d</sup>. Some dayes after, my L<sup>d</sup> Preston gave baile to my L<sup>d</sup> Montague to answer his action. But y<sup>e</sup> L<sup>ds</sup> House, being informed y<sup>t</sup> my L<sup>d</sup> Preston claimed to be a peer of England, ordered him yesterday to produce his patent, w<sup>ch</sup> wase signed at S<sup>t</sup> Germaines, in France, y<sup>e</sup> 1st of January last, and wax put to it, but noe impression, for y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>pp</sup><sup>e</sup> knowes y<sup>e</sup> great seale wase flung into y<sup>e</sup> Thames and soe cou'd not be affixed to it. This occasioned a great debate what crime it wase to produce such a patent, whither it wase high treason by endeavouring to counterfeit y<sup>e</sup> great seal; and y<sup>e</sup> judges were asked their opinions, w<sup>ch</sup> they were to give in to day, and my L<sup>d</sup> committed to y<sup>e</sup> Black Rod. To day y<sup>e</sup> judges g<sup>ave</sup> their opinions: That y<sup>e</sup> crime wase a high misdemeanor bordering upon treason, for w<sup>ch</sup> my L<sup>d</sup> wase this day committed to y<sup>e</sup> Tower. And yesterday my L<sup>d</sup> Griffin wase brought up to L<sup>ds</sup> House to be examined. He pleaded ignorance to all y<sup>e</sup> designe of y<sup>e</sup> Pewter Plot. But a letter wase produced, said to be under his hand, and one who had been his servant said he knew his hand and thought y<sup>t</sup> to be his hand but could not swear it; upon w<sup>ch</sup> my L<sup>d</sup> wase remanded to y<sup>e</sup> Tower and ordered to be brought up againe to-day. My L<sup>d</sup> Lovelace<sup>a</sup> acquainted y<sup>e</sup> House y<sup>t</sup> my L<sup>d</sup> Griffin wo'd take y<sup>e</sup> oathes, and offered to be his baile. But it seemes bare taking y<sup>e</sup> oathes will not

Yesterday y<sup>e</sup> Convocation met and y<sup>e</sup> 2 candidates for y<sup>e</sup> prolocutorshippe were D<sup>r</sup> Jane<sup>a</sup> and D<sup>r</sup> Tillotson, but D<sup>r</sup> Jane had so apparently y<sup>e</sup> majority of votes that his election wase confirmed wth very little dispute. It is reported he wase kick'd into y<sup>t</sup> office; for last Sunday he went to preach at Whitehall, according to his turne, y<sup>t</sup> afternoone, but wase put by and not permitted to preach, but B<sup>p</sup> Burnet did; w<sup>ch</sup>, it is thought, wase not to D<sup>r</sup> Jane[s] disadvantage in his election. D<sup>r</sup> Beveridge<sup>b</sup> did yesterday preach y<sup>e</sup> Latin sermon (w<sup>ch</sup> will be printed). He therein said our liturgy needed noe alteration; and it is now thought y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> major part of y<sup>e</sup> convocation will be of the same opinion, and therfore, as they adjourned themselves till Monday, it is thought that they will then be adjourned till a longer time.

Seraphic Horneck<sup>c</sup> preached ther in y<sup>e</sup> afternoon. His discourse wase about y<sup>e</sup> love and feare of God, and told his auditority (sic) y<sup>t</sup> one asked his (mystical) countryman Taulerus<sup>d</sup> whither, wase he certain y<sup>t</sup> God wou'd damn him, wou'd he yet love Him? He replied: He had 2 arms, one of humility, y<sup>e</sup> other of feare. Shou'd God damn him, he wou'd catch hold on Him with both his arms, and pull Him down with him into hell; and, having God ther, he cou'd not feare. I suppose this is a flight beyond y<sup>r</sup> country preachers, and I suppose you will not much lament y<sup>e</sup> misfortune in not having him parson of S<sup>t</sup> Andrews, Holborn.

MY LORD,

London, No. 28, [1689.]

I am very glad to find you at some ease by y<sup>rs</sup> I rec<sup>d</sup> last night. I have had no letter lately from my son, but I heare he is well; yet can't expect he sh<sup>d</sup> long continue so where he is. So many fall down ab<sup>t</sup> him, and, by all I can learn of their condition, I think it's liker to be streightned and made more uneasie every day y<sup>n</sup> other. At length I heare 'tis confesd on all hands y<sup>t</sup> K<sup>s</sup> James has taken Sligo, and, tho' it mayn't be true, yet tis s<sup>d</sup> our army deserts and many goes into y<sup>e</sup> enemy. I beleave there has bine a great mortality in our army, both officers and soldiers,<sup>a</sup> w<sup>ch</sup> has bine such a discouragem<sup>t</sup>, I question much whither it will not be very difficult to recruite y<sup>m</sup> agst y<sup>e</sup> spring; and I heare too there has bine no very good harmony among y<sup>e</sup> greate officers. I pittie y<sup>e</sup> old Gen<sup>l</sup> <sup>b</sup> extremely, who I take to be a good man as well as a greate captain, to have so much censure for his conduct in this expedition, his greate experience not allowing him to have so much contempt of his enemy as others have, and to overvalue his own untryed troopes. Y<sup>e</sup> H. of Com. has fallen heavily on y<sup>e</sup> Com<sup>ry</sup> of y<sup>e</sup> provisions, Capt. Shales<sup>c</sup> voting an adresse to y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>s</sup> to desire his Ma<sup>tie</sup> will enable y<sup>e</sup> Gen<sup>l</sup> to seize and secure his person and all his bookes and papers; and yesterday it was seconded wth another vote to adresse y<sup>t</sup> his M. will be pleased to let y<sup>e</sup> H[ouse] know who it is advised him to employ Shales.

It is in his garden grafted on a dwarfe stocke, and an excellent bearer. It is in shape and colour very like y<sup>e</sup> Spanish Bon Christien. He calles it y<sup>e</sup> Ashmole peare. I sent 4 grafts to Mr Knight this morning, desiring him to take care to convey y<sup>m</sup> carefully to y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>pp</sup>e; w<sup>ch</sup> he promised me he wou'd. The Bill of Recognition is at last past y<sup>e</sup> L<sup>ds</sup> H[ouse]. It wase all y<sup>e</sup> last weeke debated. The Court party wase divided. One great debate wase whither y<sup>e</sup> acts of y<sup>e</sup> last parl<sup>t</sup> (soe called) shou'd be confirmed or recognised. Y<sup>e</sup> Duke of Bolton <sup>a</sup> brought in y<sup>e</sup> bill, in w<sup>ch</sup> it wase declared y<sup>t</sup> all y<sup>e</sup> acts of y<sup>e</sup> last parl<sup>t</sup> were lawfull and rightfull. Y<sup>t</sup> clause wase opposed by y<sup>e</sup> Marquis Hallifax, L<sup>d</sup> Danby, Pembroke, Nottingham, and others, and, last Saterdag, it being put to y<sup>e</sup> question whither y<sup>e</sup> acts of y<sup>e</sup> last parl<sup>t</sup> were lawfull and rightfull, the negative carryed it, ther being 36 for y<sup>e</sup> negative, 31 for y<sup>e</sup> affirmative. But, presently after, to prevent y<sup>e</sup> ill consequence such a vote might have, being dispersed over y<sup>e</sup> nation, my L<sup>d</sup> Danby made a tack and moved y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> H[ouse] wou'd declare ther resolution to confirme and recognise those acts, and then, when they had made them lawfull, they were lawfull. And now those acts are recognised and declared that they are and were lawfull. The politick distinctions in parl<sup>t</sup> doe far, as to nicenes, exceed y<sup>e</sup> philosophical distinctions of y<sup>e</sup> schollmen; and perhapps ther may be new classes of Aquinas's and Duns's.

Wee went by water and called at a D<sup>rs</sup> house by y<sup>e</sup> way, wher I saw a very pretty flowering shrubb in his greenhouse, and I have enclosed 2 or 3 seeds, all I cou'd get; and if carefully sowed on a hotbed, I doubt not but they will come up.

This day Capt<sup>n</sup> Crone<sup>a</sup> wase y<sup>e</sup> 3<sup>d</sup> time tryed and found guilty of high treason; but, before y<sup>e</sup> jury brought him in guilty, they were shut up from 3 of y<sup>e</sup> clocke yesterday in y<sup>e</sup> afternoone till one this afternoone, after w<sup>ch</sup> in arrest of judgm<sup>t</sup> he pleaded an errour in y<sup>e</sup> indictm<sup>t</sup> as found by y<sup>e</sup> grand jury, for they signed it Billa Verra; and the judges have appointed to have it argued by councell before y<sup>m</sup> next Thursday.

I thinke from the first y<sup>t</sup> I heard it till to day I have thought of nothing else; but now indeed w<sup>t</sup> my uncle Hatton has by his foolishness brought himself into is some concern to me, and I belive will be so to y<sup>r</sup> Losp. when you hear.<sup>b</sup> Upon suspision and some discovery several people have been secured in the Tower: my Lord

Clarendon and my Lord Newburgh,<sup>a</sup> S<sup>r</sup> John Fenwick, Charles Turner, and several more;<sup>b</sup> and he, by the foolishness of his talk and the company he kept, together wth the accusation of one Brown, either a bookseller or printer, who is in custody, who sayd he delivered him a booke, w<sup>ch</sup> he published, call[ed] an Answer to a letter to a Bishop (w<sup>ch</sup> was writ by the Bishop of St. Asaph). In y<sup>e</sup> answer to it there are, it is said, very scurulous things on the Government; so, upon this, by the messenger of the press he was siezed on this morning and carried before the Councell, were he was soe thorowly bewitchd as to owne the haveing writ it, w<sup>ch</sup> after all I dont thinke he did, when, if he had not owned it, there was but one witness against him; but now he dexterously adds himself.

Y<sup>r</sup> Losp. speaking of coming up, tho you seem not to be more inclined to it then business oblige you, may not be improper upon this account. I hope it may be no prejudic to y<sup>r</sup> health, because you say nothing of it nor my brother and sisters. I begg my humble dutty to my Lady and service to my Aunt.

I received y<sup>r</sup> L<sup>dpps</sup> kind letter, w<sup>ch</sup> at this present time I doe much want. I could wish I wase able to give y<sup>r</sup> L<sup>dpps</sup> a true account of what M<sup>r</sup> Hatton is acused of; but I am very ignorant, for I did not in y<sup>e</sup> least know of anything tell y<sup>e</sup> messenger came for him, and then I had not time to inquire of him, and I cannot larne of any person that have seen it what is in it, but most doe say there is nothing in that can tuch his life. I trust in God tis true; but they have peeche him of high treason, w<sup>ch</sup> makes a great sound. He is kept a very close prisoner, for wee cannot get leave that any person should be admited, tho a warder is by. I have don all I can in y<sup>e</sup> world to get leave to goe into y<sup>e</sup> Tower, tho I am willing to be a close prisenor; for he hath noebody wth him, and, should he be sick, it may prove of a very ill consequence. As for getting him bailed, it is impossible to have it don, for there is noe hopes of his coming out tell next term, and his clos confinement I much fear will much prejudice his health. I beg of y<sup>r</sup> Ld<sup>pps</sup> to writ to y<sup>e</sup> President that he may have y<sup>e</sup> liberty of y<sup>e</sup> Tower, and that he may be aloud that sumtimes he may see his frends or those persons w<sup>ch</sup> he hath reall business wth concerning his one affairs. And allsoe I humble beg y<sup>r</sup> Ld<sup>pps</sup> will be pleased to writ to som of y<sup>e</sup> Privi Counsell, that I may have order to goe into y<sup>e</sup> Tower, for I will asure y<sup>r</sup> Ld<sup>pps</sup> I am under soe much sorrow that tis impossibell to be exprest, or can I support myself, for I can declare I have slept not one houre in a night sence he hath ben there. I have another favor to desire of y<sup>r</sup> Ld<sup>pps</sup>, that y<sup>n</sup> would be pleased to consider his condition, and that y<sup>e</sup> place is very chargeable, and noe person that he doe owe but sixpence to but is pressing and rude, w<sup>ch</sup> makes me exposed daly to great inconveniencys.

THE COUNTESS OF NOTTINGHAM.

Thursday, y<sup>e</sup> 3 of July, [1690.]

My Lord has at this present so little time to himself, he hopes your Lord<sup>sp</sup> will pardon his not writting to you, but will not be failling to doe what lyes in his power to serve him whom y<sup>r</sup> Losp. recommends to him, whoes proceedings as been after his usualle method, and would more have surprised had it been from anny other body but himself.

We are all in twone full of what concerns the fleet,<sup>a</sup> upon w<sup>ch</sup>

account my Lord Torrington is very hardly spoke of, whither diservedly or no, I must have a better insight to sea fight then I have at this distance to, to venter to judge whither he deserves it or no; but wone thing is certaine, y<sup>t</sup>, after the engagement was begun, he let all lye upon the Dutch squadron and did not engage at all wth the French fleet, w<sup>ch</sup> squadron had certainly been quite lost, but y<sup>t</sup> the Duke of Grafton, who in this expedition has got immortal fame, would fight, and wone ship more came to there assistance. It pleased God to give y<sup>t</sup> success to there undertaking y<sup>t</sup> wth twenty ships, w<sup>ch</sup> were the number of the Dutch and these two that came to there assistance, they made there party so good wth the French fleet, w<sup>ch</sup> was of eighty two ships, y<sup>t</sup> but wone Dutch ship was lost. There is eight disabled, but will in a little while be fitted up againe; of them, a Dutch Vice Admirall and a Rear Admirall and two captaines are killed; and of our, wone Captaine Botham and Captaine Pomeroy. There is a report y<sup>t</sup> six ships of the French are disabled, and y<sup>t</sup> they are toing them towards some of there owne ports, and y<sup>t</sup> the Plimouth squardon is gone after them. My Lord Steward<sup>a</sup> and my Lord Pembroke<sup>b</sup> have been so brave to offer their service to the Queene, and are gone downe to Dover. I suppose my Lord Pembroke will command his owne Marine regiment, and my Lord Stewart will either be a volontier or have some command.

It is past ten a clock. I am afraid the post will be gone.

MY LORD,

Shene, July 5th, [1690].

I was yesterday in town, where I heard such melancholy acct<sup>s</sup> of our fleet that I can't see w<sup>ht</sup> in our time scarce can be hoped will redeeme y<sup>e</sup> honor and the interest we have lost by the late action at sea, nor y<sup>e</sup> fatall consequence it may be like to be to y<sup>e</sup> nation and all Xtendom. The best acc<sup>t</sup> of it y<sup>t</sup> I c<sup>d</sup> learn is, that our fleet did not fight, while the Duch were torn to peeces, who have lost severall of theyr best men and ships, and y<sup>t</sup> we retreat toward y<sup>e</sup> Downs as fast as the wind (w<sup>ch</sup> is contrary) and y<sup>e</sup> tide will bring us, and y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> French at great rate pursue us. My L<sup>ds</sup> Devonshire and Pembroke are sent to y<sup>e</sup> fleet to examine these matters, but wth w<sup>ht</sup> powers to mend y<sup>m</sup> I know not. L<sup>d</sup> Torrington is most miserably reproached by y<sup>e</sup> mobile, and not y<sup>t</sup> I can find excused by any for his conduct; and y<sup>e</sup> letters he has sent doe but rather increase y<sup>n</sup> lessen it.

We are in huge expectation from Ireland, it being y<sup>e</sup> generall opinion y<sup>e</sup> armies have fought ere this;<sup>a</sup> but I must confesse I doe not beleve, for I think, if K<sup>g</sup> James can possibly, he will avoid fighting, and you know 'tis not very easie, and in a countrey where there are such strong posts, to force an army to fight. I had allmost forgot to tell you w<sup>ht</sup> is reported and some suspect to be true, y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> French have sent severall gallies full of landmen, wth a fleet of 20 men of war, into St. Georges Channell.

I heard it said that y<sup>e</sup> parliment is like to be adjourned but for a fortnight, and y<sup>n</sup> to meet and sit, there being a necessity for a supply, pour faire roler le monde; yet I phancy, if you doe at this time presse hard for y<sup>r</sup> guarrison, you may be more likely to get something for y<sup>m</sup> then in a better time. I am very sorry, my Lord, to find that y<sup>r</sup> paines have returned so ill on you, but I phancy y<sup>t</sup> w<sup>ht</sup> you say does add to y<sup>e</sup> uneasiness will abate. My son I hope does mend. He recovers his appetite and strength, but he coughs no blood.

<sup>a</sup> It will be remembered that the battle of the Boyne was fought on the 1st July.

THE SAME.

MY LORD,

Shene, July 30th, [1690.]

I assure you I had done y<sup>t</sup> matter some time since, but y<sup>t</sup> I waited for a fit pretence and opportunity to doe it, w<sup>ch</sup> I now took by my neighbour, S<sup>r</sup> H[enry] Capell; and I think her Ma<sup>tie</sup> was not dissatisfied wth me in it. She was pleased to tell me, as I thought I writt to y<sup>r</sup> L<sup>p</sup>, that, being my buisnesse wou'd not give me leave to attend it, I did very well to give it up to her hand; so she took it and put it in her pocket, I meane y<sup>e</sup> commission. I must needs own y<sup>t</sup> t'was very inconvenient to my present circumstance to quit or part wth 5 or 600<sup>li</sup> a yeare; yet I thank God I find so much ease by it, that yet I doe not repent mee and hope I never shall. But, if I had not quitted, truly I found I c<sup>d</sup> not keep it but upon such termes as it were not worth y<sup>e</sup> having, to live, as long as this war last, almost constantly upon it; for so I found it was expected and y<sup>t</sup> I sh<sup>d</sup> have bine commanded so to do, w<sup>ch</sup>, had I neglected, w<sup>d</sup> have suspended me, as it did, or turnd me quite out. The suspending I told y<sup>r</sup> L<sup>p</sup> of was but upon a pretence taken, not given, and, to deale more freely wth y<sup>r</sup> L<sup>p</sup>, I cou'd not feare y<sup>e</sup> meane applications I found w<sup>d</sup> be required of me from y<sup>e</sup> noble peer, my L<sup>d</sup> Marlboro, to keep myself in, and y<sup>e</sup> little affronts I rec<sup>d</sup> every day from y<sup>e</sup> officers who commanded there, as to one they thought they might presume to deale with for not being in y<sup>t</sup> favour at Court to support me agst it. But there is another thing behind w<sup>ch</sup> weighed as much and more wth me y<sup>n</sup> all this, and that was, I began to find myself pressed to sign an addresse of renouncing my late master, w<sup>ch</sup>, however, I had sufficiently done in effect, wou'd have bine so odious an ingratitude I despised any advantage to oblige me to, and, whoever they are that have put that a foot, I am confident have done theyr present Ma<sup>ties</sup> no service in.

I dont heare yet who does succeed me in y<sup>e</sup> gov<sup>mt</sup>, but, if the King be returned, who I heare was expected on Tuesday at Chester,<sup>a</sup> we shall soon know.

My Lord, if it ben't past y<sup>e</sup> scason, I beg you will give me a side of venison, baked, in 2 or 3 little pots. I wish your Lord<sup>ps</sup> health.

ELIZABETH HATTON.

Aug<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> 24, [1690].

Last Tuesday, my Lord, I got an order to have y<sup>e</sup> freedom of y<sup>e</sup> Tower. I went immediat thither. I thank God I found him very well in helth, and I did not return to y<sup>e</sup> Pell Mell tell this day, w<sup>ch</sup> I had not come home soe sune but to meet y<sup>e</sup> D<sup>trs</sup> and sirgent about my son, w<sup>ch</sup> is in a very weak condition. M<sup>r</sup> Hatton does assure me there was never anything offerd in y<sup>e</sup> least to him or proposed sence his confinem<sup>t</sup>. He fears he shall not be bailed. He hopes he shall have y<sup>e</sup> freedom of seeing his frends, w<sup>ch</sup> as yet he hath not. If y<sup>r</sup> L<sup>dpps</sup> could obtain that favor, it would be to his satisfaction. As for anything elce, he beleives it is to noe purpose for y<sup>r</sup> L<sup>dpps</sup> to give y<sup>r</sup>self y<sup>e</sup> trouble as yet to endeavor. He gives his most humble servis to y<sup>r</sup> Ld<sup>pps</sup>, my Lady. Sence I came to y<sup>e</sup> Tower her hath com to or 3 frends, but I suppose it will be forbid if any more should come, they hereing I had an order, w<sup>ch</sup> maid them conclude he had y<sup>e</sup> freedom of seeing his frends. If I did in y<sup>e</sup> least know that anything had been propose to M<sup>r</sup> Hatton, I doe assure y<sup>r</sup> Ld<sup>pps</sup> I would let y<sup>u</sup> know. My humble servis to my Lady and y<sup>r</sup> Ld<sup>pps</sup>.

I am y<sup>r</sup> Ld<sup>pps</sup> most faithfull, humble serv<sup>t</sup>,

E. HATTON.

My servis to my sister Hatton.

SIR CHARLES LYTTELTON.

MY LORD,

London, Sep<sup>r</sup> 6, [1690.]

I have had so much concern ab<sup>t</sup> my sons being wounded at a duell wth y<sup>e</sup> Major of y<sup>e</sup> Guards, Will Mathews, y<sup>t</sup> really I forget if I have told you of it. They fought at Fulham. My son was run through y<sup>e</sup> thigh, and tis a very great wound, but I hope y<sup>e</sup> worst is over and he is in a faire way to recover. He came hither, after he was drest upon y<sup>e</sup> place, in a coach; but bled all y<sup>e</sup> way. There is no letters from Ireland since Wednesday. One from y<sup>e</sup> Secretary of War there to M<sup>r</sup> Blath[way] is much talked of by that post, for it seemes to intimate y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> seige w<sup>d</sup> be raised<sup>a</sup> and y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> weather was so bad they feared they c<sup>d</sup> not bring of y<sup>e</sup> great gunns; but all other letters say they were preparing for another assault, w<sup>ch</sup> we waite wth some doubt of y<sup>e</sup> successe of, for now we heare of a very strong guarrison, as y<sup>t</sup> there are 4000 gentlemen in y<sup>e</sup> town, whom y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>s</sup> has excepted as to theyr estates, besides 2000 French; and truly so it seemes, by y<sup>e</sup> defence they make, that they are strong and desperate.

Nov<sup>r</sup> 11, [16]90.

I am very sorry, my dearest, y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>r</sup> son Robin continues soe very ill. God grant he may receive benefit by the advice of y<sup>e</sup> new surgeon. But, my dearest, I fear my threats will prove more effectual then I designed; for I told thee in jest if thou did pass Sunday thou shou<sup>d</sup>st be shut out, w<sup>ch</sup> is likely to prove true in earnest, for y<sup>e</sup> hungry head jaylor here is soe greedy of his pretended fee h<sup>e</sup> growes every day more and more barbarous and vexatious. Had he been educated at Ambonia, he cou<sup>d</sup> not be more merciless. And finding y<sup>t</sup> noe person will take notice of his extravagant usage of me, he is y<sup>e</sup> more encouraged therto.

Worthy Mr Ennis, who being turned out of his living here for not swearing and therefore not capacitated to exercise his ecclesiastick function in his own country, Scotland, is this weeke going to try whither he cannot more quietly live among y<sup>e</sup> heathens in America, and last Sunday in y<sup>e</sup> afternoon came to take leave of me, and brought wth him Mr Sawyer, who came to renew y<sup>t</sup> 2d time I saw him y<sup>e</sup> promise he made me y<sup>e</sup> first time I ever did, w<sup>ch</sup> is to be bayle for me. But on Monday morning came gingle-key, by his inasters order, foaming at y<sup>e</sup> warder for leting any person come to me, and charged him he shou'd let noebody come at me.

Certainly I shall be either tryed or bayled. If tryed, it is a strang outlandish barbarity not practic'd heretofore in England not to have y<sup>e</sup> advise of counsell to prepare for a defence, and, in order therto, to advise wth y<sup>m</sup>. I am certain, in y<sup>e</sup> Popish plot all y<sup>e</sup> prisoners had, some considerable time before their tryal, y<sup>e</sup> freedom of having their freinds and counsell come to them.

If I be bayled, it is very reasonable I shou'd endeavour to find out some persons who are willing to doe me y<sup>t</sup> kindness, and ag<sup>t</sup> whom ther can be noe exception; and y<sup>t</sup> I find very difficult; and prithe, my dearest, doe you endeavour w<sup>t</sup> you can to find out some, for, tho very probably I shall not have occasion for them, yet it wou'd be very vexatious to want them shou'd ther be occasion.

I am very much concern'd my brother Hatton shou'd for his health be forced out of town. Both for his sake and my own, I wish you cou'd contrive some way to acquaint my brother wth my distress and prevaile wth him to endeavour to get his son in law to stop y<sup>e</sup> mouth of y<sup>e</sup> hungry cur here, for I cannot doe it wth a crust, it wou'd be too costly.

My cloak transformed in a coat is too thinn for this cold place. Pray let y<sup>e</sup> linning of y<sup>e</sup> cloake be sent to y<sup>e</sup> taylor to interline y<sup>e</sup> coat. The buttons are as you ordred, and therefore you may be secure they please me, and I assure you they doe without any compliment; but, if they did not, I durst not find fault, w<sup>ch</sup> I know you will beleve.

A dieu, my dearest. If you come alone, you are welcome; but more, if wth liberty of my seeing my freinds.

If that honest Scot, Mr. Ennis (whose integrity is a disgrace to most Englishmen of his coate), comes to bid you farewell, pray acknowledge his kindness to me, y<sup>r</sup>self, and y<sup>r</sup> son.

ELIZABETH HATTON.

I would have waited on y<sup>r</sup> Ld<sup>shpps</sup>, but that I had not y<sup>e</sup> conveniency of a coach. I am hartily sorry to here y<sup>e</sup> ill news of y<sup>r</sup> Ld<sup>pps</sup> ill helth. I have received a letter from M<sup>r</sup> Hatton to send to y<sup>r</sup> Ld<sup>pps</sup>. My Lord Lucus doth y<sup>usc</sup> M<sup>r</sup> Hatton wth great unkindness. A Sunday last one M<sup>r</sup> Ennes came to take his leave, for he was goeing for Barbadoes, and brought wth him M<sup>r</sup> Sawyer of Kettering, a barrister of law, who offers himself to be baile. My Lord Lucus, being informed therewith, sent a repremand to y<sup>e</sup> warder for letting any person goe to him. After he hath petition for a triall, and 5 months close imprisonme<sup>t</sup>, to be deprived to advise wth counsell is very hard and never was done before. I beg y<sup>r</sup> Ld<sup>pps</sup>, and soe doe M<sup>r</sup> H., that y<sup>u</sup> would be pleased to move for more liberty. I suppose y<sup>r</sup> Ld<sup>pps</sup> hath herd how angrey my L<sup>d</sup> Lucus was for my L<sup>d</sup> Salisbury coming to dine wth M<sup>r</sup> Hatton, tho my L<sup>d</sup> first went to my L<sup>d</sup> Lucus; he not being at home, sent to y<sup>e</sup> Deputy. He was not at home. He called Major Hally, and he staid wth them tell my L<sup>d</sup> went away. Yet his Ld<sup>pps</sup> was in a great raig, and then forbid any to come to M<sup>r</sup> Hatton. I beg once more of y<sup>r</sup> Ld<sup>pps</sup> that he may not be yoused wth this severity. Y<sup>e</sup> inclosed I desire y<sup>r</sup> Ld<sup>pps</sup> to return. M<sup>r</sup> H. desires y<sup>r</sup> Ld<sup>pps</sup> to send to sound M<sup>r</sup>

Attur[ey] Gen[eral] and y<sup>e</sup> Solicitor, to know there intentions how they will proceed. Y<sup>r</sup> Ld<sup>pps</sup> was pleased to promis y<sup>u</sup> would. He shall be in distress of baile. I hope y<sup>r</sup> Ld<sup>pps</sup> will be pleased to procure him sum, for now in a few days he will have ocation for them, for there names must be sent to M<sup>r</sup> Arosmith, to see how he aproves of them. M<sup>r</sup> Hatton ordered me to writ to y<sup>r</sup> Ld<sup>pps</sup> yesterday, and this morning he hath writ to yr Ld<sup>pps</sup>. Perhapps he hath writ this to y<sup>r</sup> Ld<sup>pps</sup>; but I cannot tell wheather he hath or not makes me give y<sup>r</sup> Ld<sup>pps</sup> this troubell. My very humble servis to my Lady, my sister Hatton, and prety Miss.

THE COUNTESS OF NOTTINGHAM.

I am very glad to heare y<sup>r</sup> Losp. and all y<sup>e</sup> company gott so well to Maidwell, w<sup>ch</sup> I was so forgetfull not to thinke you were there but sent my letter to Kirby, w<sup>ch</sup> made it longer before it gott to you. My L<sup>d</sup> Finch <sup>a</sup> has writ a letter to my sister Betty, w<sup>ch</sup> I hope she has recievid. Hear is a most dismal story of my L<sup>d</sup> Salisberys two brothers <sup>b</sup> who he sent into France. They were at St. Germaines, and lay in a room together and quarreld, tis not yet known for what, but rise out of bed and tooke there swords, and fought, tell they both fell dwone, w<sup>ch</sup> was heared in room under them. They that were there run up to there chamber door, w<sup>ch</sup> they found fastend, but, forcing it open, found them weltring in thier blood and craling to ask one another pardon. Tis sayed there was little hopes that either could recover. Some letters say the eldest was already dead, tho wone cannot say this is certain; there are so manny letters that speake of it y<sup>t</sup> there relations are fearfull it is too true.

S<sup>r</sup> Edward Villars is to be a Viscount,<sup>a</sup> but wither English or no I cant tell. I begg the favour of y<sup>r</sup> Losp. to give my hum<sup>ble</sup> dutty to my Lady. I am y<sup>r</sup> Losp. most obedient duttyfull daughter,

A. NOTTINGHAM.

CHARLES HATTON.

March 5, [16]99.

I have, my Lord, been soe unfortunate y<sup>t</sup> I cou'd not possibly dispatch my business this weeke, but I doubt not but y<sup>e</sup> next weeke by y<sup>e</sup> Oundle coach to waite on y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>pp<sup>e</sup></sup>.

I wase yesterday at M<sup>r</sup> Ashmoles. Both he and M<sup>rs</sup> Ashmole are very ill. They give their humble service to y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>pp<sup>e</sup></sup>, and, had any of y<sup>e</sup> layers of his arbutus taken root, I had sent you some; for he ordred his gardener to dig y<sup>m</sup> up, w<sup>ch</sup> he did in my presence, but noe one layer had any root. He gave me some of y<sup>e</sup> fruit dried, w<sup>ch</sup> he sath if sown will grow. I have sent y<sup>m</sup> (in a box of toies w<sup>ch</sup> my wife sends to my nephews and neices), and wth y<sup>m</sup> some of y<sup>e</sup> great hawes, and also some of y<sup>e</sup> Rhodia Radix w<sup>ch</sup> must be planted in a pot. And I have likewise sent 3 little bundles of grafts of peare trees, much commended by M<sup>r</sup> Ashmole. They were cut of of standard trees. No. 1, an excellent peare to eat raw. No. 2, a very good baking peare and a great bearer. He calls it y<sup>e</sup> ladies on [own?] thigh. No. 3, y<sup>e</sup> Ashmole peare, some of w<sup>ch</sup> have weighed 20 ounces. It is an excellent baking peare. Wth those grafts are 2 bundles of grafts of his famous great haw tree, w<sup>ch</sup> must be grafted on white or blacke thorne and will doe very well to be planted in y<sup>r</sup> wilderness.

SIR CHARLES LYTTTELTON.

MY LORD,

Shene, May y<sup>e</sup> 30th, [1691].

THE SAME.

MY LORD,

Shene, June 18th, [1691].

The campagne has opened successfully in Ireland by y<sup>e</sup> taking of Ballimore by storm.<sup>b</sup> There is little from Flanders, as I heare, yet, but I must tell you of w<sup>ht</sup> I heare lately happened. Y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>s</sup> ordred a great detachment, and a generall officer to command it, to forrage. Y<sup>e</sup> officer refused to go, as below his post. Y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>s</sup> brought it to y<sup>e</sup> councill of war. Y<sup>e</sup> councill advised the officer had reason, and that there was no practisse or president that such a party had bine commanded by more y<sup>n</sup> L<sup>t</sup> Coll: or Coll. The King told y<sup>m</sup> he w<sup>d</sup> make a president himself, and did so, for he commanded y<sup>e</sup> party in person.

They have voted 1,600,000<sup>li</sup> for y<sup>e</sup> navy and passd y<sup>e</sup> bill of Additionall Excise. However, there seemes to be no great forwardnesse in the House for y<sup>e</sup> supplies. They w<sup>d</sup> not consider of y<sup>t</sup> for y<sup>e</sup> army, till they have more sattisfaction how y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>g</sup> intends to dispose of the forces; and I beleeve y<sup>e</sup> bill they are upon, concerning y<sup>e</sup> musters, will not at all be acceptable to him, because it will highly disgust all y<sup>e</sup> forces and render y<sup>e</sup> commands allmost impracticable, if there be not great amendm<sup>ts</sup> to y<sup>e</sup> bill. There is great expectation whispered of a project of peace, and in it to allow K<sup>g</sup> James a pention for life and y<sup>e</sup> P. of Wales tittle after King William's. I have told you news enough and more y<sup>a</sup>, it may be, is true; yet there is a greate deale more, as y<sup>t</sup> the peace with y<sup>e</sup> Turk is like to be concluded, that y<sup>e</sup> Emperor is dead or dying, y<sup>t</sup> Teckely <sup>c</sup> is beaten at y<sup>e</sup> releife of Warradin. Y<sup>e</sup> frigot supposed to be lost got of and come home.

There is a pamphlet lately come forth mitily sought after, and y<sup>e</sup> printer and author; tis stiled Y<sup>e</sup> Royall Martyr. 'Tis odds it has bine sent you as well as to others; for I heare it has bin generally dispersd.

SIR EDMUND KING.

MY LORD,

[2nd Jan. 1692.]

My being out of my bed 2 nights together wth M<sup>r</sup> Boyle,<sup>a</sup> who's death I foretold the first day he complaind of an alteration, w<sup>ch</sup> was Tuesday; and that day I tolde my L<sup>d</sup> Rochester and others of his friends and desir'd an other physician to be sent for, w<sup>ch</sup> was y<sup>t</sup> night; and at 10, as I told yo<sup>r</sup> L<sup>p</sup>, I was sent for to be in the house all night, but did not let him kno it, for fear of surprizing him (he was up all Tuesday). Wednesday morn was much better, but exceeding low and faint; would rise in the afternoon, and at 5 we met and desir'd him to goe to bed at 7. D<sup>r</sup> Stockholm<sup>b</sup> was to sit up; but at 10 or 11 he grew worss, so that my Lord Ranelough and Lady Thanet Dowager, etc., was sent for, and they sent for me. I was just hot in my bed, after something I had taken for my great colde; and, tho' I had not a graine of hope he would live till I came, yet, considering it was the last attempt I could make to serve won who for many years past had great affection for me and rely'd under God, as he often told me, upon my care, I was resolv'd to goe to him. It was one a clock in the night; but he was dead before I cam. His lamp went out for want of oyle; soe did his sister's too. He was buried last night at St. Martin's, and lyes by his sister.<sup>c</sup> The Bishop of Salisburie preachd his funerall sermon, and gave a large and true character becoming so great a man as he was, and whos 2<sup>d</sup> in universall knowledge, etc., 'twill be hard to finde. The Bishop saide he had a conversation wth him the better part of 29 years; but mine has been above 30 years, and, the last 10 or 12, not 4 days together from him, if in towne. It would make me look vaine to relate his affectionate expressions to me. He has been kept alive, by God's blessing, upon the dint of care severall years, to a woonder. But I aske yo<sup>r</sup> Lord<sup>ps</sup> pardon for being soe long upon this subject. Seeing the subject will bear it, I hope yo<sup>u</sup>ll excuse it.

I suppose yo<sup>r</sup> Lord<sup>p</sup> has heard of the barbarous murder of D<sup>r</sup> Clinch.<sup>a</sup> He liv'd in Browlow street in Holborn. Monday night last about 9 at night, 2 men came in a hacknie coach to call him to won not well; but he was not at home, and they said they'd come againe. About 10 the same night they came to the end of the street, and sent the coachman for him. He, poor man, tooke his cloak and went to them into the coach; they bid the coachman drive to the Py wthout Algate. But, as soone as they had him, they began their villanies; for his hat was found in the street near Barnards Inn, and we believe he was soon dead. And ther, to blind the coachman, they enquir'd for a man ther near Aldgate noebody knew. By this time the dead man began to be colde and stiffish, y<sup>t</sup> they was sure he was dead. When they cam back as far as Leaden Hall street, they call'd the coachman and gave him 3<sup>s</sup> 6<sup>d</sup> to buye 2 pulletts for supper. The man gott them quickly, and, when he cam back, ther was only y<sup>e</sup> D<sup>r</sup> dead and allmost colde; the murderers gon.

About 14 days since, 2 huffing men cam at night for me in a hack; but I was abroad. They came a 2<sup>d</sup> time and was angrie I was not at home. Then my wife sent them word they had best get another D<sup>r</sup>, (ther's enow,) for she beleivd, if I did com home, I would not goe wth them, nor should not if she could helpe it; soe they went away much out of humour.

But, before this, I escap'd an eminent danger of y<sup>e</sup> kinde, I bless God, w<sup>ch</sup> has stuck by me ever since. But this of Dr Clinch is a terrible thing. It was reported in the cittie it was me, to the great concern of many of my friends; but my coach being in y<sup>e</sup> cittie y<sup>t</sup> morning gave them another acc<sup>t</sup>, w<sup>ch</sup> was too true. My [L<sup>a</sup>] Falconberge cam to my house himselve and severall others.

Since I writ this, we are inform'd those taken upon suspition are the very persons y<sup>t</sup> murdered him; one Harison especially.

Just now the D<sup>rs</sup> wife and the Vice-president of the Colledg send to me to com in my gown to assist wth him at the pall this Satter-day night. I am not well, yet intend to goe, to pay the last respect to him.

SIR CHARLES LYTTTELTON.

London, Jan. 9th, [1692].

There is an odd report goes that, when Lady Ranelagh lay dying, there was a flame broke out of one of y<sup>e</sup> chimneys, w<sup>ch</sup> being observed by y<sup>e</sup> neighbours gave notice of it, and, the chimney being looked [into], there was no cause found for it in y<sup>e</sup> inside, yet appeared to flame for som time to those wthout; and y<sup>e</sup> same thing happened when Mr Boyl died; but y<sup>e</sup> B<sup>p</sup>, by y<sup>e</sup> way, mentioned nothing of it in his sermon, but abundance of y<sup>e</sup> flames of his charrrity.

I can say little to w<sup>ht</sup> you have heard more y<sup>n</sup> that I had y<sup>e</sup> report of it concerning Lady Fran: There are many ways proposed to raise y<sup>e</sup> money, but none yet that will do it, if agreed to, and makes some think will therefore conclude in an excise upon meate &c.

THE SAME.

MY GOOD LORD,

London, Jan. y<sup>e</sup> 28th, [1692].

I acknowledg y<sup>e</sup> noble kind offer you make me of y<sup>r</sup> house at Maidwell wth all the thankes in y<sup>e</sup> world, tho' I am not like to receiv the benefit by it you intended me; for I beleev I shall have some businesse will oblige me to stay here some time after I leave Shene, w<sup>ch</sup> wont be till y<sup>e</sup> later end of Ap<sup>l</sup>, and Hagley, I think, is much as it was in repaire when you were at it; so y<sup>t</sup>, after my rate of living is like to be there, there will need little to do but furnish it, w<sup>ch</sup> I have but too much of. As to my pictures, I have a good many of Sr Peter Lillyes, w<sup>ch</sup> I am told will not yeeld neer w<sup>ht</sup> they cost; and I doubt those of more esteeme will not be very ready money, unlesse mitily undersold, at this time, because there are so many auctions, as the Duke of Norfolks and others, of y<sup>e</sup> best collections.

But these are not all he has a mind to part wth, for there is scarce anything talked of but his endeavoring to be divorced from his wife,<sup>a</sup> and w<sup>ht</sup> y<sup>e</sup> wittnesses have sworn in y<sup>e</sup> Lords House ab<sup>t</sup> her amours wth Mr Germain. To morrow she is there to make her defence, w<sup>ch</sup> she must have a great deale of assurance to be able in person to do, as I heare she intends, and has bine once there allready to give em a pritty good essay. She is not over bashfull where her honor and innocence are at stake. I don't know if you have heard that Mr Germain is y<sup>e</sup> supposed bastard of y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>g</sup> William's father, as is Mons<sup>r</sup> de Lawn another, who is y<sup>e</sup> Queens secretary. The K<sup>g</sup> was all day at y<sup>e</sup> Lords house a Tuesday to heare y<sup>e</sup> evidence at y<sup>e</sup> Lords House; and 'tis s<sup>d</sup> y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>g</sup> and Q. have expressed a great deale of warmth for y<sup>e</sup> Duke. But she has a strong party in y<sup>e</sup> House however, and y<sup>t</sup> of y<sup>e</sup> Court faction to support her. My L<sup>d</sup> Nottingham is agst her.

We have no news from abroad, and I beleeeve y<sup>e</sup> ports are froze up. Some thing may be expected, when they are open from this hard frost.

My L<sup>d</sup> Churchill's disgrace has yet made no great change but in y<sup>e</sup> disposal of his places; nor has it had any consequence to his b<sup>ts</sup>, but that one of y<sup>m</sup> who was cornet to y<sup>e</sup> troop is made 1st L<sup>t</sup>.

MY LORD,

W<sup>ht</sup> you seeme not to heare of ab<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> reason of L<sup>d</sup> Marlboro: disgrace I thought I had given you a good acc<sup>t</sup> of, because it all came from L<sup>d</sup> Carmarthen, L<sup>d</sup> Nottingham, and L<sup>d</sup> Mar: himself; and all agreed in this, that y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>g</sup>, besides other things of high misdemeanor, said he had held correspondence wth K<sup>g</sup> James. I suppose you know L<sup>d</sup> Twaddale is Chan: of Scotland, who made y<sup>e</sup> D. Hamilton y<sup>e</sup> complim<sup>t</sup> to desire he might receive his com<sup>n</sup> from his hand, as Presid<sup>t</sup> of y<sup>e</sup> Councill, and at the same time making him a visit; this condescention he choosing y<sup>e</sup> rather to make, as 'tis said, because he w<sup>d</sup> avoid chocquing him, because he affected that honor for himself. He did indeed, the next day, call the Councill together; but did not come himself, nor has he bine there since, and they say has expressd his discontent other[wise] and bin at theyr conventicles, for such they will yet have, tho' the presbittery be settled in all the churches.

Something is the matter. The K<sup>s</sup> is ill satisfied wth y<sup>e</sup> Assembly; and there is an order gon down to breake it up, w<sup>ch</sup> some think will put the rigid party into a flame and beget some disorder in y<sup>e</sup> kingdom. The L<sup>d</sup> Norfolks bill was againe upon the tapis to-day; but I can give you no acc<sup>t</sup> of it, but that I heard y<sup>t</sup> 2 of his wittnesses were prooved perjured in y<sup>e</sup> L<sup>ds</sup> House at this triall. Last night there was a great ball at Kensington, and, after, y<sup>e</sup> French made a great supper in y<sup>e</sup> Kings eating room for as many as c<sup>d</sup> sitt at it, and in another room wine and bread for every body la mode de Versailles. I do think of sending my pictures to M<sup>r</sup> Walton's,<sup>a</sup> for, if I dont sell them wth y<sup>e</sup> house, w<sup>ch</sup> I dont expect, I shant know where to put them.

MY LORD,

disposal of my pictures. Y<sup>e</sup> method I use wth him: I send y<sup>m</sup> to a house closs by him, for he has not room in his own, it is allready so full, and there he cleanes them and mends w<sup>ht</sup> is worn or torn; and, after, I am to get a couple of painters who, together wth himself, appraise y<sup>m</sup>; w<sup>ch</sup> appraisem<sup>t</sup> the 2 painters set theyr hands to y<sup>e</sup> list of; and then they will be exposed in an auction, but such as will be privately bought. And one I sold so here a Satturday, w<sup>ch</sup> was a half length of Antonio Mores drawing, for 30<sup>li</sup>. My ink is so bad I can scarce make it doe. Y<sup>t</sup> picture was crackt quite through and on y<sup>e</sup> side of y<sup>e</sup> face, w<sup>ch</sup> made it 10<sup>li</sup> y<sup>e</sup> wors.

I have a very good copy, w<sup>ch</sup> you may remember to have seen upon my staires, of Ch: y<sup>e</sup> 1st upon y<sup>e</sup> white hors. Y<sup>e</sup> originall is Vandike and y<sup>e</sup> copy Remee. If I had y<sup>r</sup> hall or a good staire case to put it, I sh<sup>d</sup> not be tempted to sell it. If you know anybody it will fit, pray tell em of it; 50<sup>li</sup> will be y<sup>e</sup> lowest price of it.

One writt me word last night y<sup>t</sup> my Fort Major was sent up by my L<sup>t</sup> Gov<sup>r</sup> wth a gentleman he arrested at Sherenesse, who brought him a message from K<sup>s</sup> James and Q. But he did not unscrew y<sup>e</sup> key, so saw not y<sup>e</sup> letter, but sent it up to my L<sup>d</sup> Shrewsbury wth y<sup>e</sup> gentleman prisoner; and this is all I know of it as yet.

MY LORD,

Since Thursday I rec<sup>d</sup> a letter from C[apt?] Crawford, giving me a more particular acc<sup>t</sup> of y<sup>e</sup> bringing him y<sup>e</sup> message and letter in y<sup>e</sup> key, w<sup>ch</sup> was pretended to be from Q. Mary in France. The man, wth y<sup>e</sup> greatest seeming secrecy in y<sup>e</sup> world, told him privately he had a letter from her to him, w<sup>ch</sup> he immediately so rated him he was mitily surprized, and just as he was going to committ him he urged him to take y<sup>e</sup> letter, w<sup>ch</sup> he s<sup>d</sup> he need not scruple, it was so privately done up in y<sup>e</sup> pipe of a key. But y<sup>n</sup> he calld in out of y<sup>e</sup> next room to see and heare w<sup>ht</sup> was offred him and w<sup>ht</sup> he had done to resent it, and, when he saw he w<sup>d</sup> commit him, y<sup>n</sup> he pulld out a passe or gen<sup>ll</sup> protection from my L<sup>d</sup> Sh[rewsbury], w<sup>ch</sup> Crawford s<sup>d</sup> sh<sup>d</sup> serve him from being used like a rogue, as he deserved, but not from being a prisoner; and so he sent up y<sup>e</sup> key and lett<sup>r</sup> in it unscrewd to my L<sup>d</sup> Sh., begging y<sup>t</sup>, when his Mat<sup>ie</sup> had inquired into it and was sattisfied, he might be righted. Y<sup>e</sup> man told him soon after that, as he had resented y<sup>e</sup> thing, it might doe him y<sup>e</sup> greatest right imaginable, for y<sup>e</sup> King, he said, saw y<sup>e</sup> key and letter and sent him down to try him &c.

The only news we have yet heard is y<sup>t</sup> great preparations are making to send forces to Guernsey and Jersey, and y<sup>t</sup> engineers are going thither to fortify those islands, whereof some of y<sup>e</sup> cheifest officers are to be made governors, as y<sup>e</sup> common report is; w<sup>ch</sup> I thought fit to hint to y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>pp</sup>, who will, I assure myself, receive a more perfect and fuller account then I can give.

Harrison is condemned for y<sup>e</sup> murder of D<sup>r</sup> Clinch. All provisions here are very dear. A loaf of bread, w<sup>ch</sup> used to cost but 9 pence, costs now 12<sup>d</sup>. ## SIR CHARLES LYTTTELTON.

Ap<sup>ll</sup> 18th, [1692].

It may be, you have not heard y<sup>t</sup> my L<sup>d</sup> Monmth layd a wager in a coffee house before he went away (w<sup>ch</sup> was but yesterday), as they say, for Guernesey, 40<sup>li</sup> to 10 that y<sup>e</sup> French w<sup>d</sup> make a descent here before we made any in France. Whither this have given more ground for this allarum, or y<sup>e</sup> coming over of severall persons lately from K<sup>s</sup> James, who have spread abroad y<sup>t</sup> report, nay, that he is actually embarqued wth an army of 30000, whereof 8000 are hors, and Marshall Belfond<sup>a</sup> to command y<sup>m</sup> under him, I cannot tell; but 'tis in every ones thought and mouth, there is like to be an attempt of landing an army, and y<sup>t</sup> very soon. And to make it more practicall, all y<sup>e</sup> forrain gazetts speake of a great army upon y<sup>e</sup> coast of Normandy, and that the French fleet is allready joynd and out. Ours is, in y<sup>e</sup> meane time, very sickly, and wanting many thousands of their complim<sup>t</sup> to man them. Y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>g</sup> is expected too here very suddenly. The exchequer shut up yet. There went away to-day 12 collonells for Flanders. L<sup>d</sup> colchester,<sup>b</sup> it's said to-day, is taken coming over from thence in y<sup>e</sup> Crown frigot wth others. I heare y<sup>r</sup> L<sup>p</sup> has a letter sent you from y<sup>e</sup> Councill to hasten to y<sup>r</sup> command, w<sup>ch</sup> I wish y<sup>r</sup> L<sup>ps</sup> health were such you c<sup>d</sup> readily obey.

I had y<sup>r</sup> L<sup>ps</sup> and give you many thanks for y<sup>e</sup> acc<sup>t</sup> you are pleasd to give mee of y<sup>e</sup> sayres, w<sup>ch</sup> is little encouragem<sup>t</sup> to send to y<sup>m</sup>; besides we are so allarund ab<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> French that I have no mind to lay out my mony till y<sup>t</sup> be over, for they tell us K<sup>g</sup> James has bin twice aboard y<sup>e</sup> French fleet and put out to sea and driven back by ill weather, not wthout great damage to his transport ships and losse of men. We have now 80 sayle, y<sup>e</sup> Duch quota being come wth L<sup>d</sup> Portland, who came last night, ready, and orders to go to y<sup>e</sup> westward; and tis my poor opinion y<sup>e</sup> French won't think it advizeable to try theyr fortune a 3<sup>d</sup> time, when there is such a fleet to trouble y<sup>m</sup>. Here is every night such breakeing of houses, and in y<sup>t</sup> bold

Shene, May 10th, [1692].

My L<sup>d</sup> Feversham was sent for and told y<sup>t</sup>, by reason of y<sup>e</sup> great obligations he had rec<sup>d</sup> from K<sup>g</sup> James, y<sup>e</sup> gov<sup>mt</sup> c<sup>d</sup> not be sattisfied wth his conduct, unlesse he w<sup>d</sup> retire into Holland till y<sup>e</sup> storme was over. I heare his answer was y<sup>t</sup> he had given no ground to give y<sup>e</sup> gov<sup>mt</sup> any reall ombrage; y<sup>t</sup> he had much buisnesse here, both of y<sup>e</sup> Queenes his M<sup>rs</sup> and his own; and y<sup>t</sup> he resolved not to banish himself, but claimd his right of a peer and subject. My L<sup>d</sup> Fanshawe brought his habeas corpus yesterday and had it; but, when he came to y<sup>e</sup> Hall, the judg told him he was charged wth high treason and he c<sup>d</sup> not be bailed, so went back to y<sup>e</sup> Tower. I heard yesterday my L<sup>d</sup> Exeter is sent for in custody.

I have but one little hors, but if I had 2, and I dare not buy one for feare of being thought to do so for w<sup>ht</sup> I little think of, I w<sup>d</sup> go neer to be wth you for a few days at Kirby, and so slip down to Hagley, to put matters a little to rights there before I remove wth my little family, w<sup>ch</sup> I design to do as soon as we can dispose of w<sup>ht</sup> we have yet left here. But I have some doubt, if I were there now, I might be more unquiet y<sup>n</sup> I am here. Our fleetes and y<sup>e</sup> Duch are joynd, and a great fleet it is; and probably, if the French will venture it, there may be a battle in few days. 'Tis a strong east wind to keep y<sup>m</sup> back and to carry us on theyr coast. I heard y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>g</sup> will be here in a few days. I wish y<sup>r</sup> L<sup>p</sup> health and y<sup>e</sup> nation peace and y<sup>e</sup> protestant religion.

I heard L<sup>ds</sup> Macklesfield and Mountague refused to sign L<sup>d</sup> Mallbo: warrant for his committment. He is s<sup>d</sup> to be kept closs prisoner, but his lady has got leave to be lock'd up wth him, tho it's s<sup>d</sup> he sent to her not to ask it, but to stay wth the P<sup>sse</sup> and take her fortune. This day, my L<sup>d</sup>, a proclamation is come forth signifying y<sup>t</sup>, y<sup>e</sup> fleet being out and all things soe well prepared ag<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> publick enemy, it is thought fit to prorogue y<sup>e</sup> parliament to y<sup>e</sup> 14th of June. The rencounter I told y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>pp</sup>e of in my last betwixt y<sup>e</sup> L<sup>d</sup> Thanet and L<sup>d</sup> Clare <sup>a</sup> was very true; but y<sup>e</sup> L<sup>d</sup> Thanet was not hurt in y<sup>e</sup> thigh but shoulder, and wth parrying wth their left hands y<sup>e</sup> thrusts y<sup>e</sup> hands of both y<sup>e</sup> lords were cut. But it is said my L<sup>d</sup> Thanet, before company came in and parted y<sup>m</sup>, had his sword ag<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> L<sup>d</sup> Clare breast, but very generously wou<sup>d</sup> not thrust home. L<sup>d</sup> Yarmouth is sent to y<sup>e</sup> Tower and his lady is wth him. The L<sup>d</sup> Middleton, L<sup>d</sup> Dunmore, and S<sup>r</sup> Andrew Forrester (all 3 in y<sup>e</sup> proclamation) were seized yesterday. My wife and self are to y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>pp</sup>e, Lady Hatton, and all at Kirby most faithfull and very humble servants.

Yesterday morning y<sup>e</sup> prisoners in y<sup>e</sup> Tower were brought upon theyr habeas corpus to y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>gs</sup> Bench, and gave baile for each 4 severall men. My L<sup>d</sup> Marlborow had L<sup>d</sup> Hallifax, Carbery,<sup>a</sup> Shrewsbury, and M<sup>r</sup> Boyle; but it was but for 6000<sup>li</sup>. The Lords who were not prisoners and others who removed themselves gave baile at y<sup>e</sup> Ch. Justice chamber. My Lord Lich: gave in 15000<sup>li</sup> baile; and there were some Lords, as L<sup>d</sup> Midleton, Huntington, Dunmore,<sup>b</sup> S<sup>r</sup> And: Forrester, sent back to y<sup>e</sup> Tower, Aron Smith having given oath he had evidence agst them, w<sup>ch</sup> he s<sup>d</sup> he was not readie to produce; but, tho' he were asked by y<sup>e</sup> court and y<sup>e</sup> councill for y<sup>e</sup> prisoners why they were not readie and if they were sick or beyond sea, no answer was made; and how many wittnesses there were, and whither they were evidence agst all, to w<sup>ch</sup> there was no answer made. But y<sup>e</sup> court, after consulting the act, thought fit to send y<sup>m</sup> back, w<sup>ch</sup> some talk much of, especially for my L<sup>d</sup> Huntington being a peer, and y<sup>e</sup> parlim<sup>t</sup>, as it were, sitting. The officers of y<sup>e</sup> army y<sup>t</sup> were baild were, after, sent for by my L<sup>d</sup> Lemster<sup>c</sup> and confined wth a guard upon them; and so continue, it's said, till they have bine tried by a court marshall and cashiered.

There was a talk to night that there has bine some men landed lately in Scotland, and that Marquis de Crequy is wth y<sup>m</sup>. They expect to heare of a battle in Flanders; tho' I heard one y<sup>t</sup> has, I think, pritty good intelligence say that both armyes are unwilling to ingage. July 25, 1692. O. S.

The gazet to-day for o<sup>r</sup> comfort tells us y<sup>t</sup> in y<sup>e</sup> engagem<sup>t</sup> at Enquien y<sup>e</sup> French lost as many as y<sup>e</sup> confederat, w<sup>ch</sup> y<sup>e</sup> Dutch gazetts likewise reports wth this addition, y<sup>t</sup> it needs a confirmation, and y<sup>t</sup> tho y<sup>e</sup> confederate army outnumbered y<sup>e</sup> French by 15000, for y<sup>e</sup> French were but 58000 and y<sup>e</sup> confederates 73000, yet y<sup>e</sup> French were soe advantageously posted y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> confederates were forced to retreat wth y<sup>e</sup> loss of many considerable officers and 2000 men slain and 1000 wounded, as is reported; but y<sup>e</sup> certain loss cannot be yet known.

We have had noe intelligence this fortnight w<sup>t</sup> wase become of o<sup>r</sup> great fleet and all our transport shipp, but y<sup>e</sup> Gazett this day tells us y<sup>t</sup>, God be praised, they [are] all safe in y<sup>e</sup> Downs; and I doe not hear y<sup>t</sup> in this glorious expedition we have lost many men. But there is very terrible news from Jamaica, where an earthquake and hurrican hath been and in less than 2 minuits destroy'd and sunke y<sup>e</sup> greatest part of Port Royall with all y<sup>e</sup> factories, store-houses, and magazins. It is said y<sup>e</sup> church is sunk 6 fathom under water; that ther and in other places of y<sup>e</sup> island above 5000 people are destroyed; and y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> whole island wase under a dreadfull consternation when y<sup>e</sup> last letters came away, fearing y<sup>e</sup> return of y<sup>e</sup> earthquake and least y<sup>e</sup> Moores and slaves shou'd, according to y<sup>e</sup> example of others, rebell. SIR EDMUND KING.

MY LORD,

Sept. 8, [16]92.

I cannot be satisfied but to send this to enquire how yo<sup>r</sup> Lord<sup>p</sup> and yo<sup>r</sup> familie does, and how M<sup>r</sup> Hatton is since my laste to yo<sup>r</sup> Lord<sup>p</sup> y<sup>t</sup> I writ in answe<sup>r</sup> to yo<sup>r</sup> Lord<sup>ps</sup> concerning his illness, and to enquire if you have felt anything of a frightfull earthquake we have had here this Thursday, about 2 a clock. I had been out of towne, just come home; and, as I was at dinour in my dineing roome (one paire of stairs), on a suddaine the table and room shakt, put us all into a strange confusion. My wife said: "M<sup>r</sup> King, w<sup>ts</sup> this?" Her woman y<sup>t</sup> was at diner wth us started from the table, as pale as death, and cri'd: "Oh! an earthquake!" I rise from the table too in the universall motion I saw and felt; it lasted about a minute and halfe. Whilst we was talking of it, a neighbour cam in and ask't if we perceivd anything of an earthquake, for a great many gentlemen came running into the coffee house, pale and frighted, out of their houses, and the women and children in great numbers cam runing out of theire houses too into the street in great amazment; and it's the wholl talke now all the towne over; much more frightfull than w<sup>ht</sup> we felt. Some say the Exchange in Cornhill was heard to crack; and the people cam runing downe from thence, for fear it should fall. I have been since at Westminster wher was the same alarm; and a message from Kensington about the same thing ther. You'l here more of w<sup>t</sup> is past. I pray God we may have no 2<sup>d</sup> part of it. But all pray God to keep off the judgments we have deserv'd. This is a serious thing, and so thought of by yo<sup>r</sup> Lord<sup>ps</sup> faithfull humble servant,

EDM. KING.

CHARLES HATTON.

September 10, [16]92

We had here, my L<sup>d</sup>, last Thursday, at 55 minutes past 2 of y<sup>e</sup> clock in y<sup>e</sup> afternoone, an earth-quake, y<sup>e</sup> effects of w<sup>ch</sup> were more or less felt, not only over all London and Westminster but, it is reported, as far as Canterbury and Cambridge. I hope y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>ppe</sup> wase free from it at Kirby. I wase at home; but none in my little house were sensible of it, w<sup>ch</sup> occasioned my not mentioning it to your L<sup>ppe</sup>. In all places those who were highest were most sensible of it. A person of very great truth and sincerity assured me his bookes, w<sup>ch</sup> were on shelves in his chamber, were flung down. M<sup>r</sup> Lownds in y<sup>e</sup> Pell-Mell, a watch maker and very honest man, did averr to me y<sup>t</sup> all his clocks did soe shake he thought they wou'd have fallen down. In severall places all y<sup>e</sup> people ran into y<sup>e</sup> streets out of their houses in great distraction, and in many places y<sup>e</sup> corner houses in y<sup>e</sup> streets were seperated from y<sup>e</sup> adjacent houses.

Last Thursday Admirall Russell came to town, but very privately, to avoyde y<sup>e</sup> triumphall reception he much feared wou'd have been made for him, and for y<sup>e</sup> like reason chose to come by Hampton rather then Portsmouth. But I doe not heare of any triumphant arches w<sup>ch</sup> were making for him, neither for routing 44 French shippes wth 90 saile, nor for saving y<sup>e</sup> fleet by disobeying his orders by refusing to comply wth y<sup>m</sup>, w<sup>ch</sup> his friends y<sup>e</sup> commonwealth men say wase y<sup>e</sup> most meritorious and deserved better to have a marble statue erected for him then his first, tho upon y<sup>t</sup> account his relations had agreed for one. But it's thought his humility will not let him comply wth their desires; for he is soe humble he declares he will resign up all his publick employments, and not yeild, as he did this last summer, to any pressing importunity to take any publick employment upon him, till he can better doe service for y<sup>e</sup> good of y<sup>e</sup> commons of England then he finds in this juncture of affaires he can.<sup>a</sup>

I have, my L<sup>d</sup>, enclosed y<sup>e</sup> votes of Thursday and yesterday, for this day's votes you must not exspect till Tuesday's post. Yesterday it wase moved in y<sup>e</sup> H. of C. y<sup>t</sup> it shou'd be voted y<sup>t</sup> this day the non pursuing y<sup>e</sup> famed victory at sea shou'd be enquired into. But M<sup>r</sup> Montague told y<sup>e</sup> house he was surprised y<sup>t</sup> motion shou'd be made, for it seemed to reflect upon y<sup>e</sup> victorious admiral who he thought had merited y<sup>e</sup> thankes of y<sup>e</sup> House; to w<sup>ch</sup> y<sup>e</sup> House agreed, and voted him thankes, w<sup>ch</sup> accordingly he had. After w<sup>ch</sup> it wase declared y<sup>t</sup>, y<sup>e</sup> House haveing therby manifested their satisfaction in his conduct, it cou'd not reflect upon him to enquire into y<sup>e</sup> non pursuit of y<sup>e</sup> victory; and accordingly they did this day, and have made some progress therein, and have, for their farther satisfaction, voted S<sup>r</sup> Jo. Asby<sup>a</sup> to be sent for.

The Lords are still upon y<sup>e</sup> first business they entred upon, and have treated soe roughly y<sup>e</sup> worthy Aaron Smith, y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> modest man takes it soe much to heart y<sup>t</sup> an affidavit wase this day made in y<sup>e</sup> H. of L<sup>ds</sup> that he wase not in a condition to appeare as he wase required.

most faithful servants.

C. HATTON.

THE COUNTESS OF NOTTINGHAM.

The 13 of December, [1692].

I am very glad to heare that y<sup>r</sup> Losp. and all are well at Kirby. I thinke I shall never meet wth M<sup>rs</sup> Portman, for I have been several times to waitt on her, and she done me the favor to come to me, but wee have both always been gon out.

We have but little news here except of killing. That wretched creature my Lord Mohun,<sup>a</sup> who is not sixteen years old tell April next, about a fortnight agoe was in a drunken quarrel wth my Lord Kennedy;<sup>b</sup> on Friday night, wth one Hill<sup>c</sup> about his one age, killed poore Monfort<sup>d</sup> the player, and, as tis related, very barbarously.

I wont this post trouble my Lady, nor this time y<sup>r</sup> Losp. more wth

Y<sup>r</sup> most obedient duttyful daughter,

A. NOTTINGHAM.

CHARLES HATTON.

Jan 24, [16]93.

I suppose, my L<sup>d</sup>, y<sup>e</sup> votes herein enclosed will much surprise, for therby it is ordered that K[ing] W[illiam] and Q[ueen] M[ary] Conquerours and Dr. Burnett's Pastorall Letter are to morrow to be burnt by y<sup>e</sup> hangman.<sup>e</sup> God's Way of Disposing of Kingdomes, by y<sup>e</sup> B<sup>p</sup> of S<sup>t</sup> Asaph,<sup>f</sup> very narrowly escaped y<sup>e</sup> like destiny. Amongst those who signalized their favour to Dr. B. in speaking in his behalf

I am to y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>ppe</sup> and all at Kirby a very humble servant,

C. HATTON.

MY LORD,

Jan. 31, [16]93.

This day my Lord Mohun wase tryed. My L<sup>d</sup> Danby sat as L<sup>d</sup> High Steward. He had y<sup>e</sup> largest and finest coach and y<sup>e</sup> richest liveries I have seen. Y<sup>e</sup> tryall held from twelve a clocke till after five; then y<sup>e</sup> Lords went to y<sup>e</sup> Lords House to debate, and severall of y<sup>e</sup> Lords slipt away, w<sup>ch</sup> occasioned a long debate whither or noe y<sup>e</sup> Lords who slipt away shou'd not be sent for by y<sup>e</sup> Black Rod and

committed prisoners. But y<sup>e</sup> great debate was whither or noe in murder all persons accessory, assisting, and present are to be accounted principalls. This debate held 3 houres, and the Lords have adjourned till to morrow morning to give their judgment; and y<sup>e</sup> generall opinion is my L<sup>d</sup> Mohun will be acquitted.<sup>a</sup> I wase not at y<sup>e</sup> tryal. My L<sup>d</sup> Litchfield sent me a ticket, but I gave it M<sup>r</sup> Gylby.

To morrow Whitney,<sup>b</sup> y<sup>e</sup> famous highwayman who wase reprieved last Fryday (upon a pretence y<sup>t</sup> he would discover a plot to take away y<sup>e</sup> life of my L<sup>d</sup> Danby), is to be hang'd at y<sup>e</sup> Maypole in y<sup>e</sup> Strand.

Ther is sent 2<sup>ll</sup> of juniper seed and halfe a pound of very fresh and good bay seed, and I will take w<sup>t</sup> care I can to get very good barberries and w<sup>t</sup> you order further, as also y<sup>e</sup> pen-knife and canarie birds. Y<sup>e</sup> right canarie birds are very scarce; German birds very common. I lately saw some very pretty birds w<sup>ch</sup> were called Indian sirens, but were bastard birds bred out of a hen canary bird and a cocke goldfinch. They sing very well. The price 12 shillings a peice.

As soon as my Lord Mohun tryall is publish'd I will take care to send it you. Yesterday Young<sup>c</sup> wase tried, and by impudence far outbid even D<sup>r</sup> Oates. He had not a ranting impudence, but a most unparalleled sedate composed impudence, and pretends to be as great a martyr for his zeale for y<sup>e</sup> preservation of y<sup>e</sup> present governm<sup>t</sup> as Oates did for his for y<sup>e</sup> protestant religion. The jury without stirring from y<sup>e</sup> barre found him guilty; but he will not be sentenc'd till y<sup>e</sup> last day of y<sup>e</sup> terme. Doe you desire his tryal when it comes out?

Dr. Burnt hath a new mortification befallen him. Very smart and ingenious reflexions are come out upon his History of y<sup>e</sup> Reformation ;<sup>a</sup> y<sup>e</sup> price 2<sup>s</sup> 6<sup>d</sup>, tho but a thinne 8<sup>o</sup> booke.

A knavish wagge writ a lemma on his Pastoral Letter and sent it him :

Parve, nec invideo ; sine me, liber, ibis in ignem ;
Hei mihi, quod domino non licet ire tuo !

Here is set forth a very curious draught of a first rate frigate done by Philipps, but soe well y<sup>t</sup> it is said he wase not of his owne invention able to doe it, but stole it from a designe done by one Dammer who is said to be a great artist.

D<sup>r</sup> Burnt, and S<sup>r</sup> William Temple's reply to Le Cross,<sup>a</sup> by w<sup>ch</sup> he hath much more injur'd his fame then y<sup>e</sup> coxcomb Le Cross cou'd ever have done. And tho he sath D<sup>r</sup> Freeman publish'd his memoires wthout his consent or privy, yet in his gibberish and fanfaron stile he is pleased to complement him wth y<sup>e</sup> title of Reverend Prelate, and some thinke he had much better have passed over y<sup>e</sup> misfortunes and disorders of his family then to have proclaimed y<sup>m</sup> by mentioning y<sup>m</sup>, nor doe y<sup>e</sup> friends of y<sup>e</sup> noble Marquisse,<sup>b</sup> y<sup>e</sup> L<sup>d</sup> Rochester, and others on whom he hath reflected, thinke he hath lessened, but rather encreased, y<sup>e</sup> offence he gave by y<sup>e</sup> slight apology he hath made. This evening, my L<sup>d</sup>, about 7 of y<sup>e</sup> clocke, his sacred Majesty returned backe thro y<sup>e</sup> city wth as great silence as y<sup>e</sup> Grand Seignior marches thro any city in his territories. As soon as y<sup>e</sup> windes are more obedient then of late they have been, he returnes to Harwich. The Lord Lansdowne,<sup>b</sup> when y<sup>e</sup> parl<sup>t</sup> wase sitting, moved K[ing] W[illiam] for 6000<sup>l</sup>, due to him on account of his salary unpay'd whilst Envoye Extraordinaire in Spain from King James. He wase answered y<sup>t</sup> noe monies had been, or cou'd be, expected to be pay'd on y<sup>t</sup> account; to w<sup>ch</sup> his Lo<sup>pps</sup> replied y<sup>t</sup> severall personns had since y<sup>e</sup> Revolution received monies on y<sup>e</sup> like account, and amonst others instanc'd in y<sup>e</sup> Marquiss d'Albeville.<sup>c</sup> But he wase told y<sup>t</sup> wase to enable him to pay y<sup>e</sup> debts he owed to y<sup>e</sup> poore people in Holland. I never write news, because I kno yo<sup>r</sup> Lord<sup>p</sup> allways has it from better hands. But we are all in great paine about the Turkey fleet still, and the more because the Tholoon fleet is joyn'd Destre. But I shall not forget a storie my L<sup>d</sup> Cuttes tolde me, 3 days agoe, of the Duke of Brandenburg just goeing to fight against 60 thousand wth 50 thousand, and all just readie, a great officer comes in mightie haste, tolde him he fear'd it impossible to succeed in such a place, and askt w<sup>t</sup> he should doe. His answer was, in as great haste: "Goe on, go on; you must allways leave something for God Allmightie to doe." Soe they went on, and kill'd 10 thousand upon the place and routed the whole army. I am sure we have a great deale for God Allmightie to doe for us. At this rate I wish yo<sup>r</sup> Lord<sup>sp</sup> will not feare letters from,

resign up his office as Secretary; w<sup>ch</sup> my L<sup>d</sup> declared he wou'd not doe, for he had serv'd y<sup>e</sup> King faithfully and done nothing but what he cou'd justify. S<sup>r</sup> J. Trenchard then told him y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> King had sent by him his commands to his Lo<sup>pps</sup> to deliver to him y<sup>e</sup> signet. My L<sup>d</sup> reply'd y<sup>e</sup> King might require him to deliver up y<sup>e</sup> signet and he wou'd doe it, but wou'd not send it by anybody, but deliver it to his Ma<sup>ty</sup> wth his own hand; and accordingly he carryed it to Kensington, and ther delivered it up himself.<sup>a</sup> It is reported y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> signet wase offred to my L<sup>d</sup> Shrewsbury, but he declined it, as did S<sup>r</sup> John Lowther, tho what ground ther is for any such report I cannot assert.<sup>b</sup> But M<sup>r</sup> Russel is declared sole admirall to command y<sup>e</sup> fleet y<sup>e</sup> next summer; and Rook, Killigrew, Delaval, and Shovel turned out. I cou'd wish my despised information, for w<sup>ch</sup> I wase soe knabb'd, had been groundless.

The members of parl<sup>t</sup> met this day, and after y<sup>e</sup> speech y<sup>e</sup> House of Commons adjourn'd till next Monday, and then are to consider y<sup>e</sup> speech, the substance of w<sup>ch</sup> wase to express a regret for y<sup>e</sup> disadvantages y<sup>e</sup> armies received this yeare at land and y<sup>e</sup> great miscarriages befell y<sup>e</sup> navies at sea; that y<sup>e</sup> defeat at land wase solely occasioned by y<sup>e</sup> French far outnumbering y<sup>e</sup> confederates in all places; and, for y<sup>e</sup> miscarriages at sea, his Ma<sup>ty</sup> declared, as he highly resented it, soe he wou'd take care to punish all persons who had not done their duty, and that y<sup>e</sup> sea affaires shou'd be better managed for y<sup>e</sup> time to come. And, as y<sup>e</sup> confederates had resolved to encrease their forces both by land and sea y<sup>e</sup> next yeare, he recommended the members of y<sup>e</sup> House of Commons to take care speedily to supply him wth effectual supplies. This I heare is y<sup>e</sup> substance of y<sup>e</sup> speech, w<sup>ch</sup> by y<sup>e</sup> next I shall send you printed.

SIR CHARLES LYTTTELTON.

I heare y<sup>t</sup>, when Mr Secre: Trencher came to L<sup>d</sup> N. for y<sup>e</sup> seales, he told him, wth y<sup>e</sup> usuall complim<sup>t</sup>, that he was sorry to come of y<sup>e</sup> message, w<sup>ch</sup> was, that his Mat<sup>ie</sup>, understanding he was willing and desirous to deliver y<sup>e</sup> seales, had sent him for y<sup>m</sup>. My L<sup>d</sup> replied: "Not I, before God; [I] am not willing;" and he beleaved he was mistaken in his message, that he had told y<sup>e</sup> King y<sup>e</sup> contrary, yet, if y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>s</sup> commanded them, he w<sup>d</sup> wate on him wth em, for he rec<sup>d</sup> em from his hands and so w<sup>d</sup> render em. The Secretary told him y<sup>t</sup> he did indeed mistake his message, and y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> King commanded em. So my L<sup>d</sup> went wth em.

The H. of Com<sup>s</sup> were very hot yesterday. Paul Foley layd open y<sup>e</sup> greivances very naked; was seconded by S<sup>r</sup> Tho: Clergies and Titus, and there were very severe reflections; but, at length, they voted to support y<sup>e</sup> gov<sup>mt</sup> and to examine y<sup>e</sup> miscarriages at sea on Wednesday, and have ordred y<sup>e</sup> Com<sup>rs</sup> of Adm<sup>ty</sup> to bring in all theyr orders to y<sup>e</sup> Admiralls and y<sup>e</sup> Admiralls to attend. A<sup>d</sup> Russell, I heard, moved that a present credit might be given to supply y<sup>e</sup> Navey, and it was said that (by S<sup>r</sup> Phillip Musgrave) there was a sufficient summe given to pay y<sup>e</sup> fleet to Jan:, and that there was a proclamation that y<sup>e</sup> fleet sh<sup>d</sup> not be p<sup>d</sup> of till March; so he supposed there was money for it in bank. This morning the House made an order to bring in y<sup>e</sup> Trienniall Bill ag<sup>n</sup>, and I heard y<sup>t</sup> it will be brought in againe into y<sup>e</sup> Lords House; but I think it was moved or ordred in y<sup>e</sup> Com<sup>s</sup> House to be a Bienniall Bill. I cant tell if I expresse it well, but that there be a new parlim<sup>t</sup> chosen every 2 yeare.

We have little news, only y<sup>t</sup> last Sunday morning y<sup>e</sup> Lord Mordaunt<sup>a</sup> had intimation by mine Here Benting that he wase dismissed from all his commandes and publick employments. The common discourse is y<sup>t</sup> his disgrace proceeded from his bringing in y<sup>e</sup> bill for a triennial parliament.

This day is observed in our quarters wth illuminations and other rejoycings, suitable to y<sup>e</sup> solemnity thereof.<sup>b</sup> The Princess Anne her son<sup>c</sup> came to Berkeley House wth a guard of young youths about 10 or 12 yeares of age, all armed and clothed alike, marching rank and file wth their captain, l<sup>t</sup>, and ensign, and y<sup>e</sup> insignia belli, w<sup>ch</sup> how nere it approaches to high treason, not being commissioned by y<sup>e</sup> King, y<sup>e</sup> judges (if they please) may determine.<sup>d</sup>

The Sussex, a new 3rd rate shippe, in w<sup>ch</sup> S<sup>r</sup> Francis Wheeler went admiral, wth all y<sup>e</sup> men except 2 moores were lost. S<sup>r</sup> Francis his body wase afterwards found cast ashore.

April 10, [16]94.

All our neighbourhood hereabouts are in great lamentation for y<sup>e</sup> death of Wilson, by some called Beau Wilson, by others Wonder Wilson, who wase yesterday morning killed in a duel by one Laws, a Scotchman. M<sup>r</sup> Wilson, when he came last out of y<sup>e</sup> country, brought up his sister wth him and tooke lodgings for her in Berkley street, where lodged a gentlewoman who pretended to great devotion and much frequented y<sup>e</sup> churches, and therby recommended herself to M<sup>is</sup> Wilson, who tooke notice to her brother how happy she was to be lodged in y<sup>e</sup> same house wth soe religious a person; of w<sup>ch</sup> M<sup>r</sup> Wilson making mention to some of his acquaintance, they informed him y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> pretended devot wase a wench kept by one Laws, w<sup>ch</sup> as soon as M<sup>r</sup> Wilson knew, he presently removed his sister to her aunts house, y<sup>e</sup> Lady Ash at Twitnam; and publickly taking notice of y<sup>e</sup> occasion, Laws, instigated by his wench, came last Saturday night and challenged Wilson, who, having long lay'n under y<sup>e</sup> imputation of being a coward, desired one of his acquaintance to be his second, declaring y<sup>t</sup>, to save his reputation, he must and wou'd fight. And, accordingly, yesterday morning he took a hackney coach and met about 11 of y<sup>e</sup> clocke in y<sup>e</sup> morning wth Laws in Southampton Square. And it is generally reported y<sup>t</sup> Laws gave Wilson his mortal wound before he had drawn his sword; and y<sup>e</sup> wound w<sup>ch</sup> wase in his breast had so large an orifice y<sup>t</sup> many thinke it wase made wth a bayonett. Wilson instantly dropt down dead, and Laws, who was making his escape in a hackney coach, was pursued by y<sup>e</sup> boys who were playing in y<sup>e</sup> Square and seized, and is now in Newgate. It is reported y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> morning before he fought he made his will, and just as he was going to fight he tooke out of his pocket about 50 guineas and gave y<sup>m</sup> to his friend wth him; and if he was killed he told him he should keep y<sup>m</sup> as a legacy withall, giving him y<sup>e</sup> key of his escritoire; and engaged him to promis him, if he then dyed, to take out all y<sup>e</sup> papers he shou'd find, in y<sup>e</sup> pre-

M<sup>r</sup> Wilson lived very generously and payed very punctually all persons he had any dealing wth, and is generally very well spoken of and much lamented. But how he was enabled to live at such a rate as he did is as great a mystery as ever.<sup>a</sup> have little news stirring. Ther is much discourse about y<sup>e</sup> tryalls of y<sup>e</sup> prisoners of state, who were lately brought up out of Lancashire and Cheshire and returned back again ther to be tryed. They were sent down in great parade, the gentleman porter and gentle-[man] gaoler of y<sup>e</sup> Tower attending them, and two wardours on each prisoner. The old decrepid Lord Mollineux,<sup>a</sup> who [is] 86 yeares of age and very infirme, is, wth y<sup>e</sup> rest of y<sup>e</sup> Roman Catholicicks, to be tryed at Manchester, in Lancashire. S<sup>r</sup> Thomas Stanley<sup>b</sup> and M<sup>r</sup> Legh of Lime,<sup>c</sup> our kinsman, are to be tryed at Chester. The chief evidence ag<sup>t</sup> them is one Lunt, who was coachman to my L<sup>d</sup> Carington, and, y<sup>e</sup> last session a bill of felony for having two wives being found ag<sup>t</sup> him, he was not long since by a warrant from y<sup>e</sup> Lord Mayor taken up, but bailed out, Aron Smith and one Culliford entring into a recognisance of a hundred pounds each for his appearance at y<sup>e</sup> Old Baily y<sup>e</sup> first day of this present session. But he never appeared. His recognisance is forfeited, and a bench warrant granted to seize him wherever found. But, he being now on their Ma<sup>ties</sup> service, it is to be presumed noe person will be soe audacious as to execute y<sup>e</sup> warrant on him, either in Cheshire or Lancashire, whither he is gone to give evidence ag<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> state prisoners, especially when it is known y<sup>t</sup> very lately nere twenty personns, who talking of his having two wives and mentioning some other such like transgressions of his, were taken up by messengers upon warrants for conspiring ag<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> lives and reputation of their Ma<sup>ties</sup> evidencers. Y<sup>e</sup> 31 of Dec., [1694].

The sad confirmation last nights letters brought me of the death of my most deare mistress, the Queen,<sup>a</sup> gives me so just an affliction that I am but little thoughtfull of my neerest concerns. The want of coach horses has, since my Lords going, hinderd me from waiting of y<sup>r</sup> Losp., and the news this last week of her illness from sending to know how you did. God has been pleased to shorten her days as a reward of her sufferings, w<sup>ch</sup> in this world were not slight, w<sup>ch</sup>, wth the goodness of her owne nature, had formed in her so great a degree of vertu, it might truely be sayd the world was not worthy of her. A poore lamentation is all the gratitude that can be payd her now for that favor so undeservedly she bestowed on me, is all that now can be returned by, my Lord, excesively ungratefull to that incompareable Princess, to be unconcerned that she is gone; and yet more ungratefull to God, to be insensible of those many blessings he still continues to me. I cannot express myself better upon this sad occasion then as the Dean of Pauls has already done: We must be dumb and not open our mouths, because God did it. I have obeyed y<sup>r</sup> Losp. commands to the two Lady Marys, who give you their humble service and hope I shall return from London so soon, they may wth me waitt of you. I should have been very glad to have waited of you as I went up, but my coachman tells tis much the worse way, and, I confess, upon this occasion I am desirous to have as few delays as I can in that performance of my poore remaining dutty to my deare mistress. confessed he was good even to a vice in a prince. What may be a virtue in a private person may be a vice in a publick magistrate. Meekness in some personns is a desirable and admirable quality; but old Eli's meekness brought down a heavy judgment from Heaven upon him. The sylogisme, p. 35, is not true in form, but y<sup>e</sup> sence in w<sup>ch</sup> alone it can be understood is very rationall. The religion of y<sup>e</sup> papists is rebellion. But y<sup>e</sup> religion of y<sup>e</sup> papists is a branch of y<sup>e</sup> Christian religion. Therefore a branch of y<sup>e</sup> Christian is rebellion. W<sup>ch</sup> I think is very false doctrine; for, tho both papists and protestants have turned religion into rebellion, they have therby departed from Christian principles, w<sup>ch</sup> can never favour rebellion. It cannot be supposed y<sup>e</sup> Ab<sup>p</sup> cou'd say and meane y<sup>e</sup> religion of y<sup>e</sup> papists to be more then a branch of y<sup>e</sup> Christian religion.

This day y<sup>e</sup> Princess Anne of Denmarke had a guard sent to doe duty, as formerly, at her doore; and it is expected y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> L<sup>d</sup> Churchill and his lady will be advanced, as in favour, soe to a higher degree. He was very zealous for passing y<sup>e</sup> Treason Bill; but last Tuesday he absented himself from y<sup>e</sup> committy, wher it was caryed by 7 votes that y<sup>e</sup> Treason Bill shou'd not commence till 1698. My Lord Nottingham hath made himself very popular by arguing soe zealously for Treason Bill. I am

The post served me just as it did y<sup>r</sup> Losp., for last night I received both y<sup>rs</sup> of the 30 of Jan: and that of the second of this moneth. Heneage<sup>a</sup> is so well, he plays about his room, and to morrow is to take phisick. I have endeavoured all I can that Essex should have them; and she herself has tryed if the small pox is to be catched, for the second day they were come out of her brother she gott into his room and kissed him, yet hitherto she keeps well.

I do not yet know when I shall leave this twone. Whenever I do, twill be wth less reluctancy then ever I did in my life. There is so slow a progress made in ordering the dismal ceremony of the Queens funeral, that I cant ges when it will be finishd. I was told this day that the heralds had yet a quarter of their work to do; and I fear, when there work is over, there will come severall things betwixts that and the Abby. The King sent yesterday for all the Queens chief officers, and, upon seeing of them, fell into a great passion. He told them the Queen had recommended all her family to his care, w<sup>thout</sup> w<sup>ch</sup> tho he should not have been forgetfull of them, yet he had now another tye upon him to take care of them. I belive this was part of what he found written in the Queens desk. I do not yet hear of anny other thing mentioned, but I suppose this was not all.

I find it begins to be doubted wether the Princess be wth child. A little time will resolve it. The Parliment setts very late every day, but what they do is so much above my understanding, I cant pretend to give an account of it; so this time will trouble y<sup>r</sup> Losp no more wth y<sup>r</sup> most obedient, duttyful daughter,

MY LORD,

The slow preparations for the Queens funeral, and the uncertainty when it will be finished, not only keps me in twone but makes me unable to gues when I shall come out. The Queens great bed-chamber is furnishing, and at last bed and all to be black velvet, w<sup>ch</sup> is not I belive the first time some of it has been used; and the top of the bed is a painted escutcheone, w<sup>ch</sup> we are told for cost is painted upon silver tapy. I confess I see no difference, but in the arms, from those that hang upon houses. The King went one Thursday to Richmond, and comes againe this evening. It is sayed the Duke of Shrewsbury is to be Master of the Horse, and S<sup>r</sup> William Trumball Secretary. To day was like to be a busy day in the House of Commons upon the Leather. How it has gone I doe not know.

THE COUNTESS OF NOTTINGHAM.

MY LORD,

Y<sup>e</sup> 21 of March, [1695].

I fear my Lady found it a wearisome day when she went to Exton, and they very much unprovided for her. I left them no cooke but a little boy, w<sup>ch</sup> I doubt could perform but ill to entertain company. M<sup>r</sup> Isaac, the dancing master, tells me he hears y<sup>r</sup> Losp. had a mind to have a master to teach my sisters. Their is a German who he recommends for a sober man and very capable of teaching. His price will be three pound a moneth for each child, and for my little brother Will he will into the bargain teach him to walk and make a legg, and expects to have his charges born downe and up againe. Wither y<sup>r</sup> Losp. has any such intention I know not; but, if you approve of this, if you please to lett me know y<sup>r</sup> pleasure, I will tell it M<sup>r</sup> Isaac.

S<sup>r</sup> John Walter is going to be married to my Lady Stoel,<sup>a</sup> w<sup>ch</sup> will be very happy for him. With my humble deuttty and thanks to my Lady, I will end from y<sup>r</sup> most obedient, duttyfull daughter,<sup>b</sup>

A. NOTTINGHAM.

April 6, [16]95.

In my last I told y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>pp</sup><sup>e</sup> y<sup>t</sup> my L<sup>d</sup> Hallifax was so ill, it was apprehended y<sup>t</sup> he could not live till my letter came to you; w<sup>ch</sup>

<sup>b</sup> It is worth noticing, as an instance of what in the present day would be thought restraint between parent and child, that Lady Nottingham first began the subscription to this letter with the word "affectionate," which, however, she erased in favour of the formal "obedient, duttyfull."

apprehension proved very ominous, for he dyed yesterday at six of ye clock in y<sup>e</sup> evening. And I shall now give you a very true account of y<sup>e</sup> manner of his illness and ye occasion of death.

He had had, for severall yeares last past, a rupture; but wou'd never be prevailed on to weare a truss. This day sen-night he was soe well in health and last Sunday that he declared he had not been better for severall years. At supper on Sunday night he eat very plentifully of a roasted pullet, w<sup>ch</sup> his lady thought not to be roasted enouf, and desired him not to eat of it, but cou'd not prevail, he declaring he lik'd it very well, and having a good appetite and digestion it wou'd not hurt him. But in y<sup>e</sup> night he was taken very ill and vomitted much, and y<sup>e</sup> next morning tooke a vomit w<sup>ch</sup>, when it worked, forced the cut [i. e. gut] out through his rupture. For 2 or 3 days before he had had noe stoole, and the gut being filled with hard excrement, all his physitians and chirurgions cou'd doe cou'd not reduce it, but it gangreend; w<sup>ch</sup> occasioned his death. The present Lord Hallifax<sup>a</sup> came to him but a houre before he dyed, at what time he was speechless and, it was thought, knew noe body. But as soon as my Lord Elan come to y<sup>e</sup> bedside, tho he cou'd not speake, he reach'd out his arms and embrac'd him. Dr Birch<sup>b</sup> attended on him as a divine in his sickness, and last Thursday gave him y<sup>e</sup> sacrament, w<sup>ch</sup> he received very devoutly, and wth great Christian piety expressed his resignation to y<sup>e</sup> will of Heaven. He hath given order to be buried privately at Westminster.

SIR CHARLES LYTTTELTON.

London, Ap<sup>l</sup> 6th, 1695.

I came now from my L<sup>d</sup> Weymouth who was going to my young L<sup>d</sup> Hallifax. His father died last night about six a clock. He says his gut was gangrened where he had the rupture, w<sup>ch</sup> wth y<sup>e</sup> violence of his vomits swell'd exceedingly. He died with great humility and submission, and desired to receive y<sup>e</sup> sacram<sup>t</sup>, which D<sup>r</sup> Birch gave him and was sent for by him. He was speechlesse when my L<sup>d</sup> Elan came to him, but he knew and embraced him.

D<sup>r</sup> Busby of Westminster died last night too; and I heard an od story, that y<sup>e</sup> people in y<sup>e</sup> street, when he was expiring, saw flashes and sparks of fire come out of his window, w<sup>ch</sup> made them run into y<sup>e</sup> house to put it out, but when they were there saw none, nor did they of y<sup>e</sup> house.

April 11, [16]95.

For thes 2 last nights a great mob have been up in Holborn and Drury Lane, and let out betwixt 2 and 300 prisoners out of two marshalls' houses, where criminall soldiers and press-men were kept; and they gutted y<sup>e</sup> houses (as they call it) and burnt all y<sup>e</sup> furniture they found in them, nay, even y<sup>e</sup> doores and window frames. The souldiers who came to disperse them fired amongst them, kill'd 5 or six personns and wounded severall others.

Of late severall very eminent clergymen have here departed this life, as D<sup>r</sup> Busby, D<sup>r</sup> Scot,<sup>a</sup> D<sup>r</sup> Dove,<sup>b</sup> M<sup>r</sup> Kettlewell,<sup>c</sup> and M<sup>r</sup> Wharton.<sup>d</sup> The last, who had been very long sicke of a consumption, y<sup>e</sup> night before he dyed, had compiled together as many miscellaneous originall papers of Archb<sup>p</sup> Laud as are sufficient to make a second volume, and they are now in the press; and, as soon as they are printed, Achb<sup>p</sup> Parkers Antiquitates Ecclesiæ Britannicæ wth severall additions therto, made by Archb<sup>p</sup> Parker himself and his secretary Joseline who compiled them, and many very considerable things added by y<sup>e</sup> late most pious and learned Archb<sup>p</sup> Sancroft, will be put to y<sup>e</sup> press; for w<sup>ch</sup> intent Archb<sup>p</sup> Sancroft on his death bed gave them to M<sup>r</sup> Wharton.<sup>e</sup>

JOHN VERNEY.<sup>a</sup>

MY LORD,

Apr 26, [16]95.

Our thoughts are all so full of the transactions of this day that I cannot forbear letting your Lordship have part of them. The Committees of both Houses have sate very close in examining those that were concerned in distributing the money of the East India Comp<sup>y</sup>. Great art has been used to baffle their enquiry, and very great sums of money are yet not accounted for; but, so far as they have gon, the accusation has fallen upon the D[uke] of Leeds, the late Speaker,<sup>b</sup> Mr Harry Guy, Mr Attorney Gen:<sup>c</sup>, and some others. The Duke, by his own desire, was heard today in the House of Commons; but, as soon as he was withdrawn, an impeachment against him was voted, no body speaking in his behalfe. Mr Wharton carried it upp to the Lords. The sum was 5000 guineas which was received by Mr Bates,<sup>d</sup> by whom this matter, after great examination, was discovered. The D[uke] did upon his honour declare in the House last weeke, when he spoke against the bill, that he was not at all concerned in this matter, and does still today assert his innocency; but yet the circumstances of the story are hard uppon him. The money was payd back to the goldsmith, last Tuesday, from whom it was received.

My Lord Nottingham has great right don to his honour by everybody, that his vertue set him out of the reach of these temptations, hee being the only person yet named where their applications were unsuccessful. I have not heard what more is don in this matter, the two houses being yet sitting.

Your Lordship will easily imagine what distraction this matter causes, and therefore I need not give you any farther trouble to

SIR EDMUND KING.

MY LORD,

Feb. 25th, 1698.

Tho it's impossible but you must have heard of the great mercie of God in discovering a barbourous and villainous plott lay'd to assassinate King William, yet, we being hear full of it and in the midst of search and enquirie after those y<sup>t</sup> were to act it, I cannot but acquaint yo<sup>r</sup> Lord<sup>p</sup> w<sup>t</sup> is generally known by the confession of some of those 15 y<sup>t</sup> are taken. It's to long to tel all we hear. It was intended to be done on Tuesday last at Richmond, wher the King had appointed to be, but had some intimation of it (he kept it close); and ther was 40 batalions readie at and near Callice with tr[ans]port ships and [men of] warr to cruyse [about] and land as [many a]s they had . . . . . But [he] disappo[inted them] . . . . .

. . . . .<sup>a</sup> as he cam[e fr]om St James chapp[el] to return to Kensington between the gate y<sup>t</sup> com's out of St. James Park and Hyde Parke Gate. But he, haveing 3 or 4 letters successivlie sent him y<sup>t</sup> did agree in the matter intended, and a particular won from Holland, from the Duke of Wirtimburg, he was convinct, and took care to send and seiz 9 or 10 of them in theire bedds, at 2 or 3 a clock in the morning, Sunday last, and double all the guards, by 4 or 5 at a time, without beating any drumms or making any doe; and forbore coming to St James, as was expected. But imediatly early calld a counsell, and at night a counsell of war and the Admiraltie, and sent away Admiral Russell in the night and my Lord Barkley another way (and my L<sup>d</sup> Rumney<sup>a</sup> to Dover etc.), wth necessarie orders to the fleet, and went Monday morning to the Parliament house. The rest I leav to the inclos'd prints to inform yo<sup>r</sup> Lord<sup>p</sup> as you will see. The Dutch were informd of it, and have sent us 19 men of war into the Downes, and we have 25 redy to joine em, and the D. of Wirt[imburg] is sending 10000 men. Besid's I hear y<sup>e</sup> K. has sent for 12000 [men] from Flanders and ordered . . . . .

However, Ile say: "Blessed, blessed be God! they did not." You cannot imagine how this has renewd the affections of the generallite of the people to this King. The D. of Barwick is said to be in towne, as youl see by the proclamation. I finde some names I am sorrie for amongst em.

The votes of yesterday are not yet out.

JOHN VERNEY.

MY LORD,

March 5: [16]9th.

I believe you are very much alarumed in the country at the noise of this plot. The conspirators against the King's life will be tried the next weeke. 'Tis said by every body that the evidence against them is full and unquestionable. Mr. George Porter<sup>b</sup> is one of those that confesses the King owes the discovery of the French preparations to invade us chiefly to the Duke of Wirtemberg. 20000 foot and 6000 horse were the forces designed, and about 26 men of war to cover the descent. Admirall Russell is now endeavouring to burn those small ships which ly at Calais. Our fleet is now so great that it is impossible for them to proceed in their attempt, and they will have great difficulty to secure those ships that ly out of Dunkirk; so that we look upon their design as intirly disapointed, and have reason to rejoice at it, because it would have made England the seat of the war, and what confusion and ruine would have attended that is easy to guess.

This matter has produced two Associations little differing from one another. I was present at the debates in both Houses. In ours it was passed and opposed with more heat and fier I ever saw there before, and the next day refused to be signed by 95, who, each of them, generally declard that they did not refuse it for what was contained in it, but for the manner it was obtruded upon them, which they sayd was unparliamentary; and, when they expressed themselves without doors, they termed it a trick.

In your Lordship's House the debates were regular and very fine, and as those who stumbled at the word Rightfull gained their point in having it explained to be According to law, so they admitted the words added by my Lord Rivers<sup>a</sup> concerning the pretended Prince of Wales. When they came to the division, it was very particular; for my L<sup>d</sup> Nottingham, my Lord Thanet and others, who have since refused to sign, divided with my L<sup>ds</sup> Monmouth, Tankerville, &c. who pressed it. They were Not Content; but the Contents carried it by a great majority. It has been refused their I think by 16.

Our Association I find will be sent and recommended in all countys and boroughs; and I find the world here inclined to judge of affection, or disaffection, to this government by its reception.

I beg your Lordship's pardon for this long letter.

I am your Lordship's obedient servant,

JOHN VERNEY.

SIR CHARLES LYTTTELTON.

MY LORD,

Monday, March 16th, 1696.

I had 2 messengers came hither on Saturday, and they brought the constable with em to search for me by a warrant from y<sup>e</sup> Council, upon suspicion of high treason, and to bring me before them to be examined. They are just at y<sup>e</sup> hall doore. After he had shewd me his warrant, he told me he had order to be civill to me, and so, if I w<sup>d</sup> give him my word and honour to meet him at London, he w<sup>d</sup> take his leave on me; for y<sup>t</sup> he must return to Hereford, where he left a prisoner that he had committed there to goale and who he must take more charge of and go wth himself to London. But, after, he resolved to come back hither, or his deputy y<sup>t</sup> was wth him, and go wth me to London, for feare I might be stopt on y<sup>e</sup> roade, there being such strict enquiry of all y<sup>t</sup> passe. He was doubtfull if I might not be taken into [fresh] custody, and so, after they d[ined], he left me, and I am not to expect y<sup>m</sup> or one of em again till y<sup>e</sup> later end of this weeke; and I find they are in no hast of my going to town, it may be that I may continue y<sup>e</sup> longer in his hand to encrease his fees. I wish y<sup>r</sup> L<sup>p</sup> may continue y<sup>r</sup> retirement wth more quiet in these evill times, w<sup>ch</sup> God amend.

Hagley, March 9th [16]94.

I told you but yesterday y<sup>t</sup> I w<sup>d</sup> let you know how y<sup>e</sup> commissioners dealt w<sup>t</sup> us in our taxes, and last night the assessors came to let me know they had made severall exceptions, but most particularly in my concerns; for they wou<sup>d</sup> not be satisfied but that they sh<sup>d</sup> charg<sup>e</sup> me 2<sup>ble</sup> as a reputed papist, tho' they assured them I went constantly to church, and that I had bid em say, if they were asked, I had taken y<sup>e</sup> oath and Test, as I really did and must, or I could not have bin so long Gov<sup>r</sup> of Sherenesse in y<sup>e</sup> present Gov<sup>mt</sup>. Yet this it seemes was not sufficient, and I must be charged 2<sup>ble</sup>, w<sup>ch</sup> I suppose they have no power to impose on me; for y<sup>e</sup> Act says all papists or reputed, not having taken y<sup>e</sup> oaths, is to pay 2<sup>ble</sup>, unlesse they shall &c. So I have this day writt to them myself, to assure y<sup>m</sup> I have taken y<sup>e</sup> oath, and, if they require it for theyr further satisfaction, I will send for a certificate from y<sup>e</sup> record in y<sup>e</sup> Court of Chancery, where I was sworn and signed the role; but, if this will not do, I shall advise if I may not insist on it, and, if they do destraine, whether I may stand the triall. For I know 'tis done to affront me and to pick a thank by a pragmatick shopkeeper, and a broken one as they say among em. I suppose, having really taken y<sup>e</sup> oath allready, my insisting on it now will not be construed in law for refusing it, and so consequently bring me under a conviction.

Notwithstanding y<sup>e</sup> dearness of paper, y<sup>e</sup> paper warre goes on betwixt D<sup>r</sup> Stillingfleet and M<sup>r</sup> Lock. Y<sup>e</sup> D<sup>r</sup>, in his excellent book ag<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> Socinians, had attak'd M<sup>r</sup> Lock, who wth great acuteness and seemingly very complimentall did very sharply reply to y<sup>e</sup> Doctor, who hath very severly retorted againe upon M<sup>r</sup> Lock.<sup>a</sup> And D<sup>r</sup> Sherlock in a late printed sermon hath made warre wth y<sup>e</sup> philosophers, in w<sup>ch</sup> he pretends philosophy is very prejudiciall to faith. I cou'd wish M<sup>r</sup> Lock and D<sup>r</sup> Stillingfleet were reconciled, of w<sup>ch</sup> I feare ther is noe probability; and y<sup>t</sup> M<sup>r</sup> Lock wou'd undertake Sherlock, w<sup>ch</sup> if he did he wou'd handle him as sharply, tho not soe roughly, as D<sup>r</sup> South did ;<sup>b</sup> for Lock is a very ingenious, acute, and gentle writer.

The History of China in y<sup>e</sup> originall French is much preferable to y<sup>e</sup> English translation. I have discoursed wth Dampier. He is a blunt fellow, but of better understanding then wou'd be expected from one of his education. He is a very good navigator, kept his journal exactly, and set down every day what he thought remarkable; but, you must imagine, had assistance in dressing up his history,<sup>a</sup> in w<sup>ch</sup> are many mistakes in naming of places. Y<sup>e</sup> Isle of Vash, as y<sup>e</sup> French call it, and y<sup>e</sup> Spaniards Vacca, from y<sup>e</sup> great encrease of cows ther, he calls it Ash; and he mistakes y<sup>e</sup> names of many other places and y<sup>e</sup> descriptions of plants. He is wonderfully out in y<sup>e</sup> account he gives of cochinel and achiot or roucon, w<sup>ch</sup> he sath is made of y<sup>e</sup> leaves of y<sup>e</sup> flower; wheras it is made of y<sup>e</sup> seed.

As I was writing, my Lord, to you last Thursday, I was soe taken wth my griping paines I was forced to give of very abruptly, for w<sup>ch</sup> I beg y<sup>r</sup> pardon and shall now give you y<sup>e</sup> accompt I then intended about Ringrose his relation of Sharps voyage into y<sup>e</sup> South Sea, w<sup>ch</sup> is called y<sup>e</sup> 2<sup>d</sup> part of y<sup>e</sup> History of y<sup>e</sup> Buccaneers. About y<sup>e</sup> yeare 1680 ther came out a history of y<sup>e</sup> Buccaneers, printed in Flanders, in Spanish, pretended to be a translation from Dutch writ by one Esquemeling, a Dutch buccaneer, w<sup>ch</sup> Crokee a bookseller got translated into English and printed, in w<sup>ch</sup> S<sup>r</sup> Henry Morgan was represented as a very barbarous pyrate. S<sup>r</sup> Harry brought his action ag<sup>t</sup> Crooke, proved all he did was by virtue of a commission of y<sup>e</sup> Governor of Jamaica and y<sup>e</sup> Kings authority, and recovered 300<sup>l</sup> or 400<sup>l</sup> damage from Crooke, about y<sup>t</sup> some I am sure Crooke himself told me. After w<sup>ch</sup>, his History of y<sup>e</sup> Buccaneers was looked upon as fabulous and sold for noe more then wast paper. But S<sup>r</sup> Harry Morgan being return'd to Jamaica, and Sharp and his comrades their voyage into y<sup>e</sup> South Sea making a great noise, and Sharps journal being printed and selling very well, Crooke agrees wth Ringrose, who had been a buccaneer wth Sharp, for a relation he had of y<sup>e</sup> exploits done in y<sup>e</sup> South Sea by Sharp and other pyratts; and, to make some recompense to S<sup>r</sup> Henry Morgan, he was mentioned very honorably, and Ringrose his booke stiled y<sup>e</sup> 2<sup>d</sup> part of y<sup>e</sup> History of Buccaneers, and is generally sold wth y<sup>e</sup> first, they being both printed in 4<sup>to</sup>.<sup>a</sup>

S<sup>r</sup> John Narborough's Voyage was about five yeares agoe, as I thinke, printed for Smith and Watford, in an 8<sup>o</sup> volume,<sup>c</sup> together wth Martins voyage to Spitsbergen<sup>d</sup> and other voyages, w<sup>ch</sup> have sold very well, as also another booke of voyages by Ran Wolfius and others.

The second volume contains "The Dangerous Voyage and Bold Attempts of Captain Bartholomew Sharp and others" from the journal of Basil Ringrose ; 1685.

Dampier is sensible of many mistakes he hath made, and in his next volume he will correct them; w<sup>ch</sup> he very honestly wou'd not doe in y<sup>e</sup> 2<sup>d</sup> ed. of his first volume, for y<sup>t</sup> wou'd have been to y<sup>e</sup> prejudice of all who had bought his first volume.

Unless it be some disputations of our fiery zealots, playes, news-pamphlets, and pulpit pamphlets, y<sup>e</sup> parliam<sup>t</sup> tax on paper and printing and all forreign bookes will prevent y<sup>e</sup> sale of all others. Severall foreign bookes are come over, but most, if not all, will be returned back.

humour is stopp'd, wth an intollerable headach. I was this afternoon to see y<sup>e</sup> few best plants yet remaining of y<sup>e</sup> noble collection of plants at Hampton very well painted by one Bugdan, a Hungarian and excellent painter of fruits and flowers. I saw a cereus or sort of prickly Indian figg wth a most wonderfull flower, differing from all y<sup>e</sup> flowers I ever saw; the lilium superbum in flower, as also y<sup>e</sup> corall tree, and one of y<sup>e</sup> small sorts of aloes wth a scarlet flower, and severall very fine tulipps, painted from tulipps growing in my Lord Dovers<sup>a</sup> garden at his house in y<sup>e</sup> country, for whom Bugdan hath painted severall very large and curious pictures of flowers for my Lords house here in town. But having lately, wth old M<sup>r</sup> Evelyn, seen Montague House, I doe not think my Lord of Dovers pictures of flowers comparable to y<sup>e</sup> flower pictures in Montague House.

Having given you an account of some pictures I have seen, I shall tell you of a very large rattle-snake I saw alive, lately brought over from Virginia. It is very curiously couloured and strip'd. We look'd on him till, by rattling his tayle much louder then I cou'd have imagined he cou'd, he gave notice y<sup>t</sup> he was angry and ready to fly at us; to prevent w<sup>ch</sup>, y<sup>e</sup> lid of y<sup>e</sup> chest he was in was clap'd down.

M<sup>r</sup> Evelyn is putting forth a book in fol<sup>o</sup> of English medallions,<sup>b</sup> in imitation of y<sup>e</sup> Histoire Metallique du Holland. But he can heare of soe few y<sup>t</sup>, instead of medailles wth y<sup>e</sup> inscriptions and reverses, he is forced to make up his booke wth severall discourses relating to y<sup>t</sup> subject. His book hath been long in y<sup>e</sup> press and is not yet ready to come out, y<sup>e</sup> medailles being not yet all engraven. If y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>pp<sup>e</sup></sup> hath any or cou'd procure any relating to any eminent English person or any action done in England, if y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>pp<sup>e</sup></sup> wou'd please either to send a design of y<sup>e</sup> meddail or lend y<sup>e</sup> meddail to be here designed, it shou'd carefully be restored wth thanks. I have this day, my Lord, been at Hampton Court, wth D<sup>r</sup> Udall, to see all y<sup>e</sup> fine plants ther, but, tho I saw severall very curious ones, yet y<sup>e</sup> pleasure was much abated by y<sup>e</sup> regret for y<sup>e</sup> loss of a great many very choice plantes, w<sup>ch</sup> I saw when I was formerly ther. But y<sup>e</sup> sight best pleased me was y<sup>e</sup> cartoons by Raphael, w<sup>ch</sup> are far beyond all y<sup>e</sup> paintings I ever saw. They are brought from y<sup>e</sup> Tower and hung up ther, and are copying for my Lord Sunderland. I am invited to goe, this day senight, to D<sup>r</sup> Udalls at Enfeild, and, if y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>pp</sup>e wou'd be pleased to favour me wth a peice of venison to present him wth, it wou'd be a very great favour, and I shou'd not doubt to procure you, next spring, some choice plants from him. Of all y<sup>e</sup> hardy plants I saw at Hampton Court, I saw none I liked better then y<sup>e</sup> Swedish juniper they had from D<sup>r</sup> Udall. I hope y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>pps</sup> thrive wth you. I am &c.

My wife, my Lord, did last Thursday return her most humble thanks to y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>pp</sup> and my Lady Hatton for y<sup>r</sup> obliging present of excellent venison, and gave an account how she had dispos'd of it.

To hers I now, my Lord, add mine, being prevented writing then by going to see y<sup>e</sup> fireworkes, for w<sup>ch</sup> ther had been soe long and costly preparations.<sup>a</sup> I was very desirous to see y<sup>m</sup>, but, not knowing whither conveniently to goe, I had given over all thoughts of seeing them, and my curiosity was quite abated; but y<sup>e</sup> day they were to be I had 3 or 4 tickets sent me, and by my wifes earnest persuasion I went; but my curiosity was as little satisfyed as any person's ther. It is generally reported y<sup>e</sup> expence for them amounted to 12000<sup>l</sup>. Ther was in S<sup>t</sup> James's Square a sort of triumphall arch built, but very ill design'd, on y<sup>e</sup> topp of w<sup>ch</sup> were 4 figures made of wood and painted, one at each corner, and, had ther not been y<sup>e</sup> names of w<sup>t</sup> they were design'd for, noe person cou'd have guess'd what they were meant for. Peace out of a cornucopeia flung out rockets of wild fire. Conduct had a death's head in one of her hands. Concord held in a dish a flaming heart; and Valour had by it a ravenous lyon. The whole was an emblem. Ther was a great unnecessary expence of treasure; severall killed; a vast number of crackers; and all ended in smoake and stinke. S<sup>r</sup> Martin Beckman hath got y<sup>e</sup> curses of a great many, y<sup>e</sup> praises of noebody. Ther was only a vast number of chambers shot of, and a prodigious number of serpents and large rockets, the cases and sticks of w<sup>ch</sup> were soe large that, when they fell down, killed assuredly 3 or 4 persons, hurted many more. One falling upon y<sup>e</sup> Lord Hallifaxes his house broke quite thro y<sup>e</sup> rooffe, but hurt noebody. M<sup>r</sup> Portman and his lady were ther. My Lord denyed noe person who asked leave to come into his house.

Jan. 4, [16]97.

I must, my Lord, write much breifer than I intended, for I have been hindred by a dreadfull sight, seeing all Whitehall reduced by fire to ashes. About five of y<sup>e</sup> [clocke] this evening, we saw from my house a great fire towards Westminster. Upon enquiry I heard it was in y<sup>e</sup> L<sup>d</sup> Portlands lodgings, in Whitehall. I went immediately to endeavour to speake wth my Lady Denbigh, to know if I cou'd doe her any service. I cou'd not be let into Whitehall nor Scotland Yard, but I sent to my Lady. She sent me word she was not afraid and gave me thanks; but, as I return'd, I call'd in at one of y<sup>e</sup> houses where my house stood in y<sup>e</sup> Pell Mell, and from thence, before ten of y<sup>e</sup> clocke, I saw all y<sup>e</sup> maine body of y<sup>e</sup> house consumed; all y<sup>e</sup> buildings on y<sup>e</sup> water side, from y<sup>e</sup> further end southward of y<sup>e</sup> stone gallery to y<sup>e</sup> kitchens inclusive. I wish y<sup>e</sup> Banqueting House and any part of Scotland Yard may be saved, for it now burns more feirce than ever, and y<sup>e</sup> blowing up of houses is done soe unskilfully and violently, it doth great hurt but noe good. God divert his judgments!

MY LORD,

Jan. 6, 1697.

Last Tuesday I acquainted you y<sup>t</sup> Whitehall was then in flames, w<sup>ch</sup> burnt till six of y<sup>e</sup> clocke next morning, and by y<sup>t</sup> time had consumed or ruined all y<sup>e</sup> buildings except y<sup>e</sup> Banqueting House; y<sup>e</sup> row of buildings from thence eastward towards y<sup>e</sup> street; the Jewell-House and Scotland Yards; the Signet Office, and all y<sup>e</sup> buildings from thence in a direct line towards y<sup>e</sup> water; the butteryes, sellers, kitchings, ye Comptrolers lodgings, y<sup>e</sup> chappel, guard chamber, y<sup>e</sup> King and Queens lodgings; all y<sup>e</sup> whole pile of buildings towards

y<sup>e</sup> water side, from y<sup>t</sup> w<sup>ch</sup> was M<sup>r</sup> Clement his lodgings to y<sup>e</sup> end of y<sup>e</sup> stone gallery; and from thence, all y<sup>e</sup> long gallery, y<sup>e</sup> Secretary's office, y<sup>e</sup> Treasury office, y<sup>e</sup> Councill chamber, y<sup>e</sup> Queens chappel, are all burnt downe. Only some few lodgings nere y<sup>e</sup> stone gallery, y<sup>t</sup> w<sup>ch</sup> was Bab Mayes lodgings towards y<sup>e</sup> water side, and y<sup>e</sup> next lodgings to y<sup>t</sup>, and some part of lodgings w<sup>ch</sup> I was told was y<sup>e</sup> Lord Portlands, are left standing, but terribly schattered. The house in Scotland yard built by S<sup>r</sup> Alexander Fraasier, and M<sup>r</sup> Windham's next to it, are standing but much schattered. All y<sup>e</sup> rest of y<sup>e</sup> buildings in both Scotland Yards are not at all prejudiced. Next y<sup>e</sup> water side ther are noe buildings standing, except from S<sup>r</sup> Stephen Fox his house to y<sup>e</sup> L<sup>d</sup> Godolphins lodgings, inclusive, w<sup>ch</sup> are not prejudiced. The L<sup>d</sup> Montague lodgings are burnt down, but his fine pictures and furniture saved. The fire broke out betwixt 3 and 4 of y<sup>e</sup> clocke in a garret in y<sup>e</sup> lodgings, as some say, of Collonel Stanley, next to y<sup>e</sup> Lord Portland, occasioned by a Dutch serving maide laying a sack of charcoale soe nere y<sup>e</sup> fire it all tooke fire, and y<sup>e</sup> servants hoped to quench it without any help from others, but it increas'd soe violently it occasion'd y<sup>e</sup> ruine of y<sup>e</sup> whole pallace. All persons were intent to save their goods, and all y<sup>e</sup> gates were lock'd up to prevent y<sup>e</sup> mob coming in; and, when y<sup>e</sup> houses were blown up, most of w<sup>ch</sup> were blown up very high, y<sup>e</sup> timber and rafters lay bare, and ther wanted hands to remove y<sup>m</sup>, soe y<sup>t</sup>, instead of stopping ye fire, it help'd to increase it. All y<sup>e</sup> buildings westward, joyning to y<sup>e</sup> Banqueting House, by being blown up about six of y<sup>e</sup> clocke on Wednesday morning, saved that w<sup>ch</sup> remaines, as monument wher the Blessed Martyr, K<sup>s</sup> Charles y<sup>e</sup> First, was murdered by his rebellious subjects. God divert his just judgments!

The great discourse in town is about y<sup>e</sup> L<sup>d</sup> Ch. Justice Holt.<sup>a</sup> The Lords summoned him to appear before y<sup>e</sup> committee of Lords, who were to enquire why y<sup>e</sup> judges refused to try y<sup>e</sup> Lord Banbury soe called. When y<sup>e</sup> Ch. Justice appear'd, he told y<sup>e</sup> Lords upon their enquiry y<sup>t</sup> what he had done was in open court, acting as Ch. J[ustice] of England, and therefore was not responsible to any but y<sup>e</sup> King. The Lords then asked him whither he might not answer what they asked of him. He told them: "Yes, if he pleased, but he did not thinke fit then to doe it." This did soe incense y<sup>e</sup> Lords, that they talked of nothing but sending him to y<sup>e</sup> Tower, but at last they cooled upon it and summoned him to appeare againe last Thursday; and then he told them that he never desired y<sup>e</sup> office of Ch. J[ustice], but it was forced upon him, and, whenever y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>s</sup> required him to surrender his place, he wou'd willingly doe it, but whilst he kept his place he wou'd support y<sup>e</sup> dignity of it; and y<sup>t</sup> he was not responsible to any but y<sup>e</sup> K<sup>s</sup> for what he did as Ch. J[ustice]; if y<sup>e</sup> Lords thought he had given a wrong judgm<sup>t</sup>, they might order a writ of error to be brought, and, if they thought fit, reverse y<sup>e</sup> judgment. The Lords have not as yet made any determination, but y<sup>e</sup> beginning of next weeke are to declare againe this concern.

I am afraid y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>pp</sup><sup>e</sup> doth not soe much value y<sup>e</sup> horn'd cattle I sent down. I assure y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>pp</sup><sup>e</sup> tho y<sup>e</sup> horn'd family be of great antiquity; few can shew soe ancient and authentic a pedigree. For by y<sup>e</sup> records in y<sup>e</sup> archives of Thomas, Earle of Arundel, Earle Marshall of England, it doth appeare they were descended from those of Illyricum, w<sup>ch</sup> Pliny sath Fulvius Hirpinus kept in his snayle parke. I had but 10 of y<sup>m</sup> given me; and a virtuoso of Oxford beg'd 4 of them, y<sup>t</sup> noe species of curious horns might be wanting ther. And I doe seriously assure y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>pp</sup><sup>e</sup> y<sup>t</sup>, for snayle water or anything els for w<sup>ch</sup> snayles are to be used, this sort of snayle (w<sup>ch</sup> y<sup>e</sup> writers of Naturall History call Pomatia) are much preferable; y<sup>e</sup> flesh is much whiter and tenderer than y<sup>t</sup> of any other snayles. And shou'd they prejudice y<sup>r</sup> forrest trees, I will (for feare M<sup>r</sup> Horton shou'd forget to tell y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>pp</sup><sup>e</sup> w<sup>t</sup> I desired him,) acquaint you wth a very curious and usefull secret a gentleman of my acquaintance hath practis'd to raise oake trees, w<sup>ch</sup> grow very fast, and he transplants y<sup>m</sup> as frequently and wth as little prejudice as any other trees are removed. He sows acorns, and the 2<sup>d</sup> spring of their growth he cutts of y<sup>e</sup> tappe-root, w<sup>ch</sup> making but a small wound, it quickly heales up, and y<sup>e</sup> remayning root shootes out a great many fibres w<sup>ch</sup> bush out; and after 2 or 3 years y<sup>e</sup> trees may be, in y<sup>e</sup> season, transplanted w<sup>thout</sup> any prejudice. I have seen severall soe ordered, w<sup>ch</sup> far outgrew those w<sup>ch</sup> had never been removed, nay few other species of trees grew faster in y<sup>t</sup> ground.

How far y<sup>e</sup> translators have perform'd their parts I know not, for I but just cast my eye on y<sup>e</sup> bookes; but they have added a great many publick notes of Amelot la Houssay,<sup>a</sup> who is an author for whom I have not half y<sup>e</sup> veneration he hath for himself, and his notes seem to me very triviall and trifling.

I was told this afternoon that y<sup>e</sup> Duke of Bolton, as he is stiled, dyed last Fryday. But, tho one be gone, it is to be hoped y<sup>e</sup> number of y<sup>e</sup> people in England will quickly be made up, for y<sup>e</sup> Dutchess of Grafton, who never was thought to be barren, is lately marryed to a young handsome gentleman, one M<sup>r</sup> Hanmer,<sup>b</sup> y<sup>e</sup> nephew to S<sup>r</sup> John. His mother was S<sup>r</sup> Henry North's sister, and inherits all his estate; and it is said he hath a very considerable paternall estate.

Last Saterday night my Lord Warwick, Lord Mohun, Captaine Coote, one Docwray, with one Tully and French, were all six at Lockett's drinking till late at night, and then quarelling they called for six chaires, went into Leicester Square, ther fought; and Captain Coot was mortally wounded, being stabb'd in at y<sup>e</sup> neck on y<sup>e</sup> left side into y<sup>e</sup> body, and, before he cou'd be carryed to a surgeons, he dyed in y<sup>e</sup> chair.

I herein enclose for y<sup>r</sup> perusall a letter from Benhaddn. He was y<sup>e</sup> Morocco ambassador here. I must confess I was much pleased to see y<sup>e</sup> orientall people still retain y<sup>e</sup> same style they ever had, since we had any account of them. I borrow'd it, promising not to make it common; and therefore I must desire your Lo<sup>pps</sup> not to suffer any copy to be taken of it, unless you desire one for your own use. It was brought over by one who was cast away on y<sup>e</sup> coast of Barbary, being bound for Teneriff, about 8 years since. He sath ther are about 250 English, Scotch, and Irish slaves in Barbary. The Emperor of Morocco was forced to buy his peace wth y<sup>e</sup> Algerians at a deare rate; and I verily beleieve Ben Haddn, who, as Isaac Voscious called him, is versutus nebulo, writ this letter, not so much out of a desire of pad-naggs and deep-mouthed hounds, and which he by mistake calls mastiffs, as out of a desire y<sup>t</sup> an ambassador might be sent thither to [treat for] y<sup>e</sup> redemption of slaves. The Arabic word w<sup>ch</sup> is translated, mightily, mightily, mightily, when spoke in praise, signifies mighty well, when in dispraise, mighty ill, and in this letter shou'd have been translated mighty well. I only borrowed y<sup>e</sup> letter, and therefore must desire it to be return'd me.

I am intirely of y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>pps</sup> opinion it is no matter to us w<sup>ch</sup> of y<sup>e</sup> candidates prevails. Their very standing seems to me to be as it was a declaration, Quantum dabit; and I thinke we need not be at y<sup>e</sup> expence to make new purchases. Yesterday y<sup>e</sup> Disbanding Bill pass'd y<sup>e</sup> House of Commons. About 11 of y<sup>e</sup> clock in y<sup>e</sup> morning, S<sup>r</sup> Christopher Musgrave moved y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> Bill being then engross'd and lying on y<sup>e</sup> table might be pass'd. S<sup>r</sup> Richard Onslow seconded him; after w<sup>ch</sup> severall of y<sup>e</sup> great officers of y<sup>e</sup> Court opposed y<sup>e</sup> Bill, and were not by any personns replyd to, till three country gentlemen, S<sup>r</sup> Will. To whom S<sup>r</sup> John Packington replyd: that, if His Majestys title was precarious, some danger might be apprehended; but, his Majesty being declared to be y<sup>e</sup> lawfull and rightfull King, he cou'd not apprehend any danger, and he did not know any person but y<sup>e</sup> Bishoppe of Salisbury who had ever question'd his tittle, but y<sup>e</sup> booke in w<sup>ch</sup> he did it had been burnt by order of y<sup>e</sup> House of Commons; but, for his part, he must declare he thought it below y<sup>e</sup> dignity of y<sup>e</sup> House only to burn y<sup>e</sup> pamphlett, but, if they had voted y<sup>e</sup> author to be hanged, he beleev'd y<sup>e</sup> whole nation wou'd have been pleased at it. At last y<sup>e</sup> House came to a division. Ther were 154 ag<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> Bill, 221 for it; so it pass'd by a great majority. S<sup>r</sup> Edw<sup>d</sup> Seymor spoke nothing, but voted for passing y<sup>e</sup> Bill.

I am very glad beech, w<sup>ch</sup> is my favorit tree, thrives so well wth you. It is y<sup>e</sup> Hortus Amstelodamensis,<sup>c</sup> most nobly printed, wth rare cutts of choice and Indian plants, w<sup>ch</sup> are so incomparably painted with water colours, noe painted plants exceed them. Truly I did not beleeeve it possible any printes cou'd be so well painted, nor cou'd they have been but that they are painted after originall paintings, and touched over after y<sup>e</sup> original plantes. It is a very costly booke. After a long and frequent sollicitation, M<sup>r</sup> Evelyn told me my Lord President<sup>a</sup> was so very desirous of my booke he wou'd give me what rate I wou'd aske for it. I told him I did not know how to put a just price on it, and I wou'd not an extravagant, but, since my Lord did so importunately desire it, I wou'd present it to him; and did so by M<sup>r</sup> Evelyn, who y<sup>e</sup> next day brought me from my L<sup>d</sup> Pembroke my fine herball, w<sup>ch</sup> hath drawn all y<sup>e</sup> virtuosos in town to see it. And, presently after, my Lord, having taken out of Dominicus Custos his workes what printes he wanted, y<sup>e</sup> remaining part wth like generosity he sent me back.

Yesterday an acquaintance of mine came to see me and did much divert me wth some stories he told of S<sup>r</sup> Francis Compton, y<sup>r</sup> old acquaintance, his fondness of his new virtuous and pious lady.<sup>b</sup> The day before, S<sup>r</sup> Francis came into company wher my friend was; he told them his lady was so very devout, she was every day severall hours in her closet at her prayers. And he having then seen her take up her bible and prayer booke and go into her closet, he was assur'd she wou'd be ther shut up for severall houres. In y<sup>e</sup> meane time he came abroad to divert himself wth taking a glasse of wine. Presently after w<sup>ch</sup>, my friend going to y<sup>e</sup> playhouse, he was fully convinc'd my Lady Compton did not make so long prayers as S<sup>r</sup> Francis reported, for he found her in a vizard and maske in ye 18<sup>d</sup> gallery.

I take it, my L<sup>d</sup>, as very great honour y<sup>t</sup> you will trouble y<sup>r</sup>self to write to me, but when I consider how weak y<sup>r</sup> eyes are I had rather be wthout y<sup>e</sup> happynys of y<sup>r</sup> Ld<sup>sp</sup>s letters then have you in y<sup>e</sup> lest hurt y<sup>r</sup> eyes. I was last night (wth Lady Longuevil<sup>a</sup> and Lady Arundel<sup>b</sup>) at y<sup>e</sup> Princess's, and Lady Long: was so kind to offer to carry me to y<sup>e</sup> Oppera to day wth her and Lady Portland<sup>c</sup>; but I was so unfortunate as to be engaged to go to Lady Denbighs<sup>d</sup> to see y<sup>e</sup> famous M<sup>rs</sup> Binges dance, or els I should have bin glad to have waited on Lady Long:, tho I had seen it before and think it very silly. M<sup>r</sup> Abel is to have a fine musicke meeting to morrow, and y<sup>e</sup> tickets are guineas a piece, w<sup>ch</sup> is a little to much for me to throw away; so I shall not be there, and I find so many y<sup>t</sup> can afford it better of my mind, y<sup>t</sup> I fancy, if he had had lower rates, he would have got more. They say here y<sup>t</sup> M<sup>rs</sup> Reves is to have my Lord Leicesters second son,<sup>e</sup> whom L<sup>d</sup> Romney<sup>f</sup> designes to make his heir. Tis to be hoped he will use her better then his B<sup>ro</sup> did her sister; for, as the town sayes, he beat her wthin a week after she was married, which I think should make this young lady afraid. I have so much buisness here y<sup>t</sup> I hope my Lady will excuse me till next post. I beg my duty to her, and I am, my L<sup>d</sup>, Y<sup>r</sup> Ld<sup>sp</sup> most obedient and dutyfull daughter, Tho I know, my Lord, you have every post a much better information of all proceedings in parl<sup>t</sup> than I can then send you, yet ther having lately been by accident so wonderfull a turn here, perhapps I may have heard some passages not unworthy of y<sup>r</sup> knowledg, w<sup>ch</sup> you have not, and therefore I shall adventure to relate them to you.

Some time since, y<sup>e</sup> E. of Pet<sup>b</sup> <sup>a</sup> brought into y<sup>e</sup> L<sup>d</sup>s House a very libellous booke, publish'd in defence of y<sup>e</sup> Scotts settlement at Darien, and pretended to be printed at Glasco;<sup>b</sup> and, at y<sup>e</sup> same time, moved y<sup>t</sup> ther might be a union betwixt Engl<sup>d</sup> and Scotland, for y<sup>e</sup> Scotts were under great hardships, were a warelik bold nation, and there was a young prince abroad who perhapps in this age, when it is so fashionable for princes to change their religion for a crown, might follow y<sup>t</sup> mode, and, if he turn'd Presbiterian, might not only be acceptable to y<sup>e</sup> Scotts but to y<sup>e</sup> English too, as annother prince, tho educated by a bishop but a Scott. When y<sup>e</sup> aforementioned booke, w<sup>ch</sup> I doubt not but you may have seen, was taken notice of in y<sup>e</sup> H. of C., during y<sup>e</sup> debate M<sup>r</sup> M.<sup>c</sup> said ther was a lord who, in another place, had moved for an union betwixt y<sup>e</sup> two nations; but certainly he did it only in jest, for in truth it was only a jest. At w<sup>ch</sup> it is said y<sup>e</sup> L<sup>d</sup> Peterb. was so incens'd y<sup>t</sup> he sent a challenge to M<sup>r</sup> M. And, during y<sup>e</sup> debate in y<sup>e</sup> H. of C., S<sup>r</sup> Edw<sup>d</sup> Sey[mour] said it was not now a proper time, he thought, to debate y<sup>e</sup> union betwixt Engl<sup>d</sup> and Scotl<sup>d</sup>, but, if ever it shou'd be debated, he shou'd oppose it for this reason: that a woman being proposed to a neighbour of his in y<sup>e</sup> country for a wife, he said he wou'd never marry her, for she was a beggar, and whoever married a beggar cou'd only exspect a louse for her portion; w<sup>ch</sup> hath most wonderfully exasperated all y<sup>e</sup> Scotchmen here in town, who daily cast aspersions on y<sup>t</sup> knight, telling old storyes how roughly y<sup>e</sup> present Duke Hamilton did formerly affront and abuse him. Before I have done speaking of Scottishmen, I must acquaint you y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> aforementioned bishoppe, differing in opinion wth B<sup>p</sup> Floyd of Worcester, in y<sup>e</sup> heat of y<sup>e</sup> debate told him he was an old dotard, intoxicated wth tobacco and Revelations, as B<sup>p</sup> Floyd did himself lately declare.

No body doth more detest than I doe printing bookes wth fictitious cutts, such as are in Knocks his History of y<sup>e</sup> Island of Ceylon<sup>a</sup> and many such other bookes. But yet I shou'd be very well pleased to see Caesars Commentaries, illustrated (as they designe at Oxford) wth cutts well designed of all y<sup>e</sup> Roman millitary instruments, their habitts, their manner of encamping, their warlike engines, their manner of sacrificising, and things of this nature, w<sup>ch</sup> may be much better described by cutts design'd from Antiquies than is possible to be done by wordes.<sup>b</sup> And was it possible to have true designs rightly adapted to Vitruvius his architecture, I verily beleeeve your Lo<sup>pp</sup><sup>e</sup> wou'd prefer an edition of Vitruvius adorned wth such cutts before y<sup>e</sup> commentaries of Philander, Leo Albertus, Perrault, or Huzout.

Propose to any of our English booksellers proper and usefull cutts to illustrate any author they are printing, they cannot be prevailed wth to have them engraven. But, on y<sup>e</sup> contrary, give them any fictitious or fabulous design, they will be very ready to have th<sup>m</sup> printed. They printed Wafers voyage<sup>e</sup> wth fictitious cutts very readily; but Dampier wou'd have given them a true draught of Guam prowes, w<sup>ch</sup> are y<sup>e</sup> swiftest vessels in y<sup>e</sup> world, but they wou'd

It is reported y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> B<sup>p</sup> of Durham<sup>b</sup> is marryed to one M<sup>is</sup> Offley. Her uncle was groome-porter, her father a parson, and her brother is a parson. She had 2 sisters marryed to parsonns; one of y<sup>m</sup> (who is dead) to y<sup>e</sup> Deane of Carlisle.<sup>c</sup> Whilst his wife was alive and at Durham, where he is Prebendary, she and her mother (it is thought), by their interest wth y<sup>e</sup> B<sup>p</sup>, prevail'd wth him to marry his last lady, and, ever sinc, y<sup>e</sup> mother hath improv'd her interest so as to pervayle wth y<sup>e</sup> B<sup>p</sup> to marry her daughter, who is about 40 yeares of age, not handsome, and hath been long known by y<sup>e</sup> name of Duck-leggs. MY LORD,

The enclosed treatys<sup>a</sup> being all that are as yett concluded, I take the liberty to send them as to a friend whose judgment I much depend upon. I desire you will take noe notice of the having seen them, and when I have the honour of seeing you, which I hope may be before the parl. meets, I shall let you know my reasons for what is done as well as acquaint you with all that shall be done. For I call God to witnesse that I have had noe thoughts but what might be for the good of England. If the wind proves fair, the King will embarke in 4 or 5 days. I shall continue here till the end of this month. I am with much truth and respect,

I think I have since seen what you tell me of M<sup>r</sup> Metwin's<sup>b</sup> letter. I think y<sup>e</sup> Portugall interest not much to be depended on either way, being obliged to follow y<sup>e</sup> successe of the Sp<sup>d</sup> and confederates; and y<sup>t</sup> of Cales will most concern them, except when it comes neerer em. I had a letter last post from S<sup>r</sup> J. Tal[mache] at Bath, of y<sup>e</sup> 12th, and, having made his court, he says he would return y<sup>t</sup> night to Laycock. He says he went to Bath from thence in y<sup>e</sup> stage coach, wherein were 3 women, 2 of which were set down at an inne in Cosham, w<sup>ch</sup> was but 2 miles from Laycock. One of em was, as much as she could, disguised, as w<sup>d</sup> not let him alight to help her out of y<sup>e</sup> coach. He suspected something extraordinary, and by her books of devotion, w<sup>ch</sup> she left in y<sup>e</sup> coach and sent her footman for with other things, w<sup>ch</sup> he looked in and perceived her religion and confirmed him in his guesse, it was my Lady Tirconnell<sup>a</sup> in her way to Ireland; and he says Lady Malborough went y<sup>t</sup> same day to see her and returned that night.

Some time since I gave to Mademoiselle Verron some garden seeds to be sent to y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>ppe</sup>; but she told me she cou'd not send them down till this day, when I doubt not but she hath. The like care I tooke to supply y<sup>r</sup> Lo<sup>ppe</sup> wth perry sugar and manna I have now taken to furnish you wth soape, for I have sent some seeds of y<sup>e</sup> soape tree from China. have been rais'd and thrive here. Ther are wth them some tee seed, but only for a curiosity to see them. They are not worth sowing, for they will not be rais'd here. But y<sup>e</sup> licer sativum will thrive well here, and y<sup>e</sup> mallowes in China. They prefer y<sup>e</sup> liches before any peases, and they eat y<sup>e</sup> mallowes for sallads. But I am inclinable to thinke our pease and sallads exceed them in goodness. The carob seeds are very fresh; I wish they can be rais'd in a pot set in a hot bed. It is a beautifull tree. Some say y<sup>e</sup> fruit is y<sup>e</sup> locust w<sup>ch</sup> S<sup>t</sup> John eat in y<sup>e</sup> wilderness, and therefore called S<sup>t</sup> Johns Bread; some say they were y<sup>e</sup> huskes which were given to y<sup>e</sup> swine, and w<sup>ch</sup> y<sup>e</sup> prodigal son desired.

Yesterday was generally observed here as a day of mourning, not of thanksgiving.<sup>a</sup> Severall sermons for K<sup>s</sup> William were preach'd in most churches; and, in our market, y<sup>e</sup> butchers shoppes were generally shut up, and few wou'd sell any meat, tho it was market day, they postponing their gaine to faction; from y<sup>e</sup> effects of w<sup>ch</sup>, good Lord, deliver us!
